Wheat Flow Starts Down Great Lakes

Ottawa, Aug. 13 (CP)—Making way for the new crop, the biggest movement of wheat down the Great Lakes in history is now in progress grain shipping figures indicated today.

Tit e ships along the Lower Lakes and St. Lawrence are being filled with wheat from terminal elevators with have room for the flow from the country elevators expected to set in with the new crop. Many cargoes are going to Buffalo and other United States ports.

Late today the official announcement of Canada's crop estimate will be made. It will likely be over 200,000,000 bushels compared with 182,000,000 last year. The carryover is bered on the wheat held in Canada at the end of the crop year, July 31.

Hitler Backing House Cleaning State Enemies

Berlin, Aug 13—(AP)—Chancellor Hitler, whose power to purge his Berchtesgaden home bred reports ominous for enemies of the current religious restrictions, today stood forth as the backer of the house-cleaning of Germany's Nazis.

Der Puhrer broke his self-imposed silence to assure his cheering adherents at Roenheim the Nazi party would smash its opponents while other leaders added to the disquiet of Jews with threats of future strictures upon them.

The Nan leader expressed the Reich's willingness to deal with its opponents in an address at the fifteenth anniversary celebration of the local party organization.

Never Made Peace Fight

"By fighting we conquered Germany," he said, "and by fighting we shall preserve it. We are standing up against us shall not deceive themselves about us. We have established from a fight, either, in the past or today. We shall remain there so they will forget to continue their opposition for the next 15 years."

The Chancellor assured his first public speech since his defense to the world on July 13 that Germany's armaments, retained from making a direct return to the peace time strife in Germany. He said there is no difficulty in labor against the entire German nation."

"If the hammer blows of fate should strike us," he continued, "they will only make us still harder. I am confidenced no power on earth can attack us any more. We want peace and cooperation work but whoever wants to disturb this peace discover we are no longer the people of pacifists but a people of he-men.

Wally Berger of Baffled Braves Wasting a Lot of Talent With A Team Far Down in Ruck

Leads League in Runs Driven in With Tall End Club

ONE GAME PLAYED

Pirates Defeat Reds And Move Closer to The Leaders

By ANDY CLARK
Associated Press Sports Writer

Playing with a hopelessly outclassed ball club hasn't dimmed the batting eye of Wally Berger or killed his spirit.

The big slugger of the baffled Braves is wasting a lot of fine talent with a team that is far in the mist it cannot see the shore. The Braves hold last place in the National League by 19 games.

Berger has collected 21 home runs, 22 doubles, and four triples and he leads the league in the number of runs driven in with 67. In a year, that is shot with feeble hitters, he stands out like Boston's Bunker Hill Monument.

Berger was batting a field day against Brooklyn Dodgers Sunday, totalling 13 bases in nine times at bat. Eleven of those bases came in the first game of the doubleheader, when he hit a homer with the bases crowded, a triple and two doubles. Yet the Braves lost both games.

Casey Stengel, the Dodger's pilot, sat in the dugout and mused out loud. He was thinking of the fellow who has hit more homers than all of the Brooklyn outfielders put together.

"A guy like that on this ball team," said Casey, "would make Mrs. Stengel's son very happy and the opponent's very sad. That's our big trouble. We haven't a fellow who can get up there in the pinches and hit one out of the lot."

Only One Game Played

But one game was played in the Major Leagues yesterday. Pittsburgh Pirates cut the Braves' run for bogey honors a bit, when they defeated the seventh place Cincinnati Reds 7-4.

The Pirates collected 14 hits from four Cincinnati hurlers as they copped the series, three games to two.

Pittsburgh hoped off to an early lead, scoring three runs in the first inning as Al Hollingsworth, rookie southpaw who lost a 1-0 decision to Bill Swift on Friday, took over from the hit barrage. Another rookie, Emmett Nelson, was sent in to face the fire and he did a good job until the seventh inning, when he was taken out for a pinch hitter. He had allowed but one run, scored in the second.

Don Brennan, the third pitcher to see action for the Reds, yielded two runs in the last half of the seventh and Benny Frey was on the mound for the Pirates but he was relieved by Ralph Birkofer after the fifth when the Reds scored three times.

ELMER DEAN IS THE ACE HURLER

House of David Team Arrives Early For Night Game

The bearded House of David baseball club of Benton Harbor, Mich., which plays at the Bellefville Fair Grounds tonight under floodlights, is not only the most colorful club in baseball and one of the most interesting, but it also is one of the most balanced clubs one can find anywhere.

Jimmy Doran is at first base, and he is one of Quinn's favorites. At second is Moon Mullins, who covers a world of territory. Ray Schreiber is the shortstop and Bill Scott the third baseman. Doran is the slugger of the club with Scott not a shade behind. Mullins and Schroeder are the clever keystone combination.

When the Davids play here they will present a hustling ball club of more than usual ability under the direction of a former great major league star and with a comedy-magic "pepper game" feature thrown in, all under the giant portable night lighting equipment carried by the club. Put it all together and you have one of the most attractive baseball shows ever put on anywhere. The team is now known as Elmer (Dopey) Dean, brother of Daisy and Daffy Dean, baseball stars.

Greyhound is Horse to Beat In Hambletonian

Goshen, N.Y., Aug. 13 (CP) — Greyhound, by name and by nature — a flash of equine lightning out of a grey sky—figured today as the horse to beat tomorrow in the classic Hambletonian trotting stakes.

As the harness racing circuit awaited this quaint little town of 7,000 souls for the heralding patrol, most of the talk and the betting centred on the grey speedster from W. E. J. Baker's stables at St. Charlemii.

A lot of support went to Tilly Tonus, a sleek, stout-hearted filly owned by Spencer, took the measure of Greyhound's sire, Guy Abbey, in this very race in 1928. Lawrence Hanover, long-galled colt from the La Salle stables of Chicago, also was highly regarded and not alone for the fact that H. M. Parshall, veteran reinsman who won with Lord Jim in '34 will be in Hanover's sulky.

Twelve to Start

A dozen of the finest standard bred horses of the country are expected to vie for the $33,000 purse. Extra seats have been built in Good Time Park and perhaps 40,000 will see the race—to the followers of trotters and pacers what the Kentucky Derby is to running horse fans.

It was said among hockies today, that Greyhound's odds may be down to 2 to 5, when Sep Palin drives the colt to the pole tomorrow for the first of the two out of three heats necessary to crown the king or the queen of the trotting horse racing.

Greyhound was pozed up as a 3 yearling by Palin for $1,000. Now $30,000 might take him, and again it might not. As a two-year-old Dauntless grey won seven of 10 starts and no defeat has marred his four starts this year. He has turned in a scorching mile of 2.02 1-4. Faster than any horse ever had to run to take the Hambletonian.

But when it comes to times, it is recalled Lawrence Hanover went a mile in 2.02 as a two-year-old.

AAJMAAS BEST IN FIRST GAME

Defeat Young Canadas 24-2, The Winners Simply Coasting

In a one-sided listless softball game the local Aajmaa's won the first game of the Senior City League finals, when they downed the Young Canadas by the score of 24 to 2 at Centennial Park last night. The winners scored in every inning except the fourth, and culminated a batting orgy with twelve big runs in the eighth inning.

The Aajmaas played errorless ball behind the seven hit pitching of Johnnie Bawden, while the Young Canadas gave Bunt Miller, their hurler, inadequate support as they kicked in with eight bad errors. Bawden worked easy as his team mates played stellar ball, striking out seven and walking one. Miller whiffed four and walked two. Extra base hits entered profusely into the contest when seven circuit blows were registered, six by the winners and one from Latchford's bat as the losing nine. In all the Aajmaas collected 12 extra base blows, Carman Cook, Aajmaa short fielder led the extra base hitters with three four base blows, at Hanna, John Bawden and Clarke, also collled the extra base hitters with base hits were quite frequent, but not a single three base safety was credited during the game that saw thirty-three hits registered by both clubs. The Young Canadas bagged two runs in the initial frame but failed to score in the subsequent frames. The second game of the city finals will be played this evening.

The line-ups—Aajmaas—St. Denis 1b; Tuttle cf; Bawden 2b; Cook ss; Kiser rf; Kibler 3b; Hanna and Clarke lf; Carey c and Bawden p.

Young Canadas—Palmer 2b; Wakefield, If; The Murray cf; Reid 3b; Murray c; Browne rf; Alexander cf; Robinson 1b; and c. Bunt Miller p.

LATTA BLANKS CANNIFTON 4-0

Winning Team To Meet Foxboro For the Championship

Playing airtight ball behind the excellent pitching of Ken Callaghan, Latta took the series from Cannifton last night.

Callaghan was in rare form allowing the Cannifton team only three safe hits and all of them being of scratch variety. His teammates also gave him excellent support only one error being chalked up for the entire game.

Marsh for Latta was the heavy hitter getting two two base hits being followed by C. Hall, I. Young and J. Gowe. Latta took the lead at the start, getting two runs in the first, one in the second and one in the third. Bush started for Cannifton but was replaced by A. Simpson, who did not allow any runs the balance of the game. Parks, for Latta, led in batting having six at first; A. Hall six third with three and an assist; Young catcher with three assists and one put out Callaghan with two put-outs and two assists and C. Hall with two put outs and two assists.

This concludes the semi-finals, the finals starting Wednesday at Foxboro.

"World Series Fever" Grips Baseball-Mad City of Detroit

Everyone Talks Baseball and Can't See How Team Can Lose

Detroit, Aug. 13—(AP)—"What's the score?" that question, shouted from office buildings, across the streets, from streetcars and from automobiles, reverberates over Detroit today, indicative of the intensity of excitement, that has gripped this baseball-mad city.

Everybody's talking baseball.

The topic of conversation is the chance Detroit Tigers have of winning another American League pennant. Last year Manager Mickey Cochrane and a clawing band of Bengals brought Detroit its first flag in a quarter of a century. This year, although World Series time still is many games away, "World Series Fever" has gripped the town in an epidemic which old timers say never was surpassed even when Hugo Jennings brought three flags to Detroit early in the century.

Radios blare out accounts of the game from almost every store front. Newsboys hawks in noisy, barely visible through shop windows covered by the "score by innings". Fans gather at their radio "spots" every afternoon—whether the Tigers are at home or not.

Detroit fans think the Tigers are "in". They enthusiastically point to the performance of pitchers Tommy Bridges, Alvin Crowder, Schoolboy Rowe, Eldon Auker, who have won 53 victories out of the last 86 games. The fans, gathering on street corners, contend Detroit's leading the League in batting and fielding; can't be stopped.

Perhaps the calmest person in Detroit is Mickey Cochrane himself.

"We've got a good, well-balanced club," he says. "We weren't lucky last year and we'll win again this year."

CURRENT SPORT

DAY BY DAY

Horse races, wrestling and boxing have all been held under floodlights in Belleville, but never in the history of this fair city has there been a baseball game played under artificial light as will be the case at the Exhibition Park tonight, when the famed House of David aggregation appear versus Perth and under an lights. A lot of publicity has been given nocturnal baseball during the past few years, but it remained to have Paul Crosley, owner of the Cincinnati Reds, to dispell all doubt from the minds of those in disfavor of night baseball, when he recently unveiled his new floodlighting system at Radland Field. Today night baseball is accepted as here to stay and the inception of this new fangled pastime in Belleville will doubtlessly see both grandstands filled to capacity, when the umps cry "play ball" here tonight. The novelty of baseball played under floodlights should be a creating considerable interest locally, aside from the appeal of the famed musical baseball clubs, one being the heralded House of David hewhiskered nine from Benton Harbour.

Tomorrow Skipper Feeney Mills leads his Stewart-Warners to Kingston, where the open finals in the series of the O.B.S.L. This series consists of two games here on Friday, at present the Radios are one-half game behind the second place Kingston club and as the club finishing in the second hole has the right to play a possible third game at home if necessary, well, there is some advantages in coming down directly behind the new league leading Peterborough club. The O.B.S.L. committee the second placed club has the right to play a possible third game and also retain the entire gate receipts, with the exception of $34.00 which would go to pay the expenses of the visiting club that is providing. Kingston and Belleville are in the league semi-finals, personally we believe the third placed club, whether it be Kingston or Belleville, is entitled is a little more consideration than the paltry sum of $34.00. It must be admitted there is some advantage in being awarded a possible third game at home deal, so why not give the third hole club an even break financially at least and elevate the sale to fifty or sixty dollars?

As the Radios enter into their final series in the league schedule the players are beginning to cast eager eyes upon their individual batting averages. It seems the boys are quite zealous to win the league at Billiard Parlor's Jubilee trophy, that cup donated to the best hitter on the local senior team by Jim and George. However, the inscription on the cup reads "for the season" which means that all play-off games will count in the batting average, Johnnie Kerr's recent batting splurge elevated him close to the .300 mark, his average being approximately .294 today. Alex Weir is batting around .280 while Dean Ford is third with an aggregate of .275. Both Weir and Kerr will have to hit over the .500 mark in their next two games in order to finish for the season in the coveted .300 class, however.

Not since B was built in 1926 has there been such a hot local Radiation Park been in such good condition. For the past month a ballet corps of men have been continuously working on the track, removing all stones grass and weeds and levelling the sole position as well as the outside lane. The track today is in fine shape fast with the result, that some keen racing should be seen at the Exhibition Park this year. Handicap racing will be featured at the fair on the last three days, when two high class races will be presented each day, including a special 3 year old each race in the H'd 4 day.

Bunny Morgenson in the Telegram comes to bat thusly: "After viewing games as Stratford, St. Thomas, Hamilton, Peterborough and Belleville to watch the 1935 edition of this writer that a Toronto team will not win the Onto tario title season. And for the reason that the senior boys throughout the O.B.A. are playing better ball. He also says, but just raving we think: "The formation of a league of their calibre in Southern Ontario may develop next spring.. with cities Stratford, Hamilton, St. Catharines, Peterborough and Belleville are ready for a new major league in that territory, activity." Mrs. Morgenson's little (?) boy slightly affected by the heat waves early summer, as he comes to bat each year about this time with some queer ideas in relationship to the formation of a new league in this section of the province. As for Belleville and the C.O.B.L. they are perfectly satisfied with their lot in the O.B.A.A. and what's more semi-pro ball would be about as useless in the Central district as it has proven in the Ottawa Valley. "No Bunny, we play a better brand of amateur ball and are quite satisfied with our lot, but thanks for the publicity just the same."

Joe Cather says—"No matter how thin you slice it—it's still a golf ball."

Clem Bowler's Aajmaas — made short work of the Young Canadas in the first game of the Senior City League finals at Central Park last night. Of course the 24 to 2 score does not actually relate the exact picture that was enacted, as the Young Canadas were into the pastime more strongly than the final score would indicate, but decidedly the better club won and on paper they should continue to overpower and the Young Canadas may yet upset the old dope bucket. For Johnny Bawden ceased through to an easily pitched victory his team mates played errorless ball and hit like fiends. On the other hand Bunt Miller was given lackadaisical support and his team mates failed miserably at the bat.

Joe McCarthy, manager of New York Yankees, and Joe Cronin, manager of Boston Red Sox yesterday were fined $100 a piece by William Harridge, President of the American League, for allowing "stalling" tactics in the New York-Boston game at Boston on Aug. 5th.

Applying the whitewash brush the Latta nine rubbed the Cannifton "gungarus" out of the South Hastings League picture in a third and final play-off game at Foxboro last eve. when the Lattas won 4 to 0. The winning nine now meet the Foxboro aggregation in the league finals, the winners taking the batting honors. Incidentally we hear that pouring out cost the Cannifton team a victory, as they had sufficient men left stranded on the base paths to eke out at least an even break.

Local baseball fans to take in the night baseball game at Kingston last evening, when the House of David defeated the Brockville Club of the St. Lawrence League, indicated that fully 6,000 fans jammed their way into the Kingston Fair Grounds to witness the night baseball. "You could clearly follow the flight of the ball at all times," stated one local fan today.

NEW LEADER IN INTERNATIONAL

Syracuse Chiefs Culminate Drive by Leading Loop

(By The Associated Press)

Syracuse Chiefs have taken command in the International League.

The Chiefs took advantage of the crippled Rochester Red Wings yesterday to land on the top spot but then they had to sit back and wait to see what Montreal, still with an opportunity to regain the peak, could do against the thumping boys from Baltimore.

Ray Pritz perhaps was thinking of how much the game meant for he blew up in the eighth inning, when the Orioles walloped him for four hits and as many runs. The Orioles won the game 5-3.

Irving Jeffries led the Orioles on a hit spree in which a total of 18 base blows were chalked up for the winners. He had four successive singles. The Royals collected nine but three Oriole twirlers, one of them a homer by Dugas with none on in the second. The retiremain champs were leading 5-2 until Pritz, perhaps feeling the pressure being responsible for his team holding the League lead, contributed to his downfall by handing out four walks in the eighth.

The Chiefs had taken the measure of the wings by the score of 11-4, getting nine hits and ten runs in the eighth inning.

Newark Bears defeated Toronto Maple Leafs in a night game 8-3 as Dick Walker and Dick Porter brought in all the Newark runs. Porter connected for four hits in four times at bat to drive in three and Walker got the other two on a double and an infield out.

Buffalo Bisons defeated Albany Senators 10-6 as Bill Harris, relieving fine baseball, turned in his 16th victory of the season. Dick Siebert, in addition to making three clever fielding plays drove in three runs with a triple, a double and a single. Carnegie also hit three extra base blows including his 32nd homer of the year.

MONTREAL SEES CANADIAN LADIES STRIKE OLYMPIC TRAIL

With the knowledge that results might have a direct bearing on personnel of the next Canadian Ladies Olympic team, feminine track and field stars gathered in Montreal for the annual championship meet. Heavy rain made the track soggy and records were mostly left intact, to at far side the winner. Corinne in that order.

Miss Pearl Barton, inset of Windsor, however broke the junior high jump mark when she raised the p.le al four feet eleven and one quarter inches. She later came back to take second place with a jump of four feet eleven and one quarter inches. Jessie Taylor of Ottawa in the next lane, was second. Below shows Adelaide Adams of Toronto winning the 80 metre junior hurdles in 12.9, 1-10 second faster than the senior distance run. Left to right are Adelaide Adams, Ruth Donavon Ottawa and Pat Lipsett, Ottawa. They finished

RICHARDSON BREAKS JUMP RECORD AT MEN'S TRACK MEET

Dusky-hued Sammy Richardson of Toronto stole the spot-light at the Canadian and field championships in Winnipeg when he cracked the Canadian broad-jump record in his third try after fouling the first two jumps. Here is Sammy, in the air as he reached the new mark. He jumped a distance of 24 feet 11 inches to top the former mark established on 22 feet 8 1-2 inches held by C. D. Bricker of Toronto. He also beat the open record set by Jesse Owens at 24 feet 7 5-8 inches. Right above Jack Wahlberg of Saskatoon leading Art Clarke of Toronto and H. R. Purvis in the 100 metre dash. Clarke won in 10.4 Wahlberg second in time of 10.6.

SINISTER SHADOW

by JOHN GOODWIN

As he disappeared, Sonia drew a deep quick breath of relief, and sighed at the little ash over the fireplace. Her eye had strayed that way several times during the interview, while the sergeant sat facing her; while the clock was just behind him. It was close on eleven. As she heard Howe's heavy boots passing out through the front entrance she crept through the hall and softly opened the door quietly and glanced out into the passage.

The main rooms of the Ring O'Bells were safe. The locals had dropped in for their morning pint; there were doubtless busy discussing the finding of Bannister Coote's body on the railroad. The small red-tipped son of Mr. Stubbings had spread the news. Here in the best passage-way everything was quiet.

There was a telephone in the dark little office at the end of the passage, behind the bar-parlor. Sonia had located it early in the morning. At this hour the office was unoccupied. She went in and closed the door.

Eleven o'clock. Brian had told her he would ring her at eleven; she dared not wait. She took the receiver down.

"Trunk call, London. Temple 760."

She did not need to look up the note he had given her; the number was written into her memory, for it had been with her all night. She waited, her nerves taut. Was he there? If he hadn't arrived—

After what seemed an age—it was barely a couple of minutes—the connection was made; she answered, and after another minute Brian's voice, thin and sharp with distance, came two hundred miles of wire.

"Sonia! That you? I've seen the Trustees, and there's a difficulty. It—"

She interrupted him.

"Brian, listen. Bannister has been found dead. The Police suspect . . . they've been here. They'll want to see you. I've told them what I know."

"Sonia—"

"Listen. I've told them all I know—that you left here at eleven, by the Derby road. Selby's missing, by the Derby road. Drop Sergeant Howe's in charge. Bring everything and come back. Brian, you must come back, and come quickly, Brian!"

There was a sharp click, and silence.

"Brian!"

She waited, her hand gripping the receiver tightly; hand gripping the receiver tightly; no answer save an occasional humming murmur till the distant, aloof voice of Central Exchange broke in.

"Three minutes up. Would an extension—"

"No!" said Sonia, and hung up.

She returned to the back parlor, and sitting down suddenly at the table, buried her face in her hands. Her temples were throbbing. Had she blundered? Brian's last words assured her that she had done the only thing possible. It was for her to accept or refuse it. If he saw a better way. What choice had he? She saw how deadly a case could be made against him. There was no murder, if that death could be traced to his action, she felt in her heart that he was no killer by intent. The case was very dark as yet—but that night. And she to judge him? She was not here to try nor judge the man she loved. It was unthinkable for her to betray him.

If the whole truth came out as she knew it, all the circumstances of the case, there would be absolutely no chance for him. That was the only thing sure.

Would he come back? He must come. Brian couldn't leave her to face this alone.

Again that fatal half hour in the railroad cutting rushed at her; and the face of Bannister at King's Bream . . . and the seven heavy eyes of Sergeant Howe, seeming another face as he questioned her.

CHAPTER XVII

Sergeant Howe turned in at the door of the Dun Cow. The Dun Cow was a trim black-timbered alehouse, of no very good repute, at the north end of Market Square, Street.

The landlady a small frowzy woman with rather furtive eyes, received Howe politely.

"Morning, Mrs. Flynn," he said, shepherding her into the empty bar. "Could I have a word with you, Mr. Brand. Where is he?"

"Mr. Brand," she replied, marking, "Why, is there any trouble sergeant?"

"Don't you trouble about trouble, except to keep out of it," said Howe, "Where's he?"

"I'm expecting him any minute."

"Are you indeed? When did you see him last?"

Mrs. Flynn wiped her hands anxiously on her apron.

"Yesterday, about seven. He's very quiet gent, Mr. Brand. He took half a loaf and a hunk of cheese with him, an 'a bottle, an' said he mightn't be in till late. Ain't seen him since . . . He might be," she added, as he was goin' to be out all night—but I didn't worry. He paid me a week ahead when he came day before yesterday; said he was due to join a ship next Monday, and he'd as soon stay at 'is else I'll house like mine as anywhere. He seemed to have plenty of money."

"Out all night, eh? Leave any of his things here?"

"Didn't have much luggage. All what he had is in his room."

"Take me there."

Mrs. Flynn seemed to like the order very little but she showed Howe into a small attic bedroom at the back. After a glance round he closed the door, shutting Mrs. Flynn out.

The bed had not been slept in. Sam Barber's worldly effects were scanty; he was a man who travelled light. There was a small gunny-bag made of sacpaulin which served him for a suitcase.

On the muslin-covered dressing table was a broken comb with a few grayish-black hairs sticking to it, a well-worn brush, a shaving brush and a nearly new metal case containing a cheap safety razor.

Howe's face lit up at the sight of the bright metal case. He took a clean handkerchief from his pocket, and handling the case with care, carried it to the window and held it up so that the sunlight slanted across it. It was a perilous thing for any man to own who had criminal tendencies and fingers pitted with shaving-soap; there were three or four well-defined prints on it.

"Ought to have taken that with him" said Howe, "if he'd any sense."

There was nothing in the bag but a spare pair of socks and a seaman's overall. Howe collected all the missing man's belongings and packed them in the bag, treating the razor-box with extreme care. With the bag over his arm he left the room and had a final word with Mrs. Flynn, who in a pitiable state of excitement was waiting in her parlor for enlightenment.

"Sergeant," is it true what they're sayin'—that somebody has done Mr. Coote in?" she quavered in a hushed whisper. "I'm askin' because if young Chalmers is master up at Kings Elm House—"

"Don't you worry about what's true and what isn't," returned Howe, turning a cold eye on her. "You go on 'ere, keepin' up the reputation of the Dun Cow. I'm taking charge of your lodger's baggage. If he comes back and asks for it, refer him to me. If he doesn't come back you're a week's rent to the good. By the way," he added pausing on his way out, "cookin' anything special about this Mr. Brand when he left you yesterday evening?"

"Like what, sergeant?"

"His boots. He left a pair of rope-soled deck shoes; I've put 'em in the bag here. Didn't go out in his socks, surely. What was he wearing?"

Mrs. Flynn looked blank and stupid, She was willing to talk questions, but to talk—

"Come across with it," said Sergeant quietly, "It'll do you no harm; perhaps some good later on. Had not he a pair of short plus boots?"

"He did," said Mrs. Flynn. "I remember now. He'd got them muddy the night before and I saw him cleanin' 'em in the yard, with a rag. I took them up stairs for him after."

"And naturally looked at the soles to see if they were clean as wouldn't leave any mud in the bedroom. Yes? Cross-ribbed soles had they, and three studs in the heel."

"That's right. You're a wonder, Sergeant! Yes; je ribbin' was nearly worn flat. An' he had a waterproof over his arm, because it looked like rain."

Seaman's clakin. A new 'un!"

"Old," said Mrs. Flynn. "It was hanging on his bedroom door the same mornin': I noticed it and a piece torn off at the back."

"You're a polecin' woman. You'll have a good job when Howe's dead. It shan't need to trouble you any more for the present."

He left the Dun Cow and turned into his own cottage, police headquarters for Derby's district. He arrived. P.C. Willet turned up to report the deposition of Bannister Coote's body at Norchester mortuary.

He told the inspector you'd shaped the case up," said Willet. "He's got the Permsby case on his hands; he'll be along with the chief later. I reckon he'll be already to the man that did this job."

"Ass!" said Howe.

"You were a bit previous Joe," he said. "But you leave me to handle this case. I've had a bit of a relevant case that ever happened on the Middle Border. Now, you've got your start on it, an' you'll be getting your report in. Let you and me go over it. See here . . ."

He handed the metal-shaving case to Willet, wrapped in cotton-wool that he took from the drawer of the dresser, and sitting at his desk, filled in a printed form.

"Pack these tight in the old cigar-box yonder, send by the up passenger express to the C.I.D. Records. You'll get it before night and if there's an answer it'll be through on the wire by morning. I want news of the bird that belonged to; it won't take any harm travelling."

He unhooked the 'phone.

"Inspector Fryth . . . yes, sir . . . sorry to bother you, but I'm in a case that ever happened on the Middle Border. Now, then, are you ready to start on it, sir? you'll be getting your report. If you can't make out the case here . . ."

He handed the metal-shaving case to Willet, wrapped in cotton-wool that he took from the drawer of the dresser, and sitting at his desk, filled in a printed form.

"Pack these tight in the old cigar-box yonder, send by the up passenger express to the C.I.D. Records. You'll get it before night and if there's an answer it'll be through on the wire by morning. I Report, Howe, King's Elm, 4 . . . thank you."

He hung up.

"Harry on, or. And —hustle that package off!"

Howe went on his bicycle, and in three minutes was back at the Ring O'Bells. He found Sonia sitting by the fire, staring into the glowing coals. She rose quickly as he came in.

"Well, you were right, Miss Nell," he said quietly. "Sam Barber's shipped. You're rather a way of being right, haven't you?"

"Good!" she exclaimed. "Then until you get him—"

"Just so," said Howe grimly. "But meantime I'm not jettin' any grass grow under my boots—he's the third man missing. I'd like to know just what put it in your head that he might have been on deck in this job?"

"Why, I've told you—"

"Yes; there nothing more to it than that?" he said, eyeing her. "Well, he's gone. I've a ob to do—up at the house. I'm off there now." He paused. "Like to come along with me?"

Pembroke, Ont., Aug. 13 (CP)—Col. Adam Xarchman of Peterboro, Ontario, was remanded again for ten days when he appeared before Magistrate W. E. MacGregor today charged with misappropriating $606 from the canteens of the Government Relief Camp at Madawaska.

"Many of its personnel were old friends of my father's, and I was well known to most of them. Other official doors readily opened to me in the cession of valuable facts, and under secret orders I returned to Moscow. I took the name, Capt. Rex Leach. It was my Russian mother's, from whom I inherited my dark eyes and hair.

"I was well equipped for my task. I had served in the Russian secret service myself, and had secured now in the confidence of the Red leaders and equally valued by the high British command. So was set the stage for intrigue and espionage on my part, in Africa. In my favorite disguise, as a big game hunter, I started for the scene of the coming conflict and was leaving Istanbul when war flamed forth."

"I made several trips between the continent and my father's, and I was well known to most of them. Other official doors readily opened to me in the cession of valuable facts, and under secret orders I returned to Moscow. I took the name, Capt. Rex Leach. It was my Russian mother's, from whom I inherited my dark eyes and hair.

MAN OF 82 YEARS BURNED WITH SON

Futile Attempt at Rescue Made as Home Takes Fire

Tearville, N.S., Aug. 12 (CP)—An 82-year-old man was burned to death and his son was injured in a futile rescue attempt today when fire swept through their two-storey wooden home here.

The charred remains of Jackson Legge, 82, were found in the ruins of the house after it had burned to the ground.

His son, Norman, was severely burned as he ran back to save his father after escaping.

Cause of the fire was believed to be the ignition of a package of matches left near the father's smouldering pipe when he and his son retired.

SCIENTIST PLANS HUMAN ICICLE

Simkhovitch Volunteers And I am Ready to Proceed"

Hollywood, Calif., Aug. 12.—(AP)—Dr. Ralph S. Willard and Stephan Simkhovitch proceeded with their plans for the "human icicle" experiment in the face of family and official protests.

Simkhovitch has volunteered and if friend to continue with my plans," said Dr. Willard, his secretary freezing bio-chemist.

"I have my own life to lead and if it is to be sacrificed for science it won't make any difference," commented Simkhovitch, 34-year-old biology wrote.

The scientist plans to freeze Simkhovitch into a state of suspended animation and later revive him. He says germs of tuberculosis and possibly other diseases, including cancer, may be destroyed in this fashion.

Dr. Vladimir G. Simkhovitch, professor of Economic History at Columbia University, is the brother of Simkhovitch. Dr. Willard, a bio-chemist, is a friend of the family.

Mrs. Simkhovitch, however was reported to have been visited by George Parrish, Los Angeles Health Officer asking official information and describing the proposed experiment as "revolting."

Dr. Parrish and District Attorney Buron Fitts declared they would not permit the experiment to be carried out. Dr. Willard countered with the assertion he would move to Mexico or elsewhere if hindered here.

Rare Bird Music Is Recorded

The songs of several of the more decisive members of the feathered family are following being recorded and reproduced so that bird lovers may have their songs to listen to long thousands of miles away if recordings made recently ornithologists of Cornell University prove successful, says a bulletin from the Department of the Interior.

The natural song of the Townsend Solitaire, the Alaska Hermit Thrush and the trumpeter swan were soundphotographed by Professor Arthur A. Allen and Peter Paul Kellogg, who came to Yellowstone on an expedition organized by Albert R. Brand associate ornithologist of the American Museum of Natural History. That the reproductions will be successful is believed because Mr. Brand has already successfully made records of thirty-five birds on records which will be made in conjunction with his sound records. Both records have appeared last year.

Although bird is populated by more than 300 species of birds, the expedition has previously recorded the songs of many of these elsewhere, and they were primarily interested in the swan because of the production of the trumpeter swan call, a note which, because of the scarcity of the bird, was made on the Red Rock Lakes Migratory Bird Bird sanctuary because it was desired not to disturb the birds which are nesting a foothold in the park.

A photographic study of park birds is going forward under the skillful eye of Clark Bickenderfer of Denver, who is known throughout the country for his excellent bulletins on bird photography. Photography is primarily a hobby with Mr. Bickenderfer, but he has been so successful as to win a few accolades that he is considered an authority.

Ethiopia or Abyssinia?

By CENTRAL PRESS CANADIAN

Which do you call it, Abyssinia or Ethiopia?

Some call it one thing, some call it the other, while others use both, not knowing which is correct. Newspapers, magazines and radio announcers vary in their use of the two names of the African kingdom.

To settle the question once and for all, Ethiopia is correct. But it takes some digging to find that out.

Look up the empire on a map. That carries it as Abyssinia. But then up pops a bulletin issued by the White House in the name of Ethiopia. Then the encyclopedia says Abyssinia is derived from an Arab term, "Habesh" — meaning "mixed herad race." He will tell you the country is Ethiopia, being derived from "Hiopopia" and then where are you?

"Ethiopa" Correct Usage

To settle the dispute, the National Geographic society has issued a bulletin which points out that Ethiopia is the correct name because it is used with the official sanction of the Ethiopian government and by the natives of that African continent. In reality the African empire is called Ethiopia by its inhabitants and throughout the other parts of the world.

Just as confusing to readers is the spelling of Ethiopian names in the daily news reports when com-

Kind of Beautiful

By MARION F. JOHNSON

"Planning one of those public weddings is one thing," declared A. H. Hinkler, chairman of the arrangements committee of the Bayview Charity circus, "but getting the foul thing over seems to be an entirely different proposition!"

"Too proud!" exploded Josephus Braun. "After all that bunch of prizes we've offered!"

"Surely," suggested Adolphus Weeks, "we shall find a couple somewhere who will agree to be married."

A. H. Hinkler waved his arms wildly. "Somewhere!!" he shouted. "But where? Do you realize, man, that the wedding is advertised for tonight?"

"And that we've practically created all over that Bayview lot our hands and knees at every performance begging—literally begging—some young couple—any young couple—to please step forward and be married so that we can give them fifty dollars in cash and other prizes!" added Josephus Braun, now at the top of his lungs.

"Well," said little Mr. Weeks softly, pleasantly, "it isn't our fault if we receive no response. We have the prizes ready. We have, if you say, pleaded, dearly."

"Surely," mocked A. H. Hinkler, "they won't expect a wedding when we've placarded the whole city with printed that there will be one! Oh no!"

"Well," crowed Josephus Braun, "we can keep trying, I suppose."

One by one, the committee had taken turns pleading, offering prizes, and beseeching hopefully for a bride. Strong attending the circus. Sometimes there would be a nibble, but never a real bite. Finally A. H. Hinkler, Braun and Weeks had struggled, perspired, cursed and raged.

Josephus Braun, chosen by the committee to make the final plea because of his deep booming voice, had cleared his throat and finally began by summarizing the prizes. He dwelt, lovingly, on the interest all these people would take in the young couple. He described the breathing mass, waiting. Josephus Braun left the floor to confer with his brother committeemen.

"Gee Whiz, fellows and gentlemen," he beamed upon his return. "The committee will double—ah—the ante—" double—the cash prize if a couple will walk up here within the next three minutes and have themselves to be married. Just three minutes, fellows and gentlemen!" He took out his elaborate watch and started the time.

Hallery around the auditorium a young couple rose, hesitatingly, whispering. They got back in her seat again, but not before Josephus Braun had spotted them.

"Come right along!" he invited cordially, waving the watch. "Right this way! There has to be a bride!"

The young man assisted the hesitant girl to her feet, kissed her, trembling, to the ring. Josephus Braun bore the charges away. Flurry. Excitement.

Who were they? wondered the crowd. No one seemed to know. Well, it didn't really matter. They were young and in love. A circus could see that.

A bewilder hush. The circus band began to play Lohengrin, a little blackeyed attendants, dratted from the circus performances and transformed by the magic of quick change, appeared with floral pieces with quiet dignity.

And then the bride with a great bouquet of roses, still wearing her little dark suit but very lovely. Her cheeks were deeply flushed, she was nervous and a little afraid. But then was a soft, appealing beauty about her that the crowd sensed and approved. A little girl behind her, breathing! They took her in their hearts and kissed her, and smiled at her, and even wept over her, a little. It didn't matter about the groom. He was a good looking young man, a little shabby.

And then came the gifts. The gifts were presented. Josephus Braun made the speech. They were awed. A bridegroom beamed. And the little bride blushed and smiled.

The wedding march. The crowd sighed a little regretfully, and the bridal party filed out. The committeemen the bridegroom began to confer with the committee, some of the prizes and trading others for cash. At last, with their little raisings on a tray, piled high with booty, the young couple drove away, waving back to the crowd.

And then a quiet roadway, ribbon-long in the deeper shadows of the velvety night.

"Tom," said the little bride, snuggling against his husband's shoulder, "do you think it was all right?"

"Sure," said Tom, putting his arm around her.

"But I was scared," she said, trembling a little in remembrance. "I thought maybe they'd arrest us or something. I was so frightened."

"They didn't say rules about that," said Tom cheerfully. "They just said they wanted a couple to get married."

"It's wonderful," sighed the girl with all that money and all these prizes we can have. I'm glad Mary and get us a room and live happily ever after, you do you?"

"Sure," said Tom.

The little one rattled happily on. "And Tom—"

"Yes?"

"It was kind of beautiful, wasn't it—getting married all over again after three years?"

Ethiopia Invades Ogaden Region

Italo-Ethiopian Situation and Joe Louis Causes Club Swinging

Jersey City, N. J., Aug. 13—(Ab)—Feeling in the sidelong Italian and negro districts still ran high today following a riot in which five persons were injured and eleven arrested.

Racial clashes over the Italo-Ethiopian war situation and Joe Louis, negro heavyweight champion recently knocked out Primo Carnera, precipitated the rioting, police said.

Within a few minutes after fighting started yesterday in the streets near the "village", Italian settlement, more than 100 persons were milling about, swinging clubs and fists, and slashing with long-bladed knives. A rifle was used as a club by one rioter.

Twenty police armed with riot guns and tear gas bombs charged the fighting throng, breaking up the battle.

Picnic's Lost Boys Roll Home In "Great Big" Green Car

New York Aug 13—Freckled faced, tousle haired, shirtless, and tough, Herby Kaplan, 10 years old, hideout for big brawny men, told the story yesterday of how he and Jackey Sussman broke a bottle of ink cork for the Henry Street Settlement. It wasn't, he admitted, premeditated, but he and Jackey of the same age, 10 years old themselves thoroughly enjoyed the commotion it caused around White Plains, shortly before they were brought home during a police Waldorf Astoria estate on Thursday.

Successfully, though involuntarily, evading posses of police and volunteers in White Plains and scouting parties of settlement counselors, Herby and Jaky, one year his junior, linched on apples, "dined on a cup cake and a glass of milk" and finally commandeered an automobile ride back to Canal Street, where they separated, vowing their way. They reached the settlement before their party arrived, but not before consternation and panic had penetrated their homes and set news that they had been missing for hours.

At one farmhouse where they stopped to inquire their way when they found themselves completely puzzled, a crotchety old man set a bloodhound on their trail. Lester Dixon.

Never having heard of such woodsmen's tricks as taking directions from moss on a tree or following a trail by broken twigs, the bloodhound's owner tried again some later. A smiling young woman at a small white house questioned pared with the most modern maps. In some articles about the impending coronation of Haile Selassie's empire by Italian troops, names have been abbreviated. In some they have been stretched by the addition of a letter or two and otherwise altered.

Other Names Changed

For example, the National Geographic bulletin points out, Walwal is spelled "Ualual" in the text. Entires has a number of popular aliases. It is called "Adua" "Adoa" and "Adowa." Another name that has been changed is Lake Tana. The lake, the source of the Blue Nile, has been stretched to Lake "Tsana."

There are many others that have been either misspelled or changed in their baste. Awash has been changed to "Hawash". Gerlogubi has been altered to "Gerlogubi". Mogadiscio, the leading port and gateway to the colony has been referred to as "Mogadishu" and the Guiba river to "Juba".

Probably causing as much confusion to the reader as the spelling of the names of cities and the country is the name of the emperor, or himself, Haili Sellassie. "The conquering Lion of Judah" has had his name spelled "Hailie" and "Sa-

AUSTRIA TO KEEP IMPERIAL PALACE

Parliament Passes Bill to Preserve Schoenbrunn, Home of Franz Josef

FILLED WITH RELICS

Among Them is Answer of Serbia to Ultimatum That Precipitated War

At Schoenbrunn Palace, near Vienna, Emperor Franz Josef was born, partook of sausages for breakfast, and smoked his last cigar.

The fact that the Parliament of the Austrian Republic, aside from the Franz Josef exhibition on the first floor, has several projects for its disposition is believed by the Vienna correspondent of the Observer of London to be a tribute exacted for reviewing the memory of the Emperor, whose life for the prolonged period of eighty-six years was identified, principally in Summer time, with the building.

He thinks that its nickname, "The Little Versailles," justifies neither its magnificence nor its vastness and appointments — its imposing facade of 656 feet, its 1,441 rooms and its 139 kitchens. The exhibition on its first floor would seem to inspire the passage of the bill, which provides for the preservation of the building. Its numerous "kleineschlossen," its groves, lakes and lawns as a national monument.

Another life, much briefer, spent its last few years there also, the playful grandson of Franz Josef, two years after the long-lived Emperor was born.

Picture of Napoleon's Son

There is the picture of the Duke of Reichstadt, the only son of Napoleon I, who spent his years in the Austrian capital. Also the young Archduke Francis Joseph on whom Hitler writes his correspondent.

"There are drawings of Francis Joseph's entry in Vienna with his young wife, the Empress Elizabeth. As the years passed, his beard became sadder. Among the many documents exhibited there is a yellow report made to the Emperor on the day before his son's suicide. Yet the report deals only with his young wife, about the successful manoeuvres held a few days before.

"There is exhibited the tray on which Francis Joseph took his frugal meals during the working hours. It recalls his habit of taking at 10 o'clock in the morning a pair of Frankfurt sausages and a glass of beer. The sausages were not cooked in the palace. An imperial servant went with the order to a neighboring restaurant, where he loudly announced that he had come to fetch the sausages for the imperial table.

"Then the visit of the gorgeously dressed lackey was a daily event. It always created a sensation with the visitors of the restaurant. Those who were eating there stopped to watch the ceremony of delivering the sausages for the palace; card-players suspended their games and the pause in the bustle of the restaurant rose from their seats to witness the scene. Another document, with ragged edges and yellowed paper, is the answer of the Serbian Government to the ultimatum of Austria.

Relics of Ruler's Death

There are many reminiscences of the last days. The last cigar, only half used. The desk where the Emperor worked when the last attack of cough weakened him and his faithful valet, Eugen Kettner, to take him to bed. There is the narrow bedroom with the iron bedstead, where the Emperor died.

"There is the resignation paper which the court officer took about the death. It was filled out regularly, but at the end of a certain line would be recorded, but the police officer was apparently somewhat excited, for there are many corrections on the registration sheet. Among the many data one reads: 'Occupation: Emperor of Austria.'

"Near his bed there is a prayer-stool, where the pious Emperor kneeled every morning. And the stool prayed his unfortunate heir, the Emperor Karl, was the last to be admitted to the death chamber.

"The next after him to see the dead Emperor was Catherine Schratt, the faithful friend of the Emperor. Her villa was only a few yards away from the palace. The park wall of Schoenbrunn. Francis Joseph paid a visit every day to this villa in the Gloriette passe. She still lives in that villa. Her lips remain sealed. Emperor's faithful friend refuses to speak of the days when Francis Joseph poured out his heart to this clever woman."

WOMAN LOSES FIGHT OVER DOG

Judge Says He Leaned Over Backwards to Try to Save Animal

While Plains, N. Y., Aug. 13—Supreme Court Justice William F. Bleakley upheld the action of Justice of the Peace D. Wiley Travis of Peekskill who had ordered "King", the pet police dog of Mrs. Marie van der Wee of Peekskill, put to death as a dangerous animal.

In his decision, Justice Bleakley told Justice Travis to set a date for the dog's death, which is mandatory under the agricultural law once a dog has been found to be a dangerous animal.

When Justice Travis ordered King destroyed he did not set a date for the destruction. In court, Justice Travis, asserting he had a great respect for animals, said that he had never killed a dog in his life and had "leaned over backwards" in an attempt to spare "King."

Commenting on the court's decision, Justice Travis said "much as I dislike it I must now set a date for 'King's' destruction. It is the order of the Supreme Court."

The complaint against "King" in the peace court action was made by Charles Sterling, Peekskill attorney and neighbor of Mrs. van der Wee who charged that his children had been nipped by the dog on several occasions. After Justice Travis' ruling Mrs. van der Wee appealed the case to the Supreme Oklahoma City, Aug. 14 (CP)—Carpenters today erected a house in five an a less firm might take possession of half of it under a mortgage foreclosure that entailed complication.

The house was built on parts of adjoining lots, one of which was mortgaged. When the Loan Company took the foreclosure Mrs. Fern Chadwick, owner, moved her house across into the part of the home built on the other lot.

Norfolk, Neb., Aug. 14 (CP)—Erwin Lehmann operated the fish story season today. He said that he had three lines in Beaver Creek, baited with liver. A turtle ate the bait from two lines but a catfish beat him to the third. Angered, the lanky Lehmann left catfish, dragged it to the bank and killed it.

Scituate, Mo., Aug. 14 (CP) — Miss Norberne Lee is a beauty in pride today—all 34 inches of it.—for they are the longest tresses on an exhibit at the Missouri State Fair here. Nor were Miss Norberne's tresses provided.

"I know Miss Norberne well enough to attempt to braid her hair," said her owner, Nelson Miles of Norberne.

Byron, Calif., Aug. 14 (CP) — Rancher Ed Krumland claims to have Calif ornia's only mail-collecting squirrel.

It was that squirrels' idea. They just happened to be living in a hollow, acrotic-bedecked tree on Krumland's ranch. A shortage of fruit sent the tree to hill the hummingbird nest walked off mixed spurrels.

Hollywood, Aug. 14 (CP)—John Boles, tall, dark movie actor, was a happy man today. He had a new friend behind hand and arm as a result. The actor and Gladys Swarthout, opera star, were inseparable together when their tasks enabled them to meet. Boles stopped a car of wedding coffee from bursting into flames.

Pittsburgh, Aug. 14 (CP)—Five little sisters, hungry and poorly clothed, were left by police today who removed them from their poverty stricken home.

The officers arrested their mother, Mrs. Lillian Griffin, 37, in a nearby beer tavern, charging her with abandonment, and neglect of minor children.

Spokane, Wash., Aug. 14 (CP) —Miss Verlie Hutchinson, city woodsman, had police protection today—for his health.

It happened—He this, says Miss:

"I got temporary work in a camp north of town and I'd only been there an hour or three days when a man grabbed my beard, kicked me in the shins, hit me a few blows like you who keep us barbers out of work. Got shaved or get out of town!"

New York, Aug. 14 (AP)—Virginia Seitz, 5, of Bellport, Long Island suburb of Beechhurst, was found safe today in the home of Mrs. Rita Reisman of Ulmer Park, Brooklyn. Mrs. Reisman was arrested.

Mrs. Reisman's daughter, Annette Reisman, 5, disappeared hand in hand during what police said was a struggle for possession of gum.

Kitchener, Ont., Aug. 14 (CP)— The police motor force grew red as he hitched his bed and advanced his foot a few inches. A little lad, ragged of knee, appeared timid. Every move the officer made the would-be small policeman copied. Around his middle the small boy had a belt like which supported an elicit "holster." Out of the holster there peeped the butt of a weapon. Around the boy gathered to chuckle but the lad stuck until the officer left off duty. The lad took off his outfit and went home. He, too, was off duty.

Liberal Leader Contends Trade Policy of Baldwin Would End Depression

Says Premier Bennett Missed a Great Opportunity

TARIFF CUT FAVORED

Hon. Mr. King Addresses Electors at Woodstock

Woodstock, Ont., Aug. 14 (CP)—Industrial and trade depression had been prolonged by the policies of the Bennett Government and is being further prolonged by delay in bringing on a general election according to Liberal Leader Mackenzie King, who addressed a Liberal picnic at Woodstock Yesterday Mr. King spoke in support of A. S. Rennie, M.P., seeking re-election in Oxford County.

Election periods always brought uncertainty even in normal times, said Mr. King. No businessman would make commitments for the future until he knew the outcome of the election. This uncertainty was being prolonged by Mr. Bennett and was particularly injurious to trade in a time of depression.

Further, he argued, the postponing of the election until late September or October would handicap a new Government from the start. It would have no time to put its policies in effect so that their beneficial results could be felt before winter set in.

Missed Opportunity

The depression would have been over years ago, Mr. King declared, had President Bennett adopted the trade policies outlined by Rt. Hon. Stanley Baldwin at the Ottawa Imperial Conference of 1932. Mr. Baldwin was the leader of the British delegation and is now Prime Minister.

He had proposed the promotion of empire trade by lowering tariffs within the empire rather than by raising them against the rest of the world. The opposite course was followed and Mr. Bennett had missed a great opportunity.

By raising tariffs the Bennett Government had aroused the antagonism of other countries, had interfered with the exchange of products between Canada and those countries and had furthered the development of economic nationalism which had now involved the world almost to the verge of war.

World Call Conference

Another Imperial Conference would come next year, Mr. King said, and if a Liberal Government were in office it would fall in with the British view of empire trade as outlined by Mr. Baldwin.

Mr. King said he would go to Mr. Baldwin, remind him of his statement and say that Canada was now ready to take part of goods.

If tariffs within the empire were lowered other countries would seek to secure a share of empire trade by the lowering of tariffs with a view of getting it. All prosperity depended upon the extension of goods, said Mr. King. The freer and the greater the exchange the greater the prosperity. By clearing the channels of trade, Liberalism could restore prosperity to Canada.

Daily Essential

No single part of Canada can prosper at the expense of the rest, Mr. King said. Unity and a nation-al viewpoint were essential and the Liberal Party would fight the election campaign was framed with that in mind. It was addressed to every citizen in every part of Canada.

"The most autocratic Tory Government in Canada's history is in office," was the way Mr. King described the Bennett Government.

Mr. King said the interminable delay in bringing on the general election should provoke a strong feeling of resentment in the minds of autocratic disregard for the will of the people. He followed quiet who had made himself a dictator and had been using Parliamentary sessions to his own hands.

Mr. King warned against three parties. Their only effect was to undermine the political party, which should be elected and make possible the election of a government supported by a minority of the people.

Francis Appointment

"Either the Railway Commission requires a chairman or it does not," said Mr. King, commenting on the appointment of Hon. Hugh Guthrie, Minister of Justice, to that post. If the Commission needed a chairman the post should not have been kept vacant for three years. He added if it had been kept vacant by Mr. Bennett to serve the public 'or to hold a club over his followers in the House of Commons and induce them to do his bidding."

"Why have we not a trade agreement with the United States?" said Mr. King. "Other countries have secured trade agreements. Argentine is getting into the United States with her cattle. When a Liberal Government sets out to make trade agreements it will be handicapped because other countries have been before Canada."

This is one of the effects of the long delay in holding the election. A Liberal government would have little opportunity to do much to improve conditions before winter set in.

Trade Hurt by Tariffs

A country could not trade all one way. There had to be exchange, Shipping, said, "Our goods out of Canada had to carry goods into Canada on the return trip. The high tariffs had killed the return cargo and the first industry affected was shipping; ships were laid up, the harbors became there were no goods started, the railways next felt the pinch. Wholesale and retail trade were affected. All this started with the tariffs. The unemployment problem today was due to restriction of trade.

"It's all nonsense to say that our markets were lost because of the tariffs of other countries," said Mr. King.

Only within the last few weeks another market had been lost because the Government, through its right over countries instead of trying to preserve it, as Liberals had urged was in Japan and Canadian manufacturers had closed down. Steel mills were suffering as a result.

"If Mr. King said the British General Government is coming budget had sought a larger entry into the British market," said Mr. Bennett destroyed that one fort by raising the Canadian tariff. Then at the Imperial Conference of 1932 Mr. Bennett, not Mr. Stanley Baldwin, leader of the British delegation urged that the best way of increasing trade in the empire was by lowering tariffs within the Empire rather than by raising them against countries outside.

Make Proposal Reality

Had that idea been followed at the Conference he, King said, the depression would now be over. There would be more trade between the British Empire and a different world today. Economic Nationalism would have been arrested, the world have revived and ill will, distrust and the fear of war would have disappeared. Another Imperial Conference would come next year, Mr. King said, and if a Liberal Government were in office it would fall in with the British view of empire trade as outlined by Mr. Baldwin.

Mr. King said he would go to Mr. Baldwin, remind him of his statement and say that Canada was now ready to take part of goods.

If tariffs within the empire were lowered other countries would seek to secure a share of empire trade by the lowering of tariffs with a view of getting it. All prosperity depended upon the extension of goods, said Mr. King. The freer and the greater the exchange the greater the prosperity. By clearing the channels of trade, Liberalism could restore prosperity to Canada.

COLLIP ADVANCES HORMONE THEORY

Former Belleville Boy Addresses Congress in Leningrad

Leningrad, Aug. 14—A theory that each hormone controlling the growth of the body may constantly be held in the balance by an antagonistic hormone was advanced by Dr. J. B. Collip of McGill University, Montreal, a former Belleville High School student.

His idea was contained in a paper read to the International Physiological Congress in session here.

Dr. Collip suggested that if the balancing hormone does not perform its functions properly, control over the structural activities of the body may be lost, giving rise to physical abnormalities.

Hormones, like microscopic workers, may become too industrious and produce giants or they may shirk their duties and produce dwarfs. Manufactured by the pituitary gland, among other agencies, the hormone is a chemical substance which is released into the blood stream and passes through the body, modifying its structure and functions.

A tromegaly, or abnormal growth of some parts of the body after the general growth has ceased, causing such disfigurements as enlarged large hands, feet, noses and jaws, has long been attributed to the improper functioning of the pituitary gland.

SOCIAL SECURITY ACT IS PASSED

President Believes Act Most Important of Administration

Washington, Aug. 14 (AP)—President Roosevelt called his aides around him today for a ceremony enacting into law what he considers one of the most important measures passed during his administration—the Social Security legislation.

The stroke of the pen attacking the Presidential signature to the bill was the last formality needed to write into law a measure calling for a new and far-reaching social experiment and largest relief program ever approved by Congress.

Under the bill, employers and employees eventually will be taxed 1 per cent each on wages up to $3,000 annually to provide for contributory Old Age Pensions. Benefits range from $10 to $85 a month. The plan becomes operative January 1, 1937, but no pensions will be paid until January 1, 1942.

The bill also sets up a Federal-State Unemployment Insurance System to be financed through a 1 per cent payroll tax against employers of eight or more persons. The employer would get credit for payments made to State Unemployment Insurance Funds, provided the credits could not exceed 90 per cent of the Federal tax. The taxes start January 1, 1936.

Administration sponsorsen estimate the Unemployment Insurance and Old Age sections would apply to 25,000,000 workers.

Quints Picked For Feature Spot

Hollywood, Aug. 14 (AP)—The Dionne quintuplets can have a feature spot in Darryl Zanuck's new movie if they want it. Paramount Studio have begun negotiations to that end.

E. Lloyd Sheldon, producer of the film, said the Dionnes, five of milkman, has received from Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe, Callander, Ont., physician who brought the five babies into the world, a reply to his first overture.

This was, the Studio said, to the effect the quintuplets are under exclusive contract to a news reel concern. But Sheldon still hopes to get the quintet in his picture.

In the event a contract should be made, the studio would send a crew to photograph the famous five in their home town., What financial inducements were offered was not disclosed.

BANK OFFICIAL IS FOUND SLAIN

Robbery Apparently Not Reason For The Crime

Chicago, Aug. 14 (AP)— Shot three times in the head, Morris Eller, 46, assistant comptroller of the Chicago Park District, was found dead early today in his automobile.

Police found Morrison, former Winnipeg man, seated upright on the rear seat of his car, legs crossed and a cigarette in his mouth. There was a bullet wound in the left side of his head, one in the left shoulder and abdomen.

Although at first inclined to the theory robbery was the motive, investigators said they believed the motive for the crime when $32 was found in the victim's pockets.

Several witnesses were unable to find any witnesses who had heard the shots. Neighbors said they believed Morrison had been slain elsewhere and his body driven to the alley where it was found on the near North Side, miles from the victim's home.

Mrs. Anna Blazen told police she saw two men jump from the car and flee.

Morrison is survived by his widow and three children by a former marriage.

PORK PRICES UP IN CHICAGO AREA

Wholesale Price Reaches $29.50 a Hundred For Fresh Pork

Chicago, Aug. 14.—(AP)—Wholesale prices for fresh pork in the Chicago area today had reached a high of $29.50 a hundred pounds or more than 350 per cent increase in two years.

Yesterday's jump amounted to an even dollar and brought the $29 higher than the extreme low of $6.50 a hundred pounds paid in 1932.

Packers and butchers referred to the situation as "consumer resistance" to high prices for pork and beef. The admitted causes of the record high pork prices were last year's drought with the consequent shortage, of corn, principal food for hogs and the loss of export markets for pork. Shipment of live hogs to Chicago now average about one third of last year's receipts at this season.

RESCUE WORKERS SEEK 1,000 DEAD AS DAM BURSTS

Area Covered Is 40 Square Miles And Damage 25 Millions

HOUSES COLLAPSE

Believe Dam Weakened By Store of Water of Recent Storms

Turin, Italy, Aug. 14 (AP)—Thousands of rescue workers toiled this morning in the vast area devastated by the bursting of a Hydro-Electric Plant dam at Ovada yesterday, seeking bodies of the dead, estimated at 1,000 at the minimum. The total number rendered homeless, injured and homeless—is estimated at more than 1,000.

Rescue workers reported the body of Fascist troops found the Orba River Valley in Northern Italy, scene of the flood, a sea of mud, the waters having receded.

Damage wrought by the torrents that swept over an area of 40 square miles was placed at 300,000,000 lire (about $30,000,000). All crops in the path of the flood—grapes, grain, fruit and vegetables—were destroyed and at least 100 houses demolished.

Rescue workers said it was likely scores of the bodies covered by the debris would never be recovered. It is believed women and children make up the greater part of the death list, killed, when their homes were smashed in on them as they retired from the mid-day heat of yesterday.

Collapse Like Match Boxes

The catastrophe struck with tragic suddenness, there was a terrific roar and the shattered wall unloosed the raging torrents on the sleeping Ovada. No. 4 Andreone, official media catch boxes under the impact of the swiftly moving streams.

More than 100 persons, rescue workers said, were drowned almost without warning in the town of Ovada. No. 4 Andreone, stock is believed to have escaped in at the valley.

Survivors reaching here told of having seen entire families wiped out in the wall of water rushing down the valley. The water poured in upon them through doors, windows and finally tore the houses from their foundations and smashed them.

Everyone except officials and the relief workers was forbidden entering the stricken area and no information of the extent of the havoc was obtainable. The normally quiet newspapers carried no news of the disaster.

Ovada, about 19 miles south of Allesandria, is in the Province of Alessandria, in the Piedmont. It was the dam that controlled the water, which poured down the valley, that is believed to have been weakened by the vast store of water of recent storms.

BRITAIN OPPOSES POLITICAL GAIN IN AFRICAN ISSUE

Laval of France Acts as Mediator With Italy

ETHIOPIAN CHARGES

Aegean Islands Owned by Italy Under Martial Law

By The Canadian Press

A fresh appeal by Ethiopia to the League of Nations, this time protesting embargoes on shipments of arms, coincided today with opening of diplomatic efforts in Paris to avert the threatened Italo-Ethiopian war.

Ethiopa protested while Italy steadily piled up troops and arms with the avowed purpose of invasion, Ethiopia finds it impossible to obtain the means of defence.

In Paris Premier Laval had a long talk with Anthony Eden of Britain who privately outlined courses which British considers might lead to a peaceful solution. Laval will meet Baron Aloisi of Italy tomorrow and three-power talks open Friday.

Death Blow to League

A report to the Daily Telegraph, London, said Eden would probably make it clear to the Italians if hostilities start it will be a death blow to the League and must be followed by withdrawal of Britain from European affairs.

Italy, calling up more reservists, was politely indifferent to the Paris conference. London reported the Italians had placed the Dodecanese Islands on the route to Sicily and Italy's martial law with preparations for handling the sick or wounded. Rome said the African colonies, From Djibouti came, word of extensive French preparations for defense by French Somaliland, apparently against fear of a native uprising in sympathy.

The News-Chronicle, London Liberal organ, urged liberalization of control of British colonies with economic benefits to Italy as the best way out of the impasse.

No Political Concessions

Paris, Aug. 14—(CP-Havas)—Britain is willing to help Italy get extensive economic concessions in Ethiopia but will oppose all political concessions, Anthony Eden, British Minister for League of Nations Affairs, indicated to Premier Laval today.

They had an hour's conference in preparation for the three-power conference on the Italo-Ethiopian dispute Friday.

London, Aug. 14—(AP)—A Reuter's news agency dispatch from Athens today says Italian-owned Dodecanese Islands in the Aegean Sea have been placed under martial law and are being blockaded in force. The island of Lero has been converted into a fortress.

Local and district horse owners need not be apprehensive over any immediate spread of the new pest disease, encephalomyelitis to this eastern part of Canada from the west, even though the dread disease has reached almost epidemic proportions in Manitoba and down Saskatchewan, commented local veterinaries today.

"The disease is a new one to Canada, and has probably come up from some of the Southern States and then across the border. It was first observed in California, but has gradually worked Northward, we haven't had any reports of it this far east, and we don't expect to have," stated Dr. H. P. Wellbanks of the city.

STOLEN SILVERWARE FOUND IN BUSHES

Found cached behind a clump of bushes near Hillcrest Ave., the silverware stolen from the Tabernacle Church last April was discovered by Mrs. Fuller, 56 Ferris street early today. The discovery was reported to the local police, who took the silverware into custody. Some of the silverware, which consisted of two dozen knives and forks, was stolen from the Tabernacle Church along with a quantity of chinaware, cups, saucers, and plates. Some of the stolen chinaware being recovered by the local police police on April 26th. Police observed the bag as she was proceeding towards the downtown section of the city early today and upon close scrutiny later discovered the silverware. The matter is being further investigated by Plainclothes Constable Fred Jones before returning the articles to the church this afternoon.

Filter Blocking Algae Again Appears

Screen and filter blocking algae from the waters of the Bay of Quinte which caused so much trouble to the department last year, has again made its appearance in the basins and filter beds of the local filtration plant. Instead of the average twice a day backwashing of filter beds, at the present time employees of the plant are forced to wash the beds four and sometimes even every twenty-four hours. It was reported today. During the height of the trouble last year with the minute weed, however it was necessary to do as high as 32 times a day was necessary.

RECORD ENTRY AT FAIR IS OBSERVED

President Walter Asselaine and Secretary H. W. Ketchenson of the Belleville Fair Board pointed with a considerable amount of satisfaction today to a steady stream of exhibitors' entries which were flooding the office of the secretary today and for the past several days. Exhibitors from all over Canada have evidenced a desire this year to attend the local fair with their particular exhibits.

"We'll probably set a record this year for entries," tersely commented Mr. Ketchenson following a brief check-up of those already received.

President Walter Asselaine, busy on the work of rounding up local exhibitors, with his attention concentrated chiefly upon automobile dealers today declared the majority of booths in the buildings had already been taken.

RAIN BADLY NEEDED IN THIS DISTRICT

Rain a cooling heavy downpour of at least one day's duration, is badly needed in this immediate district to soak the drought parched land now splitting and cracking through weeks of dryness and to revive farm and garden product wilting in the ground. Not for weeks has this immediate section received moisture of any content although the surrounding country has been favored with rainfall in abundance. Along the Bay of Quinte from farmers have been forced to stand idly by and watch the crops wither in the field or have been forced to the back breaking labor of irrigating the more tender produce by hose from wells that are fast drying up.

FORM STEVENS CLUB AT DESERONTO

Announcement is made locally, that Mr. C. W. Malley, ex-Reeve of Deseronto has been unanimously elected president of the Stevens Club for Deseronto district. A short time ago Mr. Malley resigned his position as secretary of the Deseronto Conservative Association and also resigned as a member of the executive committee for South Hastings. Mr. L. Deller, editor of the Deseronto Post, was elected secretary-treasurer of the Stevens Club, and Geo. Hopping, Hugh Thompson and Jack Potter were named on the executive.

HEMLOCK PARK FARM FIELD CROP WINNER

Mr D. A. Thrasher, pd. vice-president of the Belleville Fair Board has returned to his home after having acted as judge of the standing field crop competition conducted by the Kingston Fair Association at Kingston. Hemlock Park Farm was awarded winner with a score of 86.

CONSERVATIVE WOMEN ENDORSE ACTION

Unanimous endorsation of the actions of both men's clubs in connection with the Dominion celebration of the party by wards and polls in this city as decided at a previous meeting of the Conservative Men's and Conservative Clubs was given unanimously by the ladies' Conservative Club last evening.

Considerable discussion which was presided over by Mrs. Harry Naylor, chair lady, was addressed by Mrs. Reid, who told the ladies that South Hastings who exploded the backwards theory to be the party organizations. Mr. Reid reiterated his statement that the Conservative party was far from being finished in this riding and declared that those who worked hard on the present member will still be in the limelight.

A real Conservative rally, which is expected to be a monster council will be held in this city in the near future, and will be addressed by some of the most noted speakers of the party," promised Mr. Reid.

OAT COMPETITION AWARDS ARE MADE

Results of the field judging competition for oats, which was completed in this district last week has been announced by J. M. Birrell, agricultural representative, as follows: Col. Roscoe Vanderwater, 97 points; Oscar Wagar, 96; L. J. Hutchinson, 95; Frank Trevorton, 87; Clare Vesse, 86; T. E. Watson and son, 84; Joseph Hollinger, 81; C. H. Ketchenson, 80.

Nineteen entries had been received for the competition which was judged by Mr. Birrell.

CENT. PRESS ASSOC. HOLDS OPEN HOUSE

Publishers, editors, printers, and other craftsmen of the printing and publishing trade will be guests at their own open house on the shores of Oak Lake on Saturday afternoon next. Preparations are being made to accommodate over on hundred members of the Central Press Association, who will be in this district for a series of picnics held by the Association which was formed recently and has as its officers: Harry Moore, Trenton, president; Roy McLaren, Port Hope, vice president; and H. R. Tompkins, Kingston, secretary-treasurer. An open invitation to all workers of the printing and publishing fraternity is given.

POST OFFICE JOB NOW UNDERWAY

Work on the construction of the new Campbellford post office was commenced by the Clarke Construction Company of Toronto, awarded the contract, today. The building will be two stories high, with a brick tower and will occupy the corner of Front and Mill streets.

Dempsey, Trenton, and two sons, F. M. Alyea, Englishtettlement and O. G. Alyea of this town.

FIRE TEST MADE AT COUNTY HOME

Heat Sets Off Alarm in 35 Seconds, Firemen on Scene in 2 1-2 Min.

When a fire was started today in a pan in the sitting room of the Hastings County Home, which contains upwards of 100 inmates, it took but thirty-five seconds by the watches of Warden James Hronson, County Clerk Eric Dempsey and Deputy Fire Chief Gerald Vance for the automatic alarm to be sounded simultaneously in the Home and in the Belleville fire hall. Two and a half minutes later the slowest truck in the Belleville Fire Department, which is about to be discarded reached the scene, about a mile from the fire hall.

This was the satisfactory test made shortly before noon in the presence of the members of the special committee of the County Council, Warden J. Bronson, Chairman George Bush, Deputy Reeve of Sidney, Chairman of the Home Committee, County Clerk Dempsey, County Clerk James Haggerty and Deputy Fire Chief Vance, Superintendent Elmer Secord, staff of the Home, Mrs. Sandercock and a few others. The test was made by President Carson of the Dominion Automatic Fire Alarms Limited, whose equipment has been installed and by Earl Thompson, fire alarm electrician of the company.

Satisfaction Expressed

The warden, the home chairman and the members of the committee expressed satisfaction with the trial.

"The building is fully covered," declared Mr. Carson. There are one hundred and sixty detals placed in every part of the four storey building from basement to attic, where fire might start. On each floor there is a fire box and there are twelve circuits within the large building. The alarms are automatically sounded when fire in the building and in the city fire hall so that the firemen and the home authorities may know the exact location of the building a blaze has started. The firemen will receive perceptible on the ceilings, give signal of unusual heat which sets off the alarm. The alarm in the building is a gong which can be heard throughout.

There is between three and four thousand feet of wire used in the installation.

With a direct wire to the fire hall and with the wires in the home, the building is now as safe as it is possible to make it, according to Mr. Carson. There are also extinguishers placed in various places in the building.

Considerable time was spent by the inspecting committee in the attic where a fire might get a serious foothold under ordinary conditions. With the fireproof construction of the C.A.S. rather than institutional care.

Mr. Carson has a large attendance of the members out but the communist-baiting bug was absent. The pianist Leo Riggs being out of the city. Mayor Lee decided to take oars to transport the junior baseball team to either Oshawa or Toronto tomorrow for the first game of the series in the Provincial playdowns. The players and fans expect to give a good account of themselves in the playoffs. Dr. Lee was welcomed back after a holiday down Perth way while Medical Secretary explained details of the excursion to be taken by the players, their wives and friends to Clayton, N.Y., in the near future.

The speakers was introduced by Griffin and Kiwanis appreciation was expressed by the president Cliff Sarager. Mr. Ruston has appeared before at the luncheon in the role of speaker and his second yesterday was most interesting and instructive. Under the guidance of Mr. Kelso in 1924, the work at that time by those interested being entirely voluntary. He spoke of the development from the report brought in by that body in 1930 by which every C.A.S. was required to incorporate. This was done in the local organization in 1935.

Inspector Ruston told of the events leading up to the transfer of the wards from institutional care to the boarded home, these being unfortunate dependents. Windsor and North York, Hon. David Croll, Minister of Public Welfare completely changed the regulations and divided the province in four districts over which he placed inspectors and set out rules for the operation of each of the local branches. Belleville at the present time is in grade "T". At the present time 53 children have been placed in boarded homes, which far exceed the regulations required for each home. The speaker spoke highly of the new scheme believing the child would get better training in a boarded home, that by institutional care for he remarked "children in a body have been effectively taken away." The costs under the new system have been materially reduced, the speaker

First Anniversary of Death Of Former Hydro Chairman

Late J. Robert Cooke, Former M. P. P., was Outstanding Native of Hastings County And Gave Long Years of Service to Hastings and Ontario.

Present members of the Hydro Electric Power Commission of Ontario and members of Hydro Boards throughout Ontario paused briefly in their duties today to bow in tribute to the memory of the late John Robert Cooke, former Chairman of the Commission, who died just one year ago today, August 14.

On that sultry night of Friday, August 10, while returning home from a visit to his cousin, Thomas Cooke, the car driven by the late Chairman of the Commission crashed into a concrete culvert near his home. Neighbors removed the unconscious Mr. Cooke from the roadside to his home. He died there on Monday evening following, after June 1931.

CHILD'S WORK IN C.A.S. EXPLAINED

The new deal regarding child's work was fully explained in an interesting manner by Inspector Ruston, addressing the Children's Aid Society to the Kiwanis Club at a noon luncheon in the Quinte Room of the Queen's Hotel. The speaker declared the matter of out-boarded children for wards of the C.A.S. rather than institutional care.

Mr. Carson has a large attendance of the members out but the communist-baiting bug was absent. The pianist Leo Riggs being out of the city. Mayor Lee decided to take oars to transport the junior baseball team to either Oshawa or Toronto tomorrow for the first game of the series in the Provincial playdowns. The costs under the new system have been materially reduced, the speaker showed and quoted figures to substantiate that statement. The cost to the board has per diem than under the old system.

F. J. BIRD AT 88 IS STILL HEARTY

Well Known County Man Celebrates His Birthday

Mr. F. J. Bird one of the county's best known residents is today, Aug. 14, receiving Chloe congratulations and expressions of good will from a host of friends in honor of the attainment of his 88th birthday.

Still hale and hearty and possessed of a mind that is remarkably clear that has characterized his life, Mr. Bird is today the sole one of the county of Hastings County, having been born in Sidney township, receiving the congratulatory expressions with becoming modesty. And, as usual he found time cheerfully today to perform the usual chores in the garden and flower beds he tended.

If one were to ask Mr. Bird to what he attributed his lengthy age, and present physical well being, the answer would probably be a prompt question and unanimous a refusal to get over-excited over the smaller things which do not count. "It is not hard to live to an advanced age if one takes care of oneself," he has remarked in answer to questioning.

It is only a little over one month since Mrs. Bird, his helpmate during the many years has passed on to her rest. She, too, equipped with the heritage of good health, passed on by her pioneer forebears, had retained the same vigor of her early years almost up to the time of her demise. Doctors' visits were comparatively rare in the Bird household, and illness even more infrequent.

"Simple living, plain everyday work and a slower gait" is given as the secret of Mr. Bird's long life by Mr. Bird.

Mr. Bird has a son living on the family homestead in Sidney township and a daughter Mrs. Hyde, Moira Street, Belleville.

POLICE BLOTTER

Local police are centering their activities on the elimination of transients, who nightly sleep in local parks and adjacent to railway property in Belleville. Transients disturbing slumbered in the cell block at the police station, seven of whom, it is reported, left their bed after being found sleeping in different parts of the city. Police officials liberated those offenders early this morning after instructing them to vacate the city. Prosecutions of transients sleeping in parks and other places throughout the city has been promised by local police if this practice is not discontinued locally.

P. C. Arnott found an abandoned bicycle on East Bridge street early this morning. The "bike" is in the custody of the police awaiting its rightful owner. No reports of a bicycle being stolen locally have been received lately, however.

Complaints relative to the equipment at the East Belleville playgrounds being willfully destroyed were recovered by the authorities today. Upon investigation it was discovered, that screens and vines had been damaged and supposedly by mischief bent girls and boys. The matter is being attended to and may result in arrests being laid.

No serious motor accidents were reported in the immediate vicinity of Belleville during the past 24 hours. No session of local police court was held today, His Worship Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., presiding at Picton police court.

EDWARD DUETTA NEW CARETAKER

Appointed to Position at Collegiate at Board Meeting

Picton, Aug. 14.—At a meeting of the Collegiate Board on Monday night, Mr. Edward Duetta was appointed caretaker of the Collegiate, succeeding the late Wm. Jones, who had held the position since the erection of the building twenty-four years ago. Mr. Duetta is a brother of Mr. Elmer Duetta, caretaker of the Mary St. Public School, and with his family lives on Union Street. There were forty-four applications for the position.

Mr. Byron Harrison and his daughter, Mrs. Harry Clark, entertained delightfully at tea on Wednesday afternoon at the former's home at Waupoos, in honour of their cousins, Mrs. Alfred Terril and Mrs. Dan Jackson, of Calgary, who are spending the summer in Picton.

Miss Lottie McKigen was guest of honour at a jolly weiner roast at Cuttle Beach, on Wednesday night. Miss McKigen leaves on Thursday for her home in Toronto after a very enjoyable holiday in town.

Friends regret the serious illness of Mrs. John Mitchell at her home at Waupoos. Her daughter, Mrs. Stuart Grafsey and children of Montreal are with her.

Mrs. Holmes is making her home with Mrs. Nelson McCartney, Ferguson Street owing to the illness of her daughter, Mrs. J. R. Simpson.

Mrs. Clarence Bailey is the guest of her father and sister in Detroit for some time.

Mrs. Rose Bush presided at an organization meeting of the Liberal-Conservative ladies in the committee rooms on Saturday afternoon. The speakers were Mr. Geo. Tustin, Liberal-Conservative candidate and Mr. J. R. Simpson of Napanee and Brig.-Gen. Hepburn, of Picton. Mrs. Harry Dunn was elected president and Mrs. Sam Collier vice-president of the association.

SIDNEY R.Y.P.U.

The meeting was in charge of Evelyn Wannamaker, president. Hymn number, vice president, opened the meeting with hymn 1. Scripture lesson was taken from 1 Cor. 13 Chap. Evelyn Cleveland led the devotional. Hymn 5 was sung and Luella Wannamaker read the topic "Will On and Me". Charlie Irvin and Charlie Bruton gave a musical selection on guitar and accordian. Doris Carter gave a reading and Charlie Ross took charge of business. Hymn 20 was sung and the meeting closed with the Mizpah benediction. There were 15 members present.

HEADLIGHTS

Far from ideal is the headlight of motor cars even in the days of the season of 1935. Never have there been lights as not glare, the rest bore out the eyes of the oncoming motorist, whose own car's lights doubtless do the same to the passing drivers.

The car has taken great strides forward in the development of the almost perfect motor car, but with all this progress of the car, bright lights on the roads still cause trouble and worry.

VIEWS OF THE CHURCH

Modern society has killed man's conscience and has substituted itself for "the small voice of God." Rev. Joseph A. Tythridge said at high mass at St. Patrick's Cathedral, New York City. "Today with our many 'isms' we find the voice of conscience much stifled. Man's body and soul are amalgamated into a machine. He no longer has any dignity and his human nature is trampled under foot."

Though the soul is the most important of the three earthly temples consecrated by God, a good Christian must not be blind to the manifestations of God in nature, said Father Tytheridge. "Many astronomers contemplate the heavens, but they do so with cynical and undevout eyes. We go abroad in the world failing to realize that from the heavens hangs a picture of God, the Creator, artistically stamped on every star and on every leaf in the forest. From the time of Adam to the time of Solomon, man worshiped God under the stars of heaven. And David's Book of Psalms was inspired by nature. Let us not, like heedless children, neglect this temple, which Christ doubly sanctified when He became man."

Rev. Fred R. Isackson, M. E. pastor in Alaska, guest preacher at John Street Methodist Church, Belleville, declared that communism was gaining throughout the world because it was based on a definite plan. "We need leaders who are staunch men who take no moral holiday. The ministers in the past three years have become fat and content with their jobs........ Human wisdom has failed. We see man's frantic effort to live together peacefully. Today we are depending too much upon man's wisdom instead of God's wisdom. We must go through the valley of humiliation to rebuild."

"Until the 14th century 'worship' was spelled 'worthship' which gives us a key to its meaning," said Paul W. St. Dane of Eastern Baptist Theological Seminary. "Anything or everything that may be or is considered of worth is an object of worship.

"Just to bow is not worship, and yet if bodily prostration has any connection with your spiritual attitude, it is worth while. The several means of worship is by sacrifice and offerings. We have no indication that God want us to do away with these things, but the offering is not worship unless it is an exact expression of what is in your heart, God would rather not have it .....Song is a very important means of worship, but it is more prone to be ready for our use in music than in the sermon without music. More churches are ineffective because of poor music than because of poor sermons.

"There is great need for a gospel of gladness to assume as important a place as your gospels of repentance, grace, and righteousness," said the Rev. Cecil F. Andrew, son, at North Presbyterian Church, New York. "Let any eye sweep across Europe with its millions of ignorant and oppressed peasants, helpless and hopeless; or go farther afield and gaze upon the hordes of India or China, swept now by famine, now by plague. What gladness is there in life for most of these? From a purely material standpoint life for them is not worth the living. Nor is this condition strange or new. Always has it been the same. The history of the world is one long moan. The only gladness the world has ever glimpsed is that which came with the gospel of Jesus Christ."

Rules that should be followed for those who would possess a cheerful spirit are: seek for sorrow trouble; to enjoy the day's blessings, to look on the bright side; to live right, and to trust in God.

"A cheerful heart is better than all the beauty specialists in the country."

Rev. Dr. Bernard I. Bell speaking at the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, said that the lives of Christians in the common acceptance of the term were not likely to be happy. "Those who live for nobler purposes than the multitude pursues are sure to find themselves in opposition to that multitude and more often than not, hated and persecuted by it. ... .. It costs always much, and sometimes tremendously to deny the fashionable wisdom of man and to labor in accordance with God's wisdom."

The doctrine of the survival of the fittest is an attractive theory, but I doubt if any people ever declined because they did not go to war often enough.—Calvin Coolidge.

DROWSY COW

The oak tree drops a shadow like a pool
To shade the cow that lies serenely cool
And munches and chews the cud in the noisiness, too,
Demurely in the wind's more bold and gay,
The blackeyed susans like a gypsy crew
Are dancing; clumps of clover, purple-blue
And red and white, are perfume of the breeze;
The buttercups, deserted by the bees,
Are pale and lonely, and the primrose, too,
Is hiding down beneath the cornflower's blue,
The drowsy cow is pondering in the heat
Upon this field of lovely things to eat.

DECORATION DAY, next Sunday, will be a notable event. Survivors of the Great War to end all wars will march in honor of departed comrades and graves will be decorated as well as wreaths laid on the cenotaph in Belleville. Indeed the occasion will be made more memorable by the addition of fraternal lodges celebrating their Decoration Day the same day. Flowers for the graves of those are buried overseas, or lie on ocean's bed, and those who come home to die of war's effects.

W. S. Gilbert's first brief was on behalf of a lady accused of stealing a pocket on an omnibus on her way to attend a tea-and-prayer meeting—not exactly a promising start. They found in her pocket two extra handkerchiefs, a watch, two silver pencil-cases, and a hymn-book.

"Call witnesses to Mrs. Brigg's character," Gilbert commanded, knowing full well that the only witnesses in the building had already given incriminating evidence. The crier shouted for them, but no one appeared.

"Dear, dear," said Gilbert, "this is really most unfortunate. They must have mistaken the day."

The judge had scarcely pronounced eighteen months' hard labour when Mrs. Briggs "stooped down, pulled off a heavy boot, and flung it at her counsel's head, following it up with a stream of invective surprising in a lady devoted to prayer and sacred song. The boot missed Gilbert, but caught a reporter on a sensitive spot, and to this fact Gilbert attributed the unfavourable light in which his efforts for the defence were viewed by several of the papers next morning.

HAVE YOU HEARD THESE?

"What's this, missus?" asked the new maid, indicating a metal bottle.

"That is a bottle which will keep things hot or cold, whichever you desire," explained the mistress.

"Well, for goodness' sake," ejaculated the girl, "how is it going to know if you want things hot or cold?"

REVOLT IN THE DESERT

by

T. E. LAWRENCE

We sat on the right-hand and on the left, and with the soup Allenby began to talk about camels. Mr. Walter broke out that the provisional dispersing of our camel brigade brought the transport of the —th Division up to strength; a godsend, for the Orient had been vainly ransacked for camels. He pow-wowed, Allenby, a respectful Milton, had an acute sense of style, and the line was a break one. He cared nothing for strength, the fetish of administrative branches.

He looked at me with a twinkle. "And what do you want them for?" I replied hotly, "To put a thousand men into Deraa one day you please." He smiled and shook his head at Walter (triumph!), saying sadly, "Q. you lose." The goat became giddy and the sheep sheepish. It was a pleasure in regal gift; the gift of unlimited mobility. The Arabs could now win their war when and where they liked.

Next morning I was off to Jebl Feisal in his cool eyrie at Abe el Lissan. We discussed the Howeitat tribes, migration, sentiments, the spring rains, pasture, at length. Finally, I remarked that Allenby had given us two thousand camels. Feisal gasped and caught my knee, saying "How?" I told him all the story. He leaped up and kissed me; then he clapped his hands loudly. Hajim' black shape appeared at the door. "Hajim," cried Feisal, "call them." Hajim asked "Who, Feisal?" Abdulla, or Fehr, Auda, Mosleg, Zaal.....?" "And not Mirjan?" queried Hajim softly. Feisal shouted at him for a fool, and the black ran off, while we, in the tent, finished the coffee. Feisal was overjoyed at the prospect of a real fight, and Abe el Lissan, but carrying less and marching less than our regular column would be sure to get them to increase weights and speeds, but could nurse us against cast-iron corps regulations, framed to keep down the figures of wear. Feisal was incensed that they alighted, we could double the carrying capacity of the camels; consequently, I had offered to take over the animals and send back the Egyptian camel-men.

The British, being short of labor, dumped all the camels almost too quickly. We had a terrible scramble to improvise drivers upon the instant. Young Arabs, our transport and quartermaster work, in which their natural mobility would be better employed. Using his full power, he grappled with the chaos. He had no drivers for his caravans, no saddles, no clerks, no veterinaries. He drips and fair drivers, and had to run a harmonious and orderly train was impossible; but Young never heard of the word impossible or ungrateful way. Thanks to him, Arab supply system in the Arab regulars on the plateau was solved.

All this time the face of our Feisal was working. He welled in his tent, maintained incessantly the writhing and twitching of his face. He was a born leader, of whose movement, Arabs boomed, even our field work was going well, and each regular had just had their third success against Jerdun, the Turkish garrison of Maan and established a hold to take and lose. Our movement can happened to the Turkish sortie from Maan and smashed in in such style that the opportunity was lost forever. Feisal in command of half the army would have driven Jerdun in with a great vigour. His gaiety of spirit appealed more to the officers than his skill. He had a terrible poetry and lean earnestness; so that many associations of the two brothers gave every sort of man a sympathy with one or other of the leaders of the revolt.

For at weeks we marched and time, Zaid and Joudeh, their cousins, continued a profitable battering upon the Maan section. Sherif Nasir accompanied by Peaks and Nornby moved to Hasa, forty miles northward, and occupied eight miles of railway in one happy forum. By intensive cultivation and very foundations of the line thereabout were destroyed and the Turkish contemplated offensive against Feisal in Abu el Lissan was brought to nought. Allenby and myself took advantage of the lull to go up to Akaba by sea.

At G.H.Q. we felt a remarkable difference in the air. The place was full of Arabs, Feisal's friends, allies and hope, but now logic and coordination were needed in all our common degree. The new army was arriving to time from Mesopotamia and India. The Arab advances in grouping and training were being made. On June the fifteenth it had been the considered opinion of a private conference that the army would be capable of a general an sustained offensive in September.

The sky was, indeed, opening over us; and we went in to Allenby, who said outright that late in September he would make a grand attack in force on the Turks, even to Damascus and Aleppo. Our role would be as laid down in the spring: we must make the Deraa raid on the two thousand new camels, in detail, and then must be fixed as the weeks went on.

On July the eleventh, Jidd, Brunton and I were talking to Allenby and Bartholomew, his new staff officer and, of Feisal's generosity and confidence, seeing the unthrees working of a general's mind. It was an experience, technical, reassuring, and very valuable to me, who was illfitly a general too, in my own old show.

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

AUGUST 14th, 1915.

The Rev. Canon Beamish will conduct a drum head service at the Exhibition grounds Sunday morning at 9.30 o'clock. The Sth. C. M. R. will be in attendance.

Complaints have been received recently about speeding of autos on the front of the road and the using of blinding head lights. Chief Ponton has declared that as for the latter there is no need of them and they are a serious nuisance. Something should be done about it.

Mrs. Jay, keeper of this city was elected Grand Master of the O. C. E. in Grand Council of Stratford yesterday.

Col. S. B. Leslie was re-elected one of the five Sir Knights of the Grand Lodge of the Sovereign Grand Priory of Canada at Montreal yesterday.

30 Years Ago

AUGUST 14th., 1905.

Mr. Charles M. B. Hotson and Mr. Lalibar Hotson left last evening to New York after a three weeks' visit with the scenes of their boyhood.

Mr. Robert Nelson is home from the Lords, Mon., on a visit.

Mr. and Mrs. Geale Donnelly of Rochester, N. Y., are visiting in Belleville, are spending a few days in the city.

Mr. John A. G. Crozier and family of Toronto, who find no less pleasantries which to spend the summer, will return to Toronto to this week.

40 Years Ago

AUGUST 14th., 1895.

A horse belonging to Mr. J. H. P. Young, grocer, and attached to his delivery waggon, ran away yesterday on Murney street. It was captured on the corner of school. Little damage was done.

The Hon. Robert Read and Mrs. Read of this city are visiting friends in Kingston.

On Monday night some party or parties entered the garden of Mr. A. Anderson, Bridge St., E. End, D. Institute and stole considerable quantities of vegetables, besides doing much mischief.

Mr. W. K. Foster's saddle horse, one of the most beautiful animals in the city, died yesterday.

Mr. A. R. Wallbridge was in Brockville yesterday.

Mr. F. H. Phippen of Winnipeg, after a short visit with his parents here, left today for Ohio. Phippen, left today for the Old Country.

50 Years Ago

AUGUST 14th., 1885.

The second attempt to sail the races on the programme of the Bay of Quinte Yacht Club for their annual regatta was happily more successful than that of the forenoon yesterday and was a highly interesting and fast sailed contests was the result. The competing yachts were the following: First class, Atlanta, Capt. Leavens, Belleville, 56 feet; corrected length; Norah, Capt. J. Bell, Belleville, 56 feet; Atalanta follows the Norah 7 minutes, 29 seconds. Second class, Ina, Capt. W. H. Biggar, Belleville, 36.3 feet; corrected length; Aura T., Capt. Robinson, Kingston, 35.01 feet; Surprise, A. Fisher and J. Richardson, Trenton, 32.6 feet. The yachts allows one minute and 27 seconds to the Aura for their inlets and 32 seconds to the Surprise. The course was 7 miles; the start was 10.30 and shortly before that the yachts left the harbor with scarcely enough air to give them steerage way. As, however, the little air that was moving from the south west, the general opinion was that there would be a breeze before noon. In order to expedite matters as much as possible, the steamer Annie Gilbert, which carries the official, picked up the racers one after another and towed them to within a short distance above Hungerford's point. Shortly before noon catspears from the south west began to steal over the water and at 11.40 the start for the race was given. At 11.56 the first gun was fired for the yachts to start boomed out from the gun of the steamer Annie. The wind in its breeze was stirring, but the yachts were slow to get under headway. The Norah was up the and the result was that the Norah and Atalanta changed places within the ten minutes, while the Atalanta was distinguished by minute and 34 seconds. They were timed as follows:

| | H. | M. | S. |
|---|---|---|---|
| Norah | 12 | 05 | 15 |
| Atalanta | 12 | 06 | 49 |

The actual time of the latter was 12.06 49. The course was a buoy off the north shore, thence to a buoy off the south shore and back to the starting point three miles around — in all 9 miles. The wind was from west and light, and enabled the yachts to sail around without any windward work. The first leg was a reach, the second and third close hauled. With club and jib topsails and mainsail the yachts was drawing beautifully, the competitors sailing away in a rapid rate, the Atalantic gradually, so that when two miles had been covered, the Norah was obliged to luff to prevent her big opponent passing her to leeward. After continuing this for some time, the Norah again forged ahead, and setting a spinnaker gained considerably, rounding the first buoy a half mile with a lead of 52 seconds. The sandwich boats turned without, out either having gained anything. The Norah handled the wind, which was now piping up smartly laying both craft rail to the Atalanta again drew up and tried for the Norah's weather, but the latter would not permit this and luffed up smartly and passed the second buoy with a lead of 52 seconds. The sandwich boats turned without

Housing the Millions

By Hubert N. Cassons

By Herbert N. Cassons

Great Britain is now building houses at the rate of thousand a day. Another fifty-five are built by private enterprise without assistance of any kind from the Government or from any town or city council. The building of houses on this vast scale has been one of the most important reasons why trade has improved in England. The British brickyards are working overtime. They cannot supply the demand. Bricks are being imported from Belgium.

Houses are sold on such easy terms that there is an enormous unlimited market for new homes. The average price of a house at present to be bought on the instalment system is about $3,000. The lucky purchaser would probably pay $300 down and $3.80 a week. His payments would include all charges, mortgage costs, road charges and survey fees. The gross profit of the builder on such a house would be about $200. A $6,000 house can be bought for $775 down and $7 a week. It comes to this, that any man in Great Britain who can save a day can now have a well-built and comfortable home which will be paid for in ten years.

A typical house which I visited—a $3,125 house — was semi-detached, had a living-room and dining-room each 15 feet long, three bedrooms, separate lavatory, a radio set, electric clock, gas cooker and gas boiler. There was room for a garage. This house had been sold for a deposit of $125 and instalments of $4.37 a week. It is only 13 miles from the centre of London.

Britain is rapidly becoming a nation of home owners. Almost all the new houses are built in the suburbs. Every house has its little garden. Any working man who can save $125 can have his own home.

Twenty-eight per cent of the new houses are being built on the outer fringe of London. Farm after farm is being turned into a residential district. The area of this greatest of all cities is now about 800 square miles. People no more like to live in suburbs. One London builder is building and selling thousands of houses a month.

The vital point to remember about this greatest of all house-building booms in Britain is that it is wholly due to private enterprise and has come about since the Government decided to let housing alone.

Immediately after the war, the Government took over the control of the whole matter of housing and building materials. It promised to build a million houses, to abolish the slums, to provide good and cheap houses. Rent was fixed. Prices were completely to demoralize the building trade. Last year 140,000 people were tied hand and foot by red tape. In that year not a thousand houses were built in the whole of Great Britain. If the politicians had let housing alone, there would have been no housing problem at all. The acute shortage of houses was caused by Government control.

Britain has solved the housing problem by co-operation between the speculative builders and the Building Societies. The builders design and construct the houses. They engage staffs of salesmen. They advertise in all the papers. The Building Societies take over the mortgages. They lend the builders and allow the house-buyer to pay on the instalment system. This system suits everybody concerned. The citizen gets his home. The builder gets his profit and has had bad debts. And the Building Society gets from six to seven per cent on its capital.

A British Building Society is a very different affair from the old mortgage trust. It differs from four in that it does not borrow but lends the money to house-buyers from its own funds. It does not lend as nine-tenths of the price. It receives no subsidy or state help.

There are 1,934 Building Societies in Great Britain. Their total assets are £700,000,000. They are managed efficiently and with one exception the Building Society has ever gone into bankruptcy. The Societies have at present 950,000 members. Last year they lent and bought houses.

The Halifax Building Society now overlaps all the others. It has assets of £130,000,000 and 600,000 borrowers. Its income last year was $160,000,000 and its net profit was $1,194,000. The largest Building Society in the world for 20 years.

The man who built up the Halifax Building Society and is still at the head of it, is Sir Enoch Hill. He is now 68. His life is a romance of self-help and achievement. He was a tiny worker in a mill when he was eight years old. When he was 27 he became manager of the Halifax Building Society.

He is fairly well known in the United States, as he presided at the International and Centenary Congresses of Building Societies held in Philadelphia in 1931. He led a delegation of 130 representatives of British Societies. One of his speeches was broadcast in the United States.

In the Building Society's world he knows almost all others. He has been the creative thinker of the movement. You may say that the housing problem of Britain has been solved, not by any Government, but by this och man who began his career as a silk-spinner's apprentice.

As might be expected, this boom in building has created a liveliness in the real estate market. Scores of small fortunes have been made in land. Many new towns are in the edges of London. Many large estates have been cut up. Last year 140 new companies were organized in Britain. In amount of capital, the land and building companies led the way.

The British Building Regulations and system of inspection are still the best in the world. This adds greatly to the cost of the building. It prevents the building of cheaper houses — houses that could be sold for $1,000 or $1,500. Private architecture, therefore cannot successfully handle slum clearance. It cannot be done on an economic basis that would attract private builders. Houses that cost a thousand dollar a week are declared to be necessary. The result is a shortage of the lowest-paid or casually-employed persons. But this problem, too, is solving itself. Many of the poorer classes — could be solved by the Government building their own houses — but these houses could be sold for $1,000 or $1,500. Many mixtures of wool mark many of the advance Autumn tweeds now being shown. Most attractive is a suit of brown and mauve tweed, the jacket having a swagger coat has a high neckline closing and a big gold collar of brown beaver. The frocks are cocktoad for pockets.

Lots of lookers are examining the new early Autumn frocks and coats of plain jersey. A useful model is of black jersey done on double lines with tuft thread quarter blouse sleeves and a matching sleeveless coat. The coat is fitted with a double ring trough which is pulled a long way to the front.

Very popular for vacations are the later weeks of Summer extending to early Autumn. For such a travelling there's a special useful coat fashioned of rich red woolen in a smooth weave, done in swagger lines, with soft pockets. It has a sailor collar of natural trux that extends to the shoulders.

New lines for coats are indicated from a survey of new models. Marcel Rochas has shown with the back and a little back peplum of black velvet, while the whole skirt and front of the blouse are of black woolen. Huge woolen revers in front extend to the standing velvet collar in back.

Friends return and we greet them as the gay spots usher in smart new early Autumn clothes. A charming cocktail suit is of heavy satin in bottle green the coat done with tailored revers of green cellophane sequins. The skirt is short length. It's worn with a chiffon blouse.

If you like shirtwaist dresses you'll be pleased to find them popular again for Autumn. A charming shirtwaist frock of dull purple crepe has stud sized dots of amethysta set in tiny pearls.

TYENDINAGA EAST W.I.

The August meeting of the Tyendinaga East W.I. met at the home of Mrs. R. McFarlane, with an attendance of eleven members and several visitors. The meeting opened in the usual way by singing the Ode, Owing to the absence of the pianist, Mrs. C. J. Abey acted. The Lord's prayer was then repeated in Unison. The Roll Call was answered by each member repeating a verse of an old poem "The May Queen."

The minutes were read and adopted. Mrs. A. Waddington read the Current Events, after which community singing took place. A very interesting and instructive paper was read by Mrs. W. Miller on "Canadian Trees" followed by a reading on setting out trees, and a brief talk about setting out apple-sauce by Mrs. C. J. Abey. Mrs. R. McNeil rendered a solo "He Lifted up Mr." Mrs. M. McRae then gave a splendid account of work done by Canadian Research in general. A reading "Many Things Money Can't Buy" by Mrs. W. Waddington was much appreciated by all. Being a grandmother's meeting, a contest "Grandmother's Thought" was given by Mrs. R. McMath. The two members were each presented with a treat of candy tastefully tied up with ribbon and fancy paper.

The meeting closed in the usual way after which a most delightful tea was served by the hostess and cooking committee.

A vote of thanks was given to the hostess for her hospitality and entertainment which departed for their respective homes.

Reconditioning the Complexion

She Can Give Herself a Hot Water Facial

(Copyright, 1930,
King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

That's what Uncle Sam's daughters are from the bedding of the lilac blooms in May until the leaves turn red and radiators start to steam. What a change from the old days when our forefathers swathed under chiffveils lest Mister Sun should paint his warm kisses upon their cheeks.

Women weren't supposed to look healthy then. They yearned to look as frail and ethereal as wraiths. Ah, hum! They didn't get out and bustle for pay checks — and complexions didn't stack up as well as they do now, from the boards of the oldsters.

The embroidered sun faddist may glory in her dusky pals when the calendar calls for it, but when she is not keen about looking like a South Sea Islander when the gay old summer time is over, then a long time to scoff off toasted skin cells. So it doesn't require much foresight on the part of the beauty quester to realize that now is the moment when she would start in on a reconditioning session.

She can give herself a hot water facial. What's that? We're telling you. Heat softens colderacid debris; friction removes it. A calloused spot on hand or foot can be reasoned that way if it isn't too heavy The same idea works on the complexion, neck and arms.

Get into the bath tub for this Beauty rite; it is the only way. Have the tub full of water as hot as can be comfortably endured. Immerse to the chin, the purpose being to give hands, arms and neck an everlastingly good soaking. Place steaming hot compresses on the face.

Friction with the hands follows, then scour with the wash cloth. No soap is used. Clear water stimulates decrustation, removes dead scales more thoroughly than does soap suds. Rub with the flattened palms from chin to temples. Run the finger tips in quick circles over the forehead. Clasp the hands crosswise of the throat; do a bit of kneading. Clasp them at the back of the neck; rub the neck and shoulders lightly.

Go over the arms and chest with the wash cloth.

Turn on the cold spray; dry quickly.

The next step. Have at hand an almond oil and lemon bleach; apply to the skin surface with colful of lemon juice. A small quantity of the oil will remain, upon the skin. The fresh lape it up. This preparation has not only a whitening effect, but the oil is soothing, helps to make fine and exquisite the texture of the skin.

Give special attention to the elbows. Every look pretty ragged and rough this season of the year, poor neglected orphans that they are.

OFFICIALS ACCEPT DEATH EXPLANATION

Hamilton Ont., Aug. 14 (CP)—Authorities today officially had accepted the explanation the death of Irene Shuit, 15 years old, whose body was recovered from Lake Ontario two days after she had gone for a boat ride with a young man who did not know, was accidental.

An inquest jury last night, considered evidence of a pathologist of Robert Wynne, coroner, and the girl July 31 when she was drowned, and ruled no blame could be attached to anyone.

Dr. W. J. Deadman, city pathologist, testified that death was due to drowning.

What Local Theatre Managers Have to Say About Current Offerings

AT THE CAPITOL
"Dog of Flanders"

Week End Program at Capitol Offers Excellent Entertainment

Starting tomorrow at the Capitol Theatre are two features that are bound to please and satisfy the most blase theatregoer.

One of the features "Dog of Flanders," is from a story that is more than sixty years old, has sold more than a million copies, been published in many editions and now appears as a talkie with its original charm of appeal and interest multiplied.

"Dog of Flanders," is the classic novel by Louisa de la Ramee, "Ouida", first appeared in Lippincott's Magazine, in January 1872, and has since been published in many countries by various publishers.

The producers have starred young Frankie Thomas, 12-year-old stage actor, who made such a great hit in Wednesday's Child," in this drama of childhood romance, and he is ably supported by the famous dog actor, "Lightning," which has been seen in many pictures of the past.

O. P. Heggie, as the aged grandparent to the little lad who struggles so valiantly to acquire recognition as a painter. The youthful romance is enhanced with the appearance of Helen Parrish, a young and attractive lass.

For those who like the thrills of aviation, the latest general picture "Air Hawks", a feature picture that vividly depicts the terrible destruction of science's latest death-dealing electric beam.

"Air Hawks" boasts of an excellent cast, prominent among them being Ralph Bellamy, Ben Alexil, Wiley Post, the noted flyer, Douglas Hamilton, graduate of Toronto Ont., dramatic stock and Geneva Mitchell.

Ralph Bellamy is cast as the owner of an air-line that is competing for an air-mail contracts. Competitors employ a bad actor, who has perfected the death-ray, who brings down Bellamy's plane causing the governMent and the public to lose faith in Bellamy's line. After a series of thrilling incidents, the executioner of the spies is doomed to death by his own machine.

Wiley Post, famous flying ace and holder of many world's air records is featured as himself in making a cross country stratosphere flight for Bellamy's company. Others in the cast include Victor Killian, Robert Allan and Billie Seward.

Tonight is the last showing of the two features, "Smart Girl" and "Java Head" in which the capable actor Edmund Gwenn plays a prominent role.

The Capital management proudly announces the first screen appearance of that brilliant English playwright, author and dramatist, Noel Coward, next Monday, in a screen play entitled "The Scoundrel" And for added enjoyment during the showing of Mr. Coward's film, they offer the Ontario premiere of "Old Man Rhythm" a musical comedy with a background of college life and featuring young Buddy Rogers.

AT THE BELLA
"Man On The Flying Trapeze"

W. C. Fields in Hilarious Comedy; "Shanghai" Year's Strangest Romance

With W. C. Fields, kingpin comedian as his star, "Man on the Flying Trapeze" at the Bella until Thursday, can be chalked up as one more laugh fest in Fields' long and record list of screen successes.

Bubbling over with his customary gags his habitual mirth-provoking, rib-tickling nonsense, his pathetic helpless blunderings, prepare yourself for a roll in the aisles at this master comic's merrymaking. In the role of a henpecked husband and home, a down-rodden clerk at the office, Fields assumes his characterization, combining one hilarious scene after another without a stop.

His troubles begin immediately when at the point of retiring for the night, a complete and surprise hit of mirth in itself, burglars break in and Mr. Fields is forcibly ejected by his nagging wife, Kathleen Howard, to the cellar to capture the culprits. Instead he indulges in a bit of apple-jack drinking with them, even becoming a member of a temporary quartet. He lands in jail, and the thieves go free. His daughter, Mary Brian, finally rescues him. His selfish young brother-in-law buys his ticket to the wrestling match upon which he has set his heart. His relatives by telling a lie that he must attend his mother-in-law's "funeral" and gets the afternoon off. He starts to get to the fight and disastrously after a series of rollicking events, the effect of his "funeral" story results in his denouncing his "in-laws". His departure on his daughter; from then on, things change for the better. He now begs for his return to the office where he acted as memory expert.

The film closes in the same hilarious fashion which characterizes the entire comedy.

The list of supporting players which include, in addition to Mary Brian and Kathleen Howard, Lucien Littlefield, Cready Sisters, Vera Lewis, Oscar Apfel all contribute to the fun of the piece.

Year's Strangest Romance

Fresh from his triumphs in "Private World" and "Break of Hearts", Charles Boyer launches his new bid for starring fame in Paramount's "Shanghai", the year's strangest romance which is announced as the second feature attraction on the same program.

With the colorful and mysterious capital of the Orient for its background, the picture tells the story of two who dared hatred and prejudices for love and won. Lovelia Lane is starred with Boyer.

Boyer is the mystery man of Shanghai, who, when he has risen from the gutter of the great metropolis to the pinnacle of financial power. Unimpeded by love, he has kept the secret of his origin from his closest friends.

But when Loretta Young, a young and beautiful American, founes his path, he knows suddenly that his thirst for power has blinded him to the most precious thing in the world. He pays devoted courtship to her, wins her heart and even as he does prepares the coup which will make him absolute master of the Orient.

On the eve of his final successful move, he reveals the fact that he is the son of a Manchurian princess—a despised Chinese.

The Shanghai reacts to this strange information, and how Lovelia Young proves her true worth are revealed in the touching, dramatic climax of the picture.

Prominently featured in the supporting cast of "Shanghai" are Warner Oland, Cecil Keating, Alison Skipworth and Charles Grapewin.

FINANCIAL MARKETS
NEW YORK - TORONTO - WINNIPEG

TORONTO MINES
(Close)

Toronto, Aug. 14 (CP)—Mining shares were lower all round in all groups in the early trading today but a better tone developed in the late afternoon when golds and silvers responded to a better buying demand. Improvement in the golds was mainly in the medium-price group, senior issues closing with some soft spots showing. On the whole the list was lower down for the day but losses were very narrow.

Mining stocks were pinched for narrow losses in all metal groups in today's slow trading. Silvers were hit by the severe slump in the price of metal and base metals failed to show improvement in the higher price ruling for the New York copper listings. The gold group harbored weak spot also.

Eldorado sold down 3 cents to 1.45 its low point for the current reaction from the high of 2.94 in April but it was slightly firmer around 1.46 this afternoon. Castle was halved a morning loss. Bear remained steady at 1.41. Base metals: Base Metals Corporation dropped 3 cents and Noranda was down slightly for broken lots.

Brazilian, Moneta, Pioneer and McIntyre were all heavy in the Senior gold group.

TORONTO STOCKS CLOSE

Toronto, Aug. 14.—(CP)— Agricultural implement stocks came in for a good play on the Toronto Industrial Market today, both Massey Harris and Cockshutt Plow turning over in heavy volume at better prices. Trading continued heavy in the issue and oil stocks with the price tone strong for these and other industrial shares. Gains out-numbered losses over the board.

Two of the big Oils, Imperial and International-Petroleum, gave the Industrial section strong leadership when the up side in the early trading today. Pete advancing more than a point and Imperial adding 34 to 3. British American continued unchanged. The general tone was firm.

Distillery stocks moved around mid-day and were holding gains of around 2 points. Gold was also the turnover heaviest in Distillers-Seagrams, C.P.R. was buoyed in sympathy with the U.S. Rails gaining a half-point and Nickel held around 36 for a time. Steel, Bank and Building stocks remained quiet.

NEW YORK CLOSE

New York, Aug. 14—(AP)—Substantial advances in a number of leading specialties carried stocks only fraction to an otherwise dull stock market during late trading today.

At the beginning of the final hour American Agricultural Chemical of Delaware was up 4, Cuban-American Sugar preferred 3, and Auburn Automobile were each 2 higher and gains of 1 or more were shown by American Chain, Colgate-Palmolive-Peet, Texas-Pacific Coal and Oil, Postal Telegraph pfd., and General Electric.

Losses of fractions to a point or more were set up by U. S. Steel, General Motors, Chrysler, U. S. Smelting, American Can; Sears Roebuck; North American; Continental Can; Santa Fe and Union Pacific. The late tone was barely steady. Sales approximated 1,900,000 shares.

WALL STREET FINANCIAL

New York, Aug. 14 (AP)—The Stock Market slackened its pace somewhat today but the number of shares still pointed upward or held even. Alcohol and gas were the beneficiaries of special news developments and gave the best performance of the upside.

Among Dominion stocks, Canadian Pacific gained a point on action on active buying. International Nickel and Dominion Steel were steady. On the curb, Hiram Walker improved slightly while Lake Shore was slightly lower.

Among shares advancing around 1 point or more were Auburn, Distillers, U.S., Industrial Alcohol, American Commercial Alcohol, Texas Pacific Coal and Oil, Postal Telegraph Preferred, Briggs Mfg., Deere, Gold Dust, Colgate-Palmolive-Peet, And Allied Chemical. General Electric got into new 1935 high ground during the forenoon at 32 1-2.

Shares holding about steady included Bethlehem Steel, U. S. Steel, Chrysler, New York Central, Anaconda, Kennecott, International Telephone, American Telephone, North American, U.S. Smelting; one of the foremost silver producers lost around 2 points before steadying.

Board Room Gossip

As supplied to Biggar and Cranford by Biggar and Cranford

Street sentiment has improved very noticeably in the past week or so and the feeling is gaining that the market here is beginning to catch up with Wall Street, where the rise has been maintained with very little interruption for more than a month. Some groups are coming to life, that a month ago would have appeared a very unlikely probability.

The announcement of $1,000,000 contract for Foundation Company for the erection of a government building in Halifax brings the total of business for this company on the Maritimes up to $3,500,000. In addition, the company has on its books a number of smaller orders. This company's total capitalization consists of 1,000,000 shares of common stock and although a deficit of $1,000,000 was reported for the year ended April 30th, last, it is certain that results for the current fiscal period will show good earnings on the stock. In 1924, Foundation Company earned $2.56 a share.

Brazilian Traction has scored a good recovery from its recent low. It is understood that the selling responsible for the decline emanated from Brussels when a substantial block of the stock was being liquidated. The selling from that quarter has now been completed.

Brazilian Traction, a leading world utility, has up to this week been the particular to the forward movement of this class of security. The company's earning trend has been upward without interruption for the last thirteen months and the statement for the first half produced since 1923, its financial position is the strongest in Canada. At the end of 1934, net working capital stood at $34,250,347 as against $15,630,296 at the end of 1929. Any adjustment of the exchange situation would operate as were experienced in Canadian Pacific.

Garnson and Ostigny in their Market Letter state that if we look back over the past, the Canadian stocks during periods when we have witnessed bull markets in the States we will find that many local stocks have ended up with just as large gains as those which were prominent in corresponding American issues. It has been one of the leading characteristic of the local stocks, however, it has been the lag in the start of the move and then at the end the lag in the breakdown. Consequently it has in the past —and doubtless will be again now —been possible to make very timely and profitable trades in the local market by merely taking the cue from the action of the American market and then exercising the necessary discretion in trailing off the inevitable broadening at the trend into the local stocks.

Boston Red Sox Pay Dividends Moving Into Third Place of American, Beating Chicago

Whitehead of Sox Loses 11th Game in 13 Starts

GEHRINGER OUT

No Games Played in National Loop Tuesday

By ANDY CLARKE

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

The golden boys of Boston have begun to pay dividends on the ambitious investment of Thomas Yawkey.

The Red Sox, fashioned from the deep bill of a rich man have climbed into third place in the American League and in doing so have shown class, that perhaps presages even a higher rating before the race is run.

They tumbled the White Sox from third place and took that niche themselves yesterday, when they beat the staggering boys from the Windy City 9-5. Monson limited a 14 hit barrage against John Whitehead and Jack Salveson with Bill Werber belting a homer, Rocky Cramer a pair of triples and a double and Melo Almada two doubles and a single.

Rookie Going Back

It was the 11th defeat in 13 starts for Whitehead the Rookie righthander who was a star at the League earlier in the season, when he chalked up eight straight wins.

The Sox are six games behind the Yankees, who are in second place and 11 behind the first place Tigers. Its a long pull to the pennant.

The Senators took the measure of Detroit yesterday as Earl Whitehill, Washington veteran southpaw, pulled out with a 4-3 decision in 10 innings. The Tigers tallied all of their runs in the third inning when Pete Fox hit a home run homer of the season with Flea Clifton and Jo-Jo White on base.

Clifton had replaced Charley Gehringer at second base, the latter being forced out of action for the first time in two years because of a knee injury suffered in the game against Chicago Sunday.

Ryan Figures in Win

Charley Ruffing held the Indians to four hits as the Yankees scored six runs in the first inning but Sloppy Fielding on the part of the Indians cost the pastmaster another unearned run. Besides twirling three ball hitting victory, Ruffing helped his cause by getting the left field wall in the eighth to score two runs. Bloody Ryan, the relief pitcher, concluded the affair in the eighth with a single.

Earl Averill scored both of Cleveland's runs, the first on Vosmik's hit through the box in the sixth, the second in the ninth on Hale's single, Averill sliding and advancing to third on Vosmik's single and Trosky's infield out.

Philadelphia athletics maintained four St. Louis hurlers to pound out a 16-1 victory. The next of Connie Mack blasted out 17 hits, every man in the Athletic lineup with the exception of Marberry entering the scoring column.

MONTREAL CUTS CHIEFS' LEAD

Defeat Orioles Twice But Syracuse Also Takes Rochester

(By the Associated Press)

It's quite a drop from the pennant race of New York Giants to Montreal Royals of the International League but if Leon Chagnon has his way there's going to be an extra load of money coming his way even if it's in the International League playoffs instead of the World series.

Chagnon had been released recently to Royals by Giants, who found him inadequate as a relief hurler. It seemed Leon had been throwing too many "down ward" balls when a pop-up was needed.

Chagnon made his debut last night as a Montreal hurler and turned in a sparkling performance as he held the slugging Baltimore Orioles to four scattered hits to win the first game of a double header 7-0.

Royals barely outlasted Orioles in the second game finally winning out 9-8 as Pete Appleton, Baltimore pitcher subdued the Birds. Thirty-one players saw action in the game.

Chiefs' Lead Cut

Royals double win cut the lead of the leading Syracuse Chiefs to one-half game, although the high-riding Chiefs kept to their winning ways with a 7-2 triumph over the Rochester Red Wings for the fifth straight win.

Buffalo Bisons moved into fourth place as they bowled over Albany Senators in both halves of another twin bill 9-2 and 4-3 to stretch their winning streak to five.

Hod Lisenbee barely missed a shut out in the first game as Eddie Chiocki blasted a home run with two out in the final inning. Up to that point Lisenbee had allowed only one runner to reach second.

Newark Bears routed Toronto Maple Leafs 10-1 behind the steady hurling of Marvin Duke. Bears blasted Elicher and Nekola for fourteen hits scoring five runs in the first inning.

YESTERDAY'S STARS

(By The Associated Press)

Red Ruffing, Yankees—Held Indians to four hits, drove in two runs with a double, in 11th victory of season.

Bradley Myer and Earl Whitehill, Senators—Myer's three hits helped smother Tigers, gave him league batting lead over Joe Vosmik with .347; Whitehill held Detroit to seven hits.

Johnny Marcum, Athletics—Snuffed out Browns with seven hits as teammates piled up 17 to win 16 to 1.

Dusty Cooke and Mel Almada, Red Sox—Cooke hit two triples and double, Almada drove in four runs with two doubles and a single as Boston beat Chicago to take third place.

YOUNG CANADAS TAKE AAJMAAS

With a four run splurge in the third inning the Young Canada Club forged to the fore and downed the Aajmaa A.C. 6 to 5 in the second game of the Senior City softball play-offs at Central Park last night. The victory elevates the Young Canadas into a tie in the final playdowns, each club having won a game.

Eddie Schrieder ascended the mound for the Young Canadas and kept seven hits well scattered to win, while his teammates blasted George Aeskinan from the hill-top, Johnnie Bawden being rushed to fill the gap for the Aajmaas in the third. The clubs will continue the doubtfilles at Central Park again this evening.

Circuit blows by Reid and Murray gave the Young Canadas a decided advantage in the earlier frames. The winners played stellar baseball defensively and gave Schrieder excellent support. They batted a four base hit for the losers as they pressed in the ninth. Miller led off the winners in the pinches. Both Aajmaa hurlers proved stellar but as they passed six, while Schrieder issued only three free tickets. Splendid support by his teammates featured in Schrieder's pitching victory for the Young Canadas.

The lineups:

Young Canadas: Palmer 2b, M. Latchford 1b, Murray, ss, Reid 3b, W. Latchford lf, Miller cf, Alexander rf, Robinson c, and Schrieder p.

Aajmaas: St. Denis 2b, Tuttle and Hanna cf, Henn 3b, Cook ss, H. Rawden lb, Kiser rf, Clarke lf, Gray c, Jenkinson and J. Bawden p.

Score by innings:

Aajmaa A.C. .. 000 110 22—6 9 3
Young Canada 014 010 0x—6 9 1

Favorite for Hambletonian Is Greyhound

(By Orlo Robertson Associated Press Sports Writer)

Goshen, N. Y., Aug. 14 (AP)—on Broadway, Park Avenue and farm called the same language today as they invaded this little orange county capital scene 40,000 strong for the ninth renewal of the $37,000 Hambletonian Stakes for three year old trotters.

Not all of the visitors knew the language of the horses but they concentrated on the same problem of picking the winner of the world's richest light harness horse racing stake from nine starters. Six out of ten came up with the same answer—Greyhound, smooth riding grey son of Guy Abbey from H. Baker's St. Charles, Ill. stable.

Hindrocks came early to get in the big crowd. Before the reserve seats having been sold weeks ago, Steve Phillips was scheduled to send the two fillies, two geldings and five colts away at 2 p.m. Eastern Standard Time.

Greyhound, unbeaten this year, remained the odds-on choice to chalk up his fifth victory of 1935 in the $43,750 winners share of the spoils, $18,670. So popular was the grey speedster many horsemen predicted the race would be decided in two heats.

The Baker colt drew an outside pole position for the first brush but was thought to be to his advantage. He is a slow starter and from the outside was expected to avoid the early jamming leaving him in condition to give his best under the guidance of Sep Palin of Indianapolis in the final drive.

CURRENT SPORT

DAY BY DAY

It is safe to say, that night baseball would certainly prove a boom to the diamond pastime in Belleville. When over 3,000 fans will jam their way into the local baseball enclosure and quietly sit in the most uncomfortable positions and remain until the last out was made, well it is safe in saying, that nocturnal baseball would go over big in this community.

Of course the feature, of last night's Perth-Home of David ball game was the lighting equipment, aside from the antics and baseball played. Insofar as the actual game was concerned, the beshikered lights played a far better brand of diamond ball, perhaps due to the fact they were more used to the lights. In regards to the lighting of the grounds, it was all that could be asked for. To the average baseball fan the flight of the ball could be clearly distinguished regardless as to the speed and height attained. Of course another feature was the large attendance, ten policemen being required to control traffic in the park.

Naturally the fans were interested in Elmer Dean, brother of Dizzy and Daffy Dean of the "Ducks". Dean, we understand, only used one or two inning each game, day after day, for an effective lasting medium. Last night he got by the initial frame and did not relish the idea of being replaced on the hilltop. "I'm going or, let me stay in three innings more," said he, so," Dean was heard remark as he was replaced by Miller. The manager of the House of David during their warming up period prior to the game, coupled with their showmanship and famed "pepper game" in the seventh, added considerably to the night's entertainment. The manner in which the beshikered lads manipulated the spherical in the "pepper game," a juggling act was most interesting.

Herbe Hibbs, pitching-outfielder for Perth, clouted the only homer of the game. Incidentally Hibbs was the drive over the centre fielder's head and over the barrier in middle field, was the longest hit registered in the local park since Ken Harrison blasted one into the same spot many years ago... We honestly believe Hibbs' clout was entirely over the wall on a direct line all during flight. The snappy play of the House of David nine was another feature and all enjoyed the night's entertainment.

When the punt racing sailors cruise up to the starting buoy this afternoon, a special challenge race will be under way. It seems that Jack Zufelt has been "hot" around bottomed punt, similar to that originally used by Jack Smith of yesterday Mr. Hinchey challenged Jack Zufelt in a special race, both craft being about the same size and style. Although the Allegro, owned and sailed by Jack Hinchey has competed in races before, while today's special race will be Jack Zufelt's initial contest. Wrstle all of this is going on the usual S.E.A.C. Wednesday afternoon sailing matinee will be in progress in all of their seven classes.

Autumn breezes must be just around the corner. Today Bill Fry, manager of G.R.F.U. football in Belleville, issued the call for a meeting of interested rugby football players would be held at the Y.M.C.A. on Friday night. We understand, that the fall pastime is being mooted by many influential citizens this season and a goodly turn out of citizens are also to be interested in football is asked. Such men as D. MacLaurin, George Ostrom, Chas. Dolan, Bert Boyce, Steve Thompson, Frank Devenish, Drs Morgan, Flynn and Kennedy, F. Polwell and others are sure to be on hand for the club's inaugural meeting of 1935... Incidentally the "Belle Ewart" are also about through with their Toronto grouping and are planning to get into the Lake Shore group along with Belleville, Lindsay and Peterboro. A combine team from Cobourg and Port Hope would round out a splendid five team league. It has been suggested. Although football has been played by the local collegians for many years, last season saw the first O.R.F.U. game played in this city. The game will develop locally, but needs the support of interested citizens at meetings as is being held at the Y.M.C.A. on Friday.

With both Jack Williams and Bud Wilkins ready to ascend the mound for the Belleville Terrs at midnight to play their last away from home C.O.B.L. game in Kingston this evening, the win the locals will elevate them into sole possession of second place by two points standing. The return game will be played in Belleville, Friday evening, and also will be the Radios' final appearance before the league playdowns commence.

Jack Kidd, catcher for the local Kiwanis junior ball team, was a visitor to the city last night the Cobcore junior game. "These clubs play a snappy brand of ball and will prove stiff opposition," says Jack.

Young Canadas got sweet revenge last night when they evened matter by the Sen-or City softball playoffs by downing the Aajmaas 6-5 behind Eddie Schrider's good hurling. Incidentally last night the Barrage-led crew showed a complete reversal of form as they played stellar ball defensively, while the night previous their offensive play was very poor. Wild two run single by Stubbs lit... ... and a pair of Extra base blows by Murray and Reid sealed George Jenkinson's sojourn on the Aajmaas' hill top and Johnny Bawden, who had won his own the night previous, was rushed to the mound, but alas the damage had been done... Who'll win the Young Canadas are as well off as ever.

It was announced today, that the play-offs in the local Mercantile softball loop would commence this am. London Lunch, first placed team will clash with Bonds Bakery, fourth placed outfit, while on Thursday night the second and third placed clubs tangle when the Ontario Intelligencer nine meet Simpsons at the Yeomans Street grounds, this evening's game being played at the Alexandra Park. The winners of these games in the series will tangle in a final five game tilt.

Record Crowd Sees Night Ball Game in This City And Impressed With Display

House of David Team Easily Defeat Perth

QUITE VERSATILE

The largest crowd of baseball enthusiasts ever to convene in the new Exhibition Park in Belleville witnessed the first nocturnal baseball game ever to be presented in this city, when the famed House of David baseball club battled and defeated the Perth "Stars" of the O.B.L. Senior League by the score of 11 to 2 before over 3,000 patrons, who stamped their approval on night baseball in Belleville last night.

Carrying their own lighting equipment the House of David baseball club, of Benton Harbor, Michigan, created four huge standards about the playing field, each carrying a cluster of five mammoth flood lights, that lighted the playing field artificially and to observe the slight of each pitched ball and hit to even the most pessimistic fan. The flight of the ball was easily distinguished from all angles of the park.

Playing a fine brand of defensive ball the famed bewhizered House of David nine proved far better nocturnal ballists and handily defeated their Eastern Ontario rivals. It was a marvelous crowd, that thronged the Exhibition Fair Grounds, occupying every available sitting space and standing room in the field at considerable distance. With a three run splurge in the initial frame the Benton Harbour "whiskers" coasted home to victory.

Elmer Dean, Cooley, brother of the famous Dizzy and Daffy Dean, started on the hilltop for the House of David and pitched the opening frame. He was relieved by Roy Miller, the bewhiskered fire-ball hurler, who struck out four, but finally issued a free pass to the initial sack. Miller's control was all that could be desired, as in the first game the antics of the House of David pitcher during warming up practice proved most thrilling and interesting, while their famed "pepper game" during the seventh inning proved most amusing as they threw ball after ball. Perth of David gave a splendid exhibition of baseball juggling at a baseball council with clowning.

Lloyd Andrews, centre fielder and clean-up man, ascended the hilltop for the Perth team and gave a splendid display of baseball, although his control in the first two innings was somewhat wild as two crews whiffed six, but passed four. One of the features of the game was a mighty home run hit by Herbie Perth's pitching outfielder, which sailed over the centre fielder over the barrier in centre field for a circuit clout. Herbie Hibbs and Begby supplied the hitting strength for both clubs. The pitching of Roy Miller of David impressed the largest gathering of baseball enthusiasts ever to view a baseball game in the local Fair Grounds.

Bruno's Friend To be Executed

Trenton, N. J., Aug. 14—(AP)—John Favorito, prison comrade of Bruno Richard Hauptmann, will go to his death this week for the slaying of an acquaintance of Charles A. Lindbergh.

During the dragging months of awaiting results of appeals to New Jersey's high courts, the inevitable death house friendship developed between Favorito and the man convicted of the Lindbergh baby slaying. The 35-year-old Edgewater mechanic, on his way to the electric chair, was expected to bid farewell to Hauptmann.

Favorito was convicted of slaying Emil Yphrony, gasoline station operator, of Englewood Cliffs, during a $4. holdup.

MOORE SAFELY ST RETCHES A TRIPLE

In the fifth inning of a Giant-with the run thus manufactured; Bran Moore batted battle at Perth Grounds, New York, with two Giants disposed of, Joe Moore, slugging New York outfielder, slammed one of Bob Smith's best shoots to the right-centre field fence; a good triple. Handy Moore, centre-fielder, was spent when he finally caught up with the ball, and his relay was too late to save his namesake, put on a little more power, and set out to make it a home run inside the park. The pictures illustrate his safe arrival

Citizens Predict Era of "Shorts" Not Far Off

Are you one of the small army of local citizens who this year have evidenced a desire to stroll the streets about your daily duties with shirt sleeves rolled past the elbows and curly locks, unhampered by restricting hat or cap, waving in the breeze?

Take heart. The stamp of approval has been placed by the feminines now open season on hot weather attire. The city has lost none of its dignity and personal liberty has triumphed. Even the wearing of shorts by men during the heat stricken months of summer would not be frowned upon by the majority of women of the city, it was intimated by those who were questioned on the matter.

The man who cloaks his dignity and swelters quietly but obviously under the burden of a suit coat this hot weather is definitely one of the unregenerated to whom suit wearing is a hallowed rite, declared one young office worker who paused in the middle of a business life to give unqualified assent to the wearing of what every citizen of the city knows like. "But, he looks so overheated with a suit coat on, and it's all so unnecessary. He wants to go in his shirt sleeves, minus the coat, it's okay with me and he looks fat twice as comfortable."

In an office where two typewriters synchronized in se-duet of sound under the busy fingers of two office workers the same thing in opinion was passed on by two other young ladies.

"Let 'em wear shorts if they want to, and welcome, also a sensible coat and becoming to the majority of men. They're cool and comfortable, and when they are worn with sleeveless shirts, it seems to me that they are the ideal thing for summer," declared No. 1.

Sports and recreation shorts look a little modern just now because they are new. But so was the one piece bathing suit a short time ago. But that they look a whole lot better than trousers must be due to wear which were creased at the knee. In a few months everyone will be wearing shorts, women and all, predicted No. 2.

The ensemble it is pointed out is one reason why suit coats are "falling from the clothes tree" on half of those who register at the store's better class hosiery and shirt sleeves and adopt that dress during their stay. Summer is the top pressing season in this city.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

Wilfred Colonel—And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Ready to Go

The liver should pour into your bowels about a pint of bile each day. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food just decays in the bowels. Gas blocks up your system. You get constipated. Your whole system is poisoned and you feel sour, sick and the world looks punk.

Laxatives are only a makeshift. They force the bowels to move, but do not get at the cause. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a doctor's prescription for constipation. It starts to get those two pounds of bile flowing freely and makes you feel like a million dollars. Sweet, gentle, yet dependable in its action. Even the children love it. Ask your druggist for Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin today. Realize why millions use it. 1935-8

WANE FORESEEN OF WAITRESS ERA

Return of Art of Dining Since U.S. Repeal Means Men Will do Swing

New York, Aug. 14—A return to the art of dining, ruined during prohibition, is closing the doors of many restaurants to waitresses, Paul Henkel, president of the Society of Restaurateurs, declared yesterday. Mr. Henkel thinks a meal should be served better by a trained man.

His discussion of the man versus woman aspect of restaurant service was occasioned by the fact that the minimum wage board that Industrial Commissioner Elinor F. Andrews set up for the restaurant industry will hold a public hearing tomorrow to hear restaurant operators on the proposed $14.50 an hour minimum wage for women and minors.

Waitresses have no minimum wage protection, and the Andrews commission found that their pay ranged from 10 to 50 cents an hour. The minimum proposed would be $2.54 to $14.40 a basic week of forty-eight hours.

Strong Opposition Predicted

The hearing will be at 80 Centre Street, and Mr. Henkel predicted that many cafe owners of the city would take a day off to make their opposition.

The restaurant business has been the salvation for many women who could not afford to take lifetime courses, he said, and "In a restaurant women can earn from $25 to $40 a week, which is three to four hours as much and more than they could in 48-hours-a-week jobs in other businesses in a full week's day."

Waiting on his long experience, Mr. Henkel traced the rise of the waitress to the prohibition era for restaurants.

"Women were first employed in the service restaurants at the time we entered the war and have grad-ually increased in number in the tearoom and luncheon type eat-ing places. Men, during prohibi-tion, the art of dining entirely dis-appeared and with it the old-time chop house. Men, I am thinking about those lamented times when they patronized them.

There was, however, a silver lining.

Return of High-Class Service

"I am happy to say," Mr. Henkel continued, "that with the return of alcoholic beverages, wines and delicacies, the men will be in a gradually coming into its own and with the high-class service in mind, which will respect the waitress cannot take the place of the waiter."

He offered examples to show his point. "Take the case of a steak. He went on, "he will bring a steak well done, and a steak rare. They will cut it and ask if that has been done right. After it is cooked, he will put it on the platter, season it, and serve it, leaving the bal-ance of the meal to the waiter."

This lost art is gradually re-turning, and will be an improvement in the employment of trained wait-ers. Patrons certainly will prefer the trained waiter to the one who having food brought to them, put it on the table, and left it there, then being left to shift for them-selves.

Mr. Henkel does not employ women in his Wall Street restaurant.

EXPEDITION SEES NO BLUE BEARS

Philadelphia Group, After Month in North, Reports Plenty of Flies

Whether the so-called blue bear of Alaska is a separate species or merely a color-phase of the black bear, which lives in the same re-gion, still remains a moot ques-tion, so far as results of the Cal-ifornia Academy of Sciences-Philadelphia Academy of Natural Sciences of Philadel-phia expedition are concerned, two mem-bers of the expedition, who recent-ly returned to San Francisco, even saw one of these rare bluish brutes during their four weeks of explor-ation and collecting on the Alaska handle of Southeastern Alaska.

The party, headed by Dr. H. C. Carpenter of Wilmington, Del., a trustee of the Philadelphia Acad-emy, Mrs. Carpenter, their son, R. H. Carpenter, Jr., and William K. Jarvis, Philadelphia, and Dr. Alan Lance, Jr., of the academy's staff, was successful in collecting a fine-looking bird and mammal specimens and moving pictures of Alaska wild-life and breath-taking landscapes. Among the birds is a small Toby-throated hum-ming bird which lives in the Kuprenof Island, says a bulletin issued by the party.

"These humming birds, which are the brilliant in color of all the hum-mingbird tribe and the only ones found in the United States, are quite abun-dant in Southeastern Alaska," Mr. Lanc said, "although the average person seldom thinks of their pres-so far north. Also, we found a color which differs in several way from the one around here, being larger and shorter of tail."

The party had to wear net-masks against the hordes of mosquitos which are twice as large as the Jersey brand and ten times as vi-cious. These, plus armies of "no-seums," small flies that bite like "like sixty", and of white-stocking flies, whose legs appear to be long appareled, helped to enliven the twenty-hour daily portion of day-light.

"Nature compensates for these pests with an abundance of fruits and vegetables of enormous size and fine flavor," explained Mr. Lanse. "We found an luscious strawberry, one of which would just about fill a pint basket. Blackberries and blue-berries are also plentiful."

The party left Seattle on May 1 and returned June 1. Besides Alaska, it visited waters and land, and saw a total of twenty-one brown and nine black bears."

SINISTER SHADOW

by JOHN GOODWIN

"To King's Elm House!" exclaimed Sonia, "surely I'll come. In fact, I was thinking how I could suggest it. You see—I want to give any help I can—"

Howe's eyes twinkled.

"The right spirit, I'd rather like to have you along with me. It might save time—time's important in a case like this. Come on, then. You're rather a clever young lady, you certainly have nerve and brains. I should think," he added reflectively, as he escorted her out by the back way and along the footpath to the park, "Mr. Chalmers is rather attached to you, isn't he?"

Sonia laughed.

"I think he is—rather."

"That's no business of mine," said Howe, "except in the sense that everything touching on this affair is my business. While we're on the way I'd like you to tell me what you thought of the staff up at Mr. Cooke's."

"I saw so little of them; except the dozen whom I didn't much like. There was a young footman—they all seemed to me a very decent lot."

Howe said no more till they reached the great iron-work gate, where he pealed the bell; the lodgekeep came out and peered through the grille at the big policeman, bristling and fidgeting with the key.

"Open this gate," said Howe sharply, and as it swung slowly back he passed Sonia through, turning to the lodgeman.

"You've a private telephone here to the House haven't you? Take me to it."

The silent porter led him into the little lodge. The telephone was fixed upon behind the door. Howe discovered the wires, opened the switchbox and put the whole thing out of action.

"You stay here—and attend to your job," he said to the lodgekeeper. "Give me your gate key—I'll take charge of that till I come back."

He left the man staring after him sullenly, and strode along the avenue with Sonia at his side. The vast bulk of King's Elm House loomed up as they turned the corner, and from time to time Sonia saw it in the light of day. "A fine old place," sergeant Howe said, as if thinking aloud. "And a mint of money behind it. Queer to think that the owner of it's lyin' dead in Norchester mortuary, and never a child left to claim it. That's his blind him to other and was mainly study up at the corner of the way wing; he was a late sitter, an' many a night I've seen the night in it at two in the morning, from the time I took road. I suppose, Miss Neil, you don't happen to know which room that light was in?"

"Oh, I do," said Sonia, "Mr. Bannister had welcomed her; in that room on the right, she had sat at dinner with him. Later, when the drawing-room door stood open, he had put his arm about her . . . through the diamond around her neck.

In the hall she stopped. But Sergeant Howe beckoned to her to follow.

"You may as well come up," he said, "if you don't mind. I'd sooner you kept with me."

It was clear enough to Sonia that he wanted her to be present at the meeting with the Selbys. Why, she did not know.

They went up the stairs together. Howe moved very quietly for so large a man. He glanced quickly about him as they reached the wide landing.

To the right the library door stood open; it was Cooke's private sanctum, and the sergeant had once interviewed him there. But Sonia saw him turn his head sharply and stare at a door on the farther side as though he had heard something. Not a sound reached her, but Howe had a quick ear. He signed her to stand still, and pointed across, put a hand to the knob and opened the door quickly.

The room was Bannister Cooke's bedroom, in considerable disorder, a chair overturned, a dinner-jacket flung across the foot of the bed. Though the owner was not present, the room did not lack human interest.

Deborah Selby and her mother were kneeling beside a davenport desk against the inner wall; the elder woman was trying a bunch of keys, the daughter prying the heavy lid with a chisel.

They both seemed considerably agitated over the task; as the door clicked wide Deborah started up, concealing the chisel hurriedly. She betrayed no alarm; the expression on the dark Bille face was one of sheer fury as she stared past the policeman at Sonia, standing just outside.

Mrs. Selby heaved herself to her feet, her face purple. She strode towards Howe, an immense figure for a woman, almost matching him in size, her black-silk covered bosom heaving tumultuously.

"I been expecting you'd see the end of this quickly, but before she could answer Deborah came forward.

"I knew there'd be murder," she said ironically. "I told mother so last night! She pointed a shaking finger at Sonia. "Mr. Chalmers . . . he came after her last night. There was a row between him an' the master . . . I heard young Chalmers cursing an' threatening . . . heard him say to the master, 'I'll kill you!' That's what he said—as plain as I say it now I heard him! He said that to Mr. Cooke . . ."

Mrs. Selby caught her daughter by the wrist.

"Hold your tongue, Deb!"

"Nobody's going to stop me! It was murder. Mr. Chalmers and that girl, they was a crazy jealousy. When they'd gone Mr. Cooke went out, my father went with him. And Mr. Cooke's dead—an' my father—where is he—"

"Now you cool down, my girl," said Howe gently. "I'll have some questions to ask you about—don't you be afraid we went' get this straight, Mrs. Selby, why were you trying to open that desk?"

"—" The woman checked herself. "Mr. Cooke's orders. I'm his housekeeper. You know that, don't you?"

"Ah!" said Howe. "Well, here are my orders; I'm in charge here. You and your daughter go downstairs and wait for me. You won't have to wait long, I don't think. Mrs. Selby you need worry about your husband. What I know of Selby, he's a man well able to look after himself."

Sergeant Howe disembarked then both gently across the landing to the head of the stairs and watched them go. When they had disappeared he turned to Sonia, white faced but still self-possessed, and sighed.

"Now I'm going to the library there an' sit down, Miss Neil," he said, "and you'll sit with me."

He entered Bannister Cooke's bedroom and closed the door. After a moment's hesitation he followed, flung across the bed-rail and the evening dress lying on the floor he crossed his attention to the davenport desk. He made a cursory examination, but later attempts to open it.

"Oh that you could have taken Selby long," said Howe, drawing the dead man's bunch of keys from his pocket. He fitted one, then another into the lock, and lifted the lid back with a long lift in the direction of the light.

He made a further search through the desk, locked it, and joined Sonia in the library, taking a chair beside her.

"I'd like you to take a look at that, Miss Neil," he said, handing her the letter. "You're not seen it before, eh?"

She read it through, while Howe watched her face. Here was the thing Neil; Brian had given her the gist of it the night before. She was reading Bannister Cooke's death warrant.

"No," she said quietly. "Of course I've not seen it. What does it mean?"

TARZAN THE UNTAMED— (Metropolitan Newspaper Feature Service)

"For three months after the Red War began, I was part of the time in Wilhelmstal, Red Headquarters; the rest of it, within the British lines. I deserved my title as a clever spy for once did the Reds succeed that my real allegiance was with England. Much of all that happened after that, Roger, you know, or have heard from Tarzan's own lips.

"It was when this strange ape-man's path crossed mine, seeing me in conference with the Red staff, that he believed me their spy. When, later, he discovered me, disguised as an officer, inside the British lines, who can blame him for hounding my trail? Before my eyes, he throttled Karzenoff, my vile superior, who had wantonly ravaged his home.

"I tried, God forgive me, to kill the beast man, to save my needed passport and hide from him my real identity, Lieutenant Jeffrey Rede Claire. He is an English lord, but none of them can solve the mysteries of his goings or comings. And we now, shall never know; for here we are, my friend, back to the tangled web of luck and here, we are doomed to perish."

After she ended her story, the girl remained thoughtfully silent. The dreaded night wore on, the third shook their wrecked plane fell. Food, water and firewood were almost exhausted. At red moon lighted the desolate landscape where man and girl, their mutual love sustaining them, awaited the end. Suddenly she touched him on the arm. "LOOK!" she whispered.

Little Benny's Note Book

He was eating breakfast and I was asking pop a lot of questions and getting a few answrs, and me said, Sh!, quiet, I'm trying to think.

What are you trying to think of? pop said, and ma said, If I knew that I'd draw a sigh of relief and stop thinking, I mean I'm just trying to remember something and it's on the tip of my mind and yet all the kings horses dont seem able to drag it uth. I had a certain word to remind me of it, but now that's gone too. If I could only think of that word the battle would be won.

Was it illotraphy? pop said, and ma said, It was just a simple word, as near as I can recall.

Was it dithyrambic? pop said. That's always where me as a very simple kind of word, sincat silly in fact. Be quiet, and ma said, O dear, I guess I'll have to give it up.

Could it of been packyderm by any means? pop said, and ma said, That seems rather elefant, doesn't it? But it wasn't the werd, but it will do just as well. The werd I meant was suppose to suggest eating out, and that's what I wanted to remember. Nora wanted the afternoon off and I just thawt it would be an excellent opportunity to eat out for a change, she said.

Horse Radket to blazes, my confounded spirit of helpfulness has got me in another mess. I'll never be rich or successful until I learn to ruthlessly disregard the strivings and sufferings of others, pop said.

Him hating to eat anywhres but home, and I said, Well G, ma, how does elefant make you think of eating out? and pop said, Yes for Peet sake how?

He eats with his trunk, doesn't he? and I that's not out, what did ma said, and pop said, I practical joke, good by.

And he folded up his paper and burry up left for his office.

Gallant Desperado

By SAMUEL REEVE

Feature Editor Blake looked away from the intriguing eyelashes that adorned Elizabeth's expression of anxiety. "I'm sorry, Miss Atwell," he said crisply. "But you fell down badly on two features the assignments I've given you so far. This will have to be your last chance."

Elizabeth was duly contrite. Her new job had made her the envy of her whole graduating class, and she couldn't possibly afford to lose it. "I'm positive I'll put it over this time," she assured him earnestly.

"Well, you're getting a tough one. Bring back a story before 10:00—tomorrow night on Dutch Wagner, the racketeer, and his sidekicks, Handsome Bill Phillips and Frankie Griffin."

"Dutch Wagner" — Elizabeth's heart sank at the words. That was more than a tough assignment. It meant she was already through, unless she could do the impossible. Wagner and his crowd hung out in the Gull club, a gambling dive on a yacht in the Hudson.

Midnight found Elizabeth pacing back and forth on the deserted landing place from which a private launch carried guests to the Gull club. A hundred yards out in the river she could see the black, ratish craft gleaming with colored lights. But it might have been ten miles away, for the girl had no means of summoning the launch, and no assurance that it would take her if it came.

Then a taxi drove up and a man alighted as he walked to the edge of the landing. He gave a prolonged, long whistle, and turned to Elizabeth. "Did you signal?" He was a powerfully built man, with a determined face.

"Naw, I lost three of those figgers, and I to' Bill Phillips if he wants me to meet him on board, he's gotta get me without it."

The man looked at her sharply, and then smiled with friendly politeness. "You're a friend of Bill Phillips."

She boasted. "Sure, Bill's a swell pup. They don't come any better—or tougher."

The stranger seemed duly impressed and invited her to make the trip in the launch with him. On board they were greeted by a brawny mate in the uniform of a common sailor. He seemed to know Elizabeth's companion, and the two passed. As they entered the cabaret, however, the girl's blood chilled. The head waiter had just addressed the man with her as Mr. Phillips! Stopping abruptly, she glanced back at the launch, as if to make a last minute's dash. But now the man took her arm and smiled. "Let's go find Phillips," he said quietly.

The Gull club was more a gambling den than a dance hall.

"Guess Phillips isn't here yet," Elizabeth's companion murmured. "How about a dance or two until he comes?"

The dance stretched into several, gradually Elizabeth's tension eased. As they sat at a table, a half hour later she cautiously began to ask questions. Phillips, or whoever he really was, seemed to know almost everybody in sight.

Curiously enough although Elizabeth's companion appeared to know all these men well, he made no effort to introduce the girl to anybody. Furthermore, he in turn began questioning Elizabeth, equal skill, to find out how well she knew Phillips and other members of the Gull club gang.

The girl became terrified. Was he trying to learn how dangerous she had become before putting her out of the way? She evaded his questions and the conversation soon died into uncertain silence. Suddenly there was a commotion on deck. The stranger stepped to the doorway, looked out, and dashed back to Elizabeth excitedly. "We're raided!" he whispered.

"Let's get out of here, kid!" Suspicious, Elizabeth hesitated, but then saw several other men leaving hurriedly and rallied. "Let's go find Phillips," he said quietly.

The Gull club was more a gambling den than a dance hall.

"Guess Phillips isn't here yet," Elizabeth's companion murmured. "How about a dance or two until he comes?"

Rowing as quietly as possible, they moved stealthily downstream. Philips, or whoever he was, bent to the oars powerfully and steadily, smiling reassurance occasionally at the girl. Somehow, Elizabeth's fear of him melted into a deep admiration. No man could have been more decent to her than this desperate bandit.

But what a story! If Blake didn't make her fix this, he was crazy. I'd have to get a telephone," she exclaimed as the boat grounded.

"We both do," the stranger said grimly, helping her ashore. They strode down a deserted street to a corner drug store.

Fishing a nickel out of her purse, Elizabeth dashed into a phone booth while the stranger waited for change. Blake was excited at the news. "The Gull club raided? Some break! Stay there until I send a man up." She hung up, exhausted, for she knew all the other morning papers had already gone to press.

As the letdown flooded over her, Elizabeth became dimly conscious of her companion's voice, talking into a phone in the next booth. She started, and suddenly became rigid with astonishment.

"Hello, Evening Star," he was saying. "This is Ben Baker of the feature section. Have inches of the brick, all right. Even his girl friend didn't spot me! And did I get a story!"

CONDEMNED TO DEATH AFTER ASSASSINATION

Tokyo, Aug. 14.—(CP-Havas)—A courtmartial has condemned Lieut.-Col. Saburo Aizawa to death less than 48 hours after his assassination of Maj. Gen. Tatsuna Nagata, it was reported tonight.

Political circles were alarmed over the state of mind of some of the officers as revealed by Gen. Nagata's assassination. They feared Gen. Hayashi War Minister would resign and provoke a cabinet crisis but it generally believed he would stay in office.

NEWS BRIEFS AND ODDITIES

Wilmington, Del., Aug. 15 (CP) — Henry B. Eaton tried his piano, searchlights and other devices to rid his house of starlings.

The birds refused, came back, even as they have done at government scientists and not a few city administrations.

Then Eaton put an owl, mirrors but, stuffed, on a stick in his front yard. The starlings have flown.

Youngstown, O., Aug. 12 (AP) — It's a mystery out at Lake Milton, reports the Vindicator, where a new 100-foot sea wall, yesterday the wall was much in evidence. Now it's gone.

A construction crew was completing the wall when workmen noticed the lake "wading" ashore. About 15 feet of the structure began to sink at once.

Joliet, Ill., Aug. 15 (CP)—It was a nice job the contractor did when he tore down a house, except it was the wrong house, police of Police Chief Joseph Kearns are not today. They asked $5,000.

Chicago, Aug. 15 (CP)—A beauty tip. Sleep in the nude.

The advice comes from Miss Ruth B. Brandt, educational director of the American Cosmetologists Association.

The body, she said, cannot breathe properly when clothed.

Hollywood, Aug. 15 (AP)—Step-in Fetchit, negro film comedian, was handed comedians by a bailiff last during the fleecing of a scene for "Pan Virginia."

It was a carnival scene and Fetchit had the role of the man who lets customers throw baseballs at his head. Every time a ball hit Fetchit somebody rang in a bill for a bailiff. The comedian was revived at the close of the scene.

Victoria, Aug. 15 (CP) — Hon. John Hart, British Columbia Minister of Finance, can add to his golf laurels and prepare a brief.

He is a semi-finalist today in the Pacific Northwest Seniors' golf tournament, having scored a 19th hole victory over A. T. Goward, Victoria.

ITALY DEMANDS POLITICAL GAINS

Baron Aloisi Throws Off Reserve And Speaks Openly

Paris, Aug. 15—(CP-Havas)—Direct threat of war unless Italy gets a free hand in Ethiopia, coupled with peaceable means was voiced today by Baron Aloisi, head of Italy's delegation to the League of Nations, in an interview here with Premier Pierre Laval.

Italy must have more than economic concessions, he warned, and the shot gun of sanctions is not peaceable means will use force.

Italy needs expansion and cannot be satisfied by economic grants the Italian statesman informed M. Laval in their luncheon talk which lasted nearly an hour and a half. For this reason, he revealed officially, Italy has concentrated 170,000 men in its two colonies bordering Ethiopia and "will not hesitate to use them if necessary."

Premier Mussolini's rightHand man came to the French government head with three arguments.

1. Italy must protect Eritrea and Italian Somaliland against a wild and dangerous nation, Ethiopia, by disarming it.

2. Italy must expand into colonies as Great Britain and France have done.

3. Italy is starved for raw materials and must develop her own supplies.

To these arguments Laval had the following answers:

1. War would wreck Europe's long-drawn-out efforts for peace and, possibly, even the League of Nations.

2. War could cost men and money and create hatreds although Mussolini could attain his desires gradually and peacefully.

3. War would endanger or break the Anglo-French Locarno Pact in Europe.

(By the treaty of 1906, Great Britain, France and Italy guaranteed the integrity and independence of Ethiopia.)

Using all his famed powers of persuasion, the French Premier is seeking to reconcile Great Britain's proposed solution with Italy's demands in a prelude to the full three-three-power negotiations beginning here tomorrow.

THREE POSTS OPEN

Conservatives Expected to Open Campaign in Two Weeks

Ottawa, Aug. 15.—(CP)—Canadians will group to the polls Oct. 14 to choose the next government of the country and the 18th parliament since confederation.

In a day of feverish activity, Premier R. B. Bennett yesterday completed partial reorganization of his cabinet, admitting four new ministers and announced dissolution of parliament. Nomination day will be Oct. 7. In most ridings with election writs returnable Nov. 9.

To top off the day, the Prime Minister appointed five Senators, eight judges of varying importance, named members of the new Wheat Board and the Advisory Committee of seven, two Deputy Ministers and the Director of the Tariff Board. The day saw more important appointments announced than any day in years.

Selected to fill gaps in the cabinet ranks were the following Conservative members of the House.

TAX COLLECTION IS HIGHER HERE

Federal Income Report Shows Decline in 2 Districts Only

Ottawa, Aug. 15 (CP)—A statement issued today by Hon. J. E. Lawson, Minister of National Revenue, showed income tax collections for July to have totalled $3,643,294. This was a drop of $189,272 from the same month a year ago.

For the first four months of the present fiscal year income tax collections have increased by $134,774,922.

The Toronto district leads Canada in income tax receipts. Figures for the 18 districts of the Dominion, with last year's collections in brackets follow:

Toronto $18,734,813 ($13,259,241); Montreal $17,696,527 ($13,924,364); London $5,930,277 ($3,877,749); Hamilton $4,156,924 ($2,896,085); Winnipeg $3,282,045 ($5,433,289); Ottawa $3,188,832 ($2,707,060); Halifax $874,674 ($705,200); Calgary $711,463 ($534,522); Saint John $562,470 ($443,844); Quebec $507,- 446 ($382,231); Edmonton $345,650 ($230,153); Charlottetown $238,648 ($188,310); Kingston $142,514 ($116,- 036); Regina $138,290 ($139,929); Fort William $128,961 ($94,629); Saskatoon $79,085 ($66,772); Yukon $15,022 ($7,407).

The Quebec and the Regina districts were the only two out of the 18 to register declines. The former dropped by $139,746 and the latter by $1,301.

Best Discovers Choline Extract

New York, Aug. 15—(CP)— A Lenhgard to lead to the New York Times reports Dr. C. H. Best of Toronto, co-discoverer of the insulin treatment for diabetes, told the International Physiological Congress yesterday that he has resulted in his recent discovery of the separation of a new vitamin of great importance in the treatment of diabetes. It is called choline and is an extract from liver and pancreas.

Business Firms in Ethiopia Close, Move Goods to French Somaliland

Addis Ababa, Aug. 15.—(AP)— Convinced war is inevitable, a number of Ethiopian business firms have suspended business today. Their most valuable goods were sent to Djibouti, French Somaliland, for storage to avoid confiscation which is regarded as certain if Italy invades the empire of Emperor Haile Selassie.

Having lodged a protest with the League of Nations against arms shipments which he alleged various nations have levied against Ethiopia, the Emperor busied himself with fortifying the national defense on the north against Italy's threat.

An Ethiopian delegation headed by Desa Abebe, son of Supreme Commander Ras Kasa of the northern forces, is expected to start for frontier territories tomorrow.

Ethiopia's protest to the League was said by informed quarters to have been inspired by the statement here over an arma shortage—the spirit of Haile Selassie's followers is good and an abundance of man power, which he alleged various nations have levied against Ethiopia, the Emperor busied himself with fortifying the national defense on the north against Italy's threat.

SIR B. BLACKETT FATALLY INJURED

British Economist Dies at Gressen, Germany, After Car Crash

Giessen, Germany, Aug. 15.—(AP)— Sir Basil Phillott Blackett, British authority on gold and economic problems, was fatally injured in an automobile-train crash ten miles from here.

Sir Basil died in the University clinic of what physicians diagnosed as a severe hemorrhage resulting from internal injuries.

Injured with him was a woman school teacher from Marburg, an old friend, who originally was erroneously identified at his wife.

Sir Basil's automobile was struck by a train on a grade crossing this morning. Death came shortly after 2 p.m. He was one of Britain's leading financial authorities.

Sir Basil was born Jan. 8, 1882, received his Master of Arts degree from Oxford in 1904 and immediately entered the Treasury.

In 1914 he went to the United States on a special mission in connection with exchange problems arising out of the Great War. In October, 1915, he was largely instrumental as a member of Mr. Asquith's French financial mission to the United States, in raising a $500,000,- 000 Anglo-French loan.

From 1917 to 1919 he was the representative of the British Treasury in the United States. For the following three years he was the controller of finance in the Treasury.

Chicago, Aug. 15 (AP)—Almee Semple McPherson, revivalist, stepped to Chicago long enough to announced "no more married life for me."

She said: "It's my work from now on. Husbands are set of the picture."

23 YEAR CYCLE WEATHER CHANGES ARE ESTABLISHED

Dr. C. G. Abbott Finds Effects of Variation of Sun's Rays

LONG RANGE "PROBS"

Weather Records Studied Which go Back Millions of Years

Washington, Aug. 15—(AP)— Devastating droughts such as that of 1934 may in the future be predicted years ahead as scientists say tomorrow's weather is now forecast.

Dr. C. G. Abbott, Secretary of the Smithsonian Institute and outstanding authority on radiation of the sun, announced today new results of his studies of the effect of variations in the sun's rays on the earth's weather which hold great promise for long-range weather forecasting.

Analysis of his data shows he accurately predicted the 1934 drought with a high degree of accuracy.

He has established a definite 23-year cycle of weather changes apparently dependent on a double sunspot cycle in solar radiation. In this cycle temperature and rainfall in numerous points over the surface of the earth approximately duplicate conditions as the same points 23 years before.

Approximate Intervals

Tall scholarly Dr. Abbott was quick to point out the repetition would not follow exactly from month to month each 23 years but in general normal or abnormal weather could be expected to recur at approximately that interval. This another major drought may be expected to occur in 1957.

His conclusions were reached after a study of two sets of data. One was composed of daily records of solar heat reaching the earth obtained at lonely stations of the Institution on Table Mountain, Calif., Montezuma, Chile and Mount St. Katherine in Egypt.

These showed there were 12 recurring periods in solar radiation which were almost identical at the widely-separated points. Dr. Abbott was then able by mathematical analysis to work out the 23 year cycle.

The second set of data consisted of weather records, some going back millions of years. The water levels of the great lakes reflected periods in the drainage area during the past 200 years showed a regular 23-year cycle. Analysis of tree rings going back to 1306 B. C. also demonstrated the cycle. One of these rings is added each year and its thickness depends on the amount of water available.

FOUR BURNED AS PLANE CRASHES IN FORCED LANDING

Vainly Circled Cotton Field in Effort to Land Safely

LOUD EXPLOSION

Pilots And Two Passengers Burned Beyond Recognition

Gilmer, Tex., Aug. 15 (AP)—Four persons died early today in a tri-motored ship of the Delta Airlines that crashed and burned after circling a cotton field in a vain attempt to land safely.

The dead:

Pilots — Mourve, La., Stiles.

Herbert Buckley, Dallas, co-pilot.

T. W. Thompson, Atlanta, passenger.

F. W. Ivy, Birmingham, Ala., passenger.

The bodies burned beyond recognition were pulled from the ship by Guy Weldon and Herbert McWhorter, farmers who heard the plane circle over McWhorter's cotton field shortly before the smashup.

Weldon said he heard the roar of the motor and looked up to see the plane drop several flares.

It circled over the level cotton patch as if to land and then crashed about a 45-degree angle with a loud explosion. Weldon and McWhorter raced to the scene, but were unable to approach the blazing ship.

The two farmers attempted to pull the five with sand but were forced to wait until the flames had subsided sufficiently to allow them to pull the charred bodies from the wreckage.

REVENUE IN JULY DROPS SLIGHTLY

Hon. J. E. Lawson Announces Month's Report in Customs and Excise

Ottawa, Aug. 15 (CP)—Customs and Excise Revenue for the month of July amounted to $20,035,267 a drop of $711,097 from the corresponding month last year, Finance Minister announced today by Hon. J. E. Lawson, Minister of National Revenue, disclosed the major portion of the decline to have been in the sales tax which were $621,240 from last year.

Customs duties last month declined from $3,900,313 in July, 1934, to $3,778,073 this year, duties were slightly lower at $4,135,899 for the drop here, however, was only $5,206.

Bill Crow Goes A-Motoring, Uproar Keeps Party on Edge

Pontiac (Mich.) Owner Promises to Leave Bill Behind Next Tour

CROW IN BIRD FIGHT

The next time Mr. W. P. Strachan of Pontiac, and his family, consisting of his wife and two children, go on an extended motor trip each at the present one they are taking through this part of the country, Bill, the beady-eyed pet crow, with his short bobby, grimly promises his owner.

Bill, be it mentioned, is an unmitigated thief besides being a nuisance and the cause of a continual uproar in the car and out of it ever since they left their home two weeks ago on a vacation trip. Three or four times now his owner has threatened to wring his neck; but the saving grace of a holiday-ous sense of humour and his quaint habit of getting him more trouble than any ten birds of his breed has thus far saved Bill from an ignoble end.

At London, Ontario, Bill deserted the family on the car-top and into that city and sped directly to an open fruit stand where he helped himself with much raucous ribaldry to the tempting offers of fruit and vegetables that were displayed. Only payment of the damage by the owner appeased the fruit man. While payment was being made, Bill perched nearby and spread consternation all along the line Bill had bothered service station men, roadside stand operators and the family alike with his thieving and mischievous tricks. Three times Bill was bought, though, perhaps, slightly, that Bill had disappeared for good. Bill, even though he might have been left behind at the occasional stops, always managed to catch up with the family car, cawing good-humouredly at the owners.

Yesterday afternoon Mr. Strachan's car rolled into a Niagara Peninsula station. Bill hopped nimbly through the inch or so of space in the lowered window and strolled along the hood of the machine. He squawked loud and long at the temporary delay, and when the attendant commenced to remove the radiator cap to replenish the water, Bill pecked sharply twice at the bared head, drawing fresh blood. He ducked the sweep of his owner's arm, scuttled back into the safety of the seat, still chirping in devilish glee.

Then the incident came later in the day where the party stopped briefly, Bill again deserted the car for the upper limbs of a handy tree, squawking to attract other birds. The sparrows came and indulged in a rousing jamboree, attempting to chase him from his perch. Convinced that the brawl was sufficiently noisy and disturbing, Bill flew back to the car and safety: leaving the sparrows in general riot.

"It's been like that since we started. I can't catch him at the tricks and I haven't the heart to kill him when he is quiet, which is seldom," mourned the owner. "But I'll guarantee that the next time we travel, Bill stays home."

Election Date Is Satisfactory

Leading members of both political parties of the city several of whom were questioned today were entirely in accord with the date of the general election set for Monday, October 14.

"By that time the crops will be all harvested, and there will be plenty of time for organization and campaign work," was the unanimous expression.

Boys, Girls, on Trial in Churchyard Convicted of Giggling at Service

Caledonia, Mo., Aug. 15.—(AP)— Residents of Caledonia agreed today it was a costly "giggle"—coming as it did to break solemn silence of Sunday services. Sunday while the Rev. G. E. Whitmer preached the gospel a girl "giggled" at some youths in the congregation.

Rev. Whitmer preferred charges of disturbing religious worship against Ruby Newingham, Opal Williams, Addie Hall, Lois Masterson, Everett Stanley, Joe Tibbs and Fred Smith.

In the absence of a Hall of Justice court was held in the church yard and all pleaded guilty except Miss Newingham and Miss Williams, both 17 years old. They elected to stand trial.

Prosecuting Attorney Ted Nimrod found they had no attorney so he appointed both the State and the defendants, and won and lost when the jury assessed fines of $1 and costs.

The girls, without funds, were turned over to the Sheriff, then sent before the Circuit Judge. He told them he would consider requests for parolee Friday.

KING ADVOCATES CONTROL VESTED IN PARLIAMENT

Marketing Act is Under Fire in Wingham Address

PROTESTS DELAY

Says It Shows Disregard of Premier For Responsible Government

Wingham Ont., Aug. 15 (CP) Compulsory regulation of marketing of natural products is favored by Liberal leader Mackenzie King providing the regulations are approved by Parliament, Mr. King said this yesterday as he spoke to a Huron County Liberal rally. He left early today for London where he will speak tonight.

The Natural Products' Marketing Act Mr. King said was one of a long series of steps by which Premier R. B. Bennett had established a virtual dictatorship in Canada. Farmers should look upon it as a wolf in sheep's clothing because it saves power to manufacturers to establish combines and monopolies and gave the government complete control of the external trade of the country.

BRITISH TRADERS HERE AUGUST 28

Second Maple Leaf Tour Arrives in Montreal at Week-End

Ottawa, Aug. 15.—(CP)—A party of British importers and merchants will arrive in Montreal this week end to view at first hand the Canadian industries in its stages from the farmer to the shipper. Known as the "Maple Leaf Tour", it was organized by the Canadian Government.

A party of Britishers visited Belleville last year in its travels.

Thursday, Aug. 22, they will visit Aylmer; London and Hamilton; Friday, Windsor; Saturday, Leamington and Blenheim; Sunday, Aug. 25, Niagara Falls; Monday, Hamilton; Tuesday, Toronto; Wednesday, Oshawa; Thursday, Peterborough, Thousand Islands; Friday, Montreal and Quebec.

Visits will be made to the experimental farms, the dairy, fruit belt, dairy farms, factories, abattoirs and manufactures. A similar tour was conducted last year.

No further word regarding the arrival of the party here since first information was released has been received by the local Chamber of Commerce it was stated today.

WEATHER

City and District News

SUGGEST LIGHTING CITY HALL TOWER

The suggestion that Belleville emulate the advertising methods of other larger cities in having its principal buildings floodlighted at night, following the completion of work now being done, was advanced this morning by a prominent citizen.

"The cost and maintenance of floodlighting the tower with suitable lights and reflectors would be a nominal one, and would serve thus proper in the advertising the city would get," points out the local man.

ASSESSED FINE UNDER INDIAN ACT

Norland Smart, Stirling street, appeared in the local police court yesterday afternoon charged under the Indian Act. Smart was taken into custody by the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, who presented the case before Magistrate A. J. Baker, K.C. The accused man was charged with supplying Indians with intoxicants, contrary to the Indian Act. He was found guilty on the charges and fined $50 and costs which will be paid.

JAIL SENTENCES FOR TRESPASSING

Sergeant W. Moore, in charge of the Brockville detachment of the R.C.M.P., is in Belleville today making his quarterly inspection of the local detachment of "Mounties". Concerned efforts on the part of the R.C.M.P., in relationship to the discouragement of trespassing riding on Canadian railroads and also trespassing on such properties, are being strictly enforced at present. Yesterday four transients were removed from trains passing through the city and charged in open police court with the possible, also the jail sentence was meted out in all four cases when they were presented before Magistrate Nullet K.C., by Lance Corporal J. C. McCaffrey. This practice of trespassing on government property, railroads, etc., is rife in certain areas even if we have to increase the jail sentence upon offenders," stated the Provincial Police officer. Sergeant Moore bases special importance to the local detachment in relationship to the growth in population which is concentrated on these apprehended trespassing on railway property.

HYDRO STANDARD BROKEN OFF

A rather peculiar accident occurred on Front street, early this morning, when a large truck crashed into a hydro standard, with the result breaking it off directly at the base. The scene of the accident is directly opposite the pavement, in front of Sullivan's harbor property, and the field for many blocks after the impact. The truck was driven by William Lawson, of St. Catharines, who was proceeding northward when he decided to park on the east side of Front street. Mr. Lawe was forced to park parallel with the sidewalk as his truck was too long to allow angle parking. As he pulled in towards the sidewalk the extreme right-hand front portion of the rack of the truck, which projected slightly over the chassis, struck the standard breaking it off at the base. Hydro officials were immediately notified and commenced repair work. No person was injured while fortunately for the store windows in nearby places of business the pole toppled over toward the north and fell to the sidewalk, lying parallel with the curb. The truck was not much damaged. The matter was investigated by P. C. Arnold.

POLICE BLOTTER

One lone inebriate and eight transients occupied the cell block at the police station last night. Since local police have been cruising their offices for the apprehension of transients from sleeping in local parks and side of resting or loitering about the city streets, a falling off of transients locally has been noticed in Belleville. Nightly the police make a tour of the city and pick up all such offenders.

A Bay Street resident complained to the authorities that robbers were stealing vegetables from her garden. A large quantity of potatoes was the principal item of garden produce to be stolen, although other vegetables were also reported missing. Attention has been promised by the police.

While the occupants slumbered, a transient walked into a Victoria Avenue residence and helped himself to all of the dainties in the refrigerator. The matter was reported to the police today. According to the report received and investigated by Policeman Constable Fred Izard, what is believed to have been a transient opened the Victoria Avenue home by means of cutting the screen in a rear door and unlocking it. Later the night prowler removed milk, cream, pudding and cake from the refrigerator and proceeded to consume what was desired most. Occupants of the house claim they heard a slight disturbance downstairs about 1.30 a.m., but thought little of the incident at that time. The premises were not missed until breakfast time.

SNOWDEN FEARS AUSTRIAN FUTURE

Sees Il Duce as Moving to Make of Austria Italian Province

London, Aug. 14 (CP-Havas) — Viscount Snowden, former Chancellor of the Exchequer, declared in a letter to the Times today if Premier Mussolini occupied Austria his next move will be to make Austria an Italian province.

Viscount Snowden violently assailed "the dilatory tactics of the League of Nations Council" for which chief responsibility rested with France and Great Britain."

He declared the three-power conference opening in Paris today would serve only to give more time to Italy to prepare for war against Ethiopia. The Rome government's desire for such a war is obvious, he added.

"The international complications which will arise are too terrible to contemplate. Colored peoples are hearing a sense of solidarity and serious trouble will certainly develop in consequence," he said.

Regarding Anthony Eden's mission to Paris the Daily Telegraph's political correspondent declared:

"Italy would present the question as an Anglo-Italian conflict for domination of the Mediterranean. It will attempt to prolong these conversations until the commission of conciliation and arbitration will have reviewed a decision would in the usual incident which will portray the Italian position.

He continues: "The British delegation is fully alive to this and is in no mood to become a party to manoeuvres which evade the simple issues."

OUR EDIBLE MUSHROOMS

"Many different kinds of edible mushrooms are found in Canada, together with a great number of worthless ones, and a few deadly poisonous toadstools. It is impossible for the average person to learn to know them all, but it is possible to learn to recognize the best edible species and the harmful and deadly poisonous kinds," says K. A. Harrison, Dominion Laboratory of Plant Pathology, Kentville, N.S.

It is no more difficult than learning the different kinds of flowers in a garden, although it is much more difficult to get the information. The best source of information in Canada is the recently published book from the Division of Botany, on "Mushrooms and Toadstools", which may be obtained from the King's Printer, Ottawa. Another is to get someone who is a student of mushrooms to point out the different kinds, or, information can be obtained from the Dominion Laboratories of Plant Pathology in the different provinces.

The different kinds of edible mushrooms are so numerous that it is not possible to mention more than a few favorites. The best known are the field mushroom and its large cousin, the horse mushroom, both of which are "mix" underneath and grow in the open fields. If these are the only mushrooms known by a person, they should not be collected from the edge of woods or near woods. The fairy ring mushroom is found on lawns during the summer and the shaggy mane, on lawns in the fall. The smooth leptota grows in cultivated fields and orchards, looks like a mushroom on top but is white underneath, and resembles the death angel. In the spruce and fir woods, the yellow chanterelle and the edible boletus are found throughout the summer. Each kind has to be known and distinguished from some worthless or harmful species that resembles it in some respect.

In gathering mushrooms to eat, the great danger is in picking a deadly toadstool. They are all the common kinds that few people know them well. The commonest deadly species is the fly agaric which is so named because it can be used as a fly poison. The most dangerous kind is the death angel, so named because of its stately appearance and pure white colour. No person should ever gather edible mushrooms in the woods without knowing this species for there is no known antidote for its slow acting poison.

DR. J. E. COLLIP

Belleville natives and those who have made this their home cannot but be proud of the success of Dr. J. Bertram Collip who is in Russia as the present time attending a gathering of scientists. At Leningrad the other day he spoke before the assembled body of leading men of the world on his favorite research on hormones.

Honors rest lightly on this young scientist who has had a remarkable career and whose future is bright with the possibilities of further discoveries for the help of mankind. Dr. Collip is still a young man with a fine background of accomplishment, while even his few spare hours for his research during the coming years.

NATIONAL INCOME

National income rose over five billion dollars last year in the United States, according to a report just issued at Washington. Labor's ratio increased from 65 per cent in 1929 to 67.5 per cent in the past year.

Figures are interesting. The national revenue income in 1934 was 49 billions, in 1933 it was 44 billions, in 1932 it was 48 billions, in 1931, 61 billions; in 1930, 72 billions, and in 1929, over 78 billions.

How deep was the trough of the depression may be seen by the tremendous shrinkage in the national income.

A NEW TREND

Some persons who want to challenge capitalism take off their clothes and go nude. It has been so in China and in the Soviets of Russia. In the latter land the authorities soon put an end to such extravagances. The weakening of communism has meant the decline of nudism in China and Russia.

This hints at a swing to older standards, with the marriage tie upheld as an important factor in life.

OI FOR SILENCE!

Will an age of comparative silence succeed the noisy age in which we live? Modernists there have been who find nothing but noise as the sign and indication of speed; children and adults shout aloud everywhere, the unnecessary honk of the car horn is heard throughout the land, and the sound of changing gears, the scraping of brakes, the rattle of hanging chains go shrieking on.

But the car horn is not responsible for so many of the noises which wreck the nerves of the people.

With modern science and the era of rubber a more silent age should come. If it does it means a more thoughtful age, for noise and thought do not go together.

LIVE TO BE ONE HUNDRED

An Italian scientist declares that most centenarians are teetotallers, vegetarians non-smokers and have never belonged to any political party.

Once I was tempted to seek to propitiate
Fate till it granted the wish of my soul.
Letting me (after a lengthy invitate)
Take up the oldest inhabitant's role;
I was allured by the way that he pillages
Tip-giving tourists, who eagerly seek Converse with one who is often the village's
Only antique.

I was prepared to start cheerfully giving up
Many a thing that attracted the gay,
Slacken the general pace of my living up,
Turn from intoxicants firmly away;
Keeping an attitude more or less placid, drop
Smoking which I should admitedly miss;
(I am informed that the use of an acid drop Helps one in this).

But there's one sacrifice equally critical
Leads me to turn the whole enterprise down;
I simply couldn't forego the political Arguments held (in the garden) with Brown;
If I may never indulge in a hearty fence,
Parry and thrust with a diligent tongue,
Bent on converting him over the party fence,
I will die young.

SUSPENDERS ARE COMING IN AGAIN

—we almost said back again, but they're always back as well as front—but they are out in the open again and unashamed. It's distinctly Collegiate now to wear suspenders outside the shirt, speaking for men o'course, for the women who seized suspenders long ago have always worn them outside. Hence we men do not have to fumble with the invisible suspender buttons, which are distinctly invisible, if that were possible—and while the effect may not be as Newport as the shirt which shows not the suspender the added comfort certainly makes up the deficiency. The only difference, now, is that Dad has to buy dollar-and-a-half galluses instead of the quarter kind.

REVOLT IN THE DESERT
by
T. E. LAWRENCE

Allenby's confidence was fits as well. Before the attack he went to see his troops assembled in secret, awaiting the signal, and told them he was sure, with their good help, of sixty thousand prisoners. But when the whole game turned on a chance! Bartholomew was most anxious. He said it would be desperate work to have the whole army re-formed by September, and even if they were ready (actually some brigades existed as such for the first time when they went over) we must not assume that the attack would follow as planned. It could be delivered only in the coastal sector, opposite Ramleh, the railhead, where only could a necessary reserve of shore be gathered. This seemed so obvious that he could not dream of the Turk staying blind, though, to Allenby's their dispositions ignored it.

Allenby's plan was to collect the bulk of his infantry and all his cavalry under the orange and olive groves at Ramleh just before the nineteenth of September. Simultaneously he hoped to make in the Jordan Valley such demonstrations as should persuade the Turks of a concentration there by Chaytor's two raids to Salt had fixed the Turks' eyes on the fords across the Jordan. Every move there, whether of British or Arabs, was accompanied by counter-precautions on the Turks' part, showing how fearful they were. In the coast sector, the area of real danger, the enemy had absurdly few men. Success hung on maintaining them in this fatal misapprehension.

Deceptions, which for the ordinary general were just silly, bored Bartholomew's soul. He had been for Allenby a main point of strategy. Bartholomew would accordingly erect (near Zerqa) wooden demined tents in Egypt, and by transfer veterinary camps and sick lines there; would put dummy camps, dummy horses and dummy troops wherever there was plausible room; would throw more bridges across the river; would collect and display against enemy country all captured guns; and on the right days would ensure the movement of concealed bodies along the dusty roads, to give the impression of eleventh-hour concentrations for an assault. At the same time the Royal Air Force was going to bomb with hundredfold fierceness of the latest fighting machines. The preponderance of which would deprive the enemy for days of the advantage of air reconnaissance.

Bartholomew wished us to suppress Feisal with all tenderness and ingenuity, from our side of Amman. Yet he warned us that even with this, success would hang on a thread, since the Turks could save themselves and their army, and give us our concentration to do over again, by simply retiring their left sector some or eight miles. The British army would then be like a fish flapping on dry land, with its railways, its heavy artillery, its dumps, its stores, its camps all misplaced; and without olive groves in which to hide its concentration must fail. So, while he guaranteed that the British were doing their utmost, he implored us not to provoke the Arabs on his behalf, in a position from which they could not escape.

The noble prospect sent Dawnay and myself back to Cairo in great fidget and anxiety. Even from Akaba had raised again the question of defending the plateau against the Turks who had just turned Nasir out of Hesa and were contemplating a stroke against Aba el Lissan about the end of August, when our Deraa detachment should start. Such a stroke could delay the Turks another fortnight, if pushed with vigour. A new factor was urgently required.

At this juncture Dawnay was inspired to think of the surviving Handley-Page of the Palestine Corps. Perhaps O. H. Q. might lend it to us during the Turkish reckoning. We telephoned Bartholomew, who understood, and backed out my request to Sir Archibald, and to Allenby. After an astonishingly short delay the order was, Colonel Buxton, with three hundred men, was lent to us for a month at first, conditional first, that we should forthwith furnish their scheme of operations; second, that they should have no casualties. Bartholomew felt it necessary to apologize for the last magnificent, heart-warming condition, which he thought unworthily!

Dawnay and I sat down with a map and measured that Buxton should examine the road from Akaba; thence, by Rum, to carry Mudowwara by night attack; thence to Jefer, to destroy the railway and tunnel near Amman; and back to Palestine on August thirty. Their activity would give us a peaceful month, in which our two thousand new camels could learn to graze, while carrying the extra petrol and supplies for the force which Buxton's force would expect.

As regards the main scheme Allenby meant to attack on the nineteenth of September, and wished us to lead off not more than four hours less than two days before he did. His words to me were that

50 Years Ago

AUGUST 15th, 1885.

The second class crew in the regatta on Massassaga Bay was sailed over the same course as that covered by the Atalanta and the Norah twice round, the second procession for the champion Iolanthe, but furnished a splendid contest for second place between the Laura and Surprise. The start was as follows:

| | H. | M. | S. |
|---|---|---|---|
| Surprise | 12 | 59 | 27 |
| Iolanthe | 13 | 00 | 00 |
| Laura | 13 | 12 | 57 |

The Surprise was at once covered with a good breeze and sailed away rapidly from the Iolanthe and Laura followed suit and, within 200 yards of the starting line, passed the Iolanthe which had a very light wind. So much for the Iolanthe's luck, however, she dashed along at a lively rate and before the first round was covered had regained second place and was closing on the Surprise. The Laura was between the Iolanthe and the Surprise when rounded and when she turned the first mark at 12h. 43m. 0s., the Iolanthe was but 7 seconds behind her and the Laura 1m. 27s. in rear of the Iolanthe. On the home leg the Iolanthe went up to and successfully passing the Surprise to leeward, and rounded the south mark at 12h. 58m. 30s. The Surprise was 23s. behind and the Laura 1m. 7s. farther away, she having thus passed the Iolanthe in Trenton boat and fallen 19s. farther behind. The Iolanthe Crossing Mosquito Bay the wind headed her fresh and the third round was finished as follows: Iolanthe 1h. 33m. 03s.; Surprise 1h. 33m. 53s.; Laura 1h. 35m. 11s. The leader had thus succeeded in gaining her time and something to spare on this one round of the course, and the other two were struggling hard for second honors. The Iolanthe went away rapidly from the Surprise and from her followers. At the north buoy she led by 70s. 15s. while the Surprise rounded 45s ahead of the Laura. At the home buoy she was leading by 10m. 25s., with the Laura 5m. behind the Surprise. The Iolanthe beat the Iolanthe in crossing Mosquito Bay was hardly less than additional. After the leading yacht had finished, unfortunately the wind fell to a mere breath, and the others were detained several minutes thereby. During the lull the Laura got a piece of luck and it gave her second place, which the Surprise would otherwise have had in all probability, about 300 yards from the home buoy both yachts being becalmed. The Surprise being about 50 yards ahead, but perhaps twice her own length to leeward. The Laura sniff filled the sails of the Kingston craft and skirted her, the French thereby enabling her to lead her quickly from Ferguson competitor across the finishing line by 1m. 40s. Everyone condoles with Mr. Richardson, who skipped a splendid race, on his ill fortune. The Iolanthe beat the Laura by 32m. 44s. and the latter secured second place by 2m. 4s. The first prize was $100.00 and custody of the championship flag offered by Commodore Biggar. The second prize was $60.00.

three men and a boy with pistols in front of Deraa on September the fifteenth would fill his conception and would be better than thousands a week before or a week after. The British were cared nothing for our fighting power, and did not reckon us part of his tactical strength. Our purpose, to him was moral, to keep the enemy command intent upon the trans-Jordan front. In my English capacity I shared this view, but on my Arab side both agitation and battle seemed equally important, the one to serve Lord Allenby's wit, Jaafar came up to Palestine to receive it, and the Staff took the opportunity to stage a formal little ceremony of presentation, as token of respect for their erstwhile captive. The guard of honour was furnished by the Desert Yeomanry, who had galloped the Pasha down, and hacted him from their seats in the Genisat Desert less than 2 years before. Jaafar laughed with delight at an incident so much in his own hearty vein. These marks of Allenby's esteem heartened the Arab Army. Nuri Pasha Said offered to command the Deraa expedition for which his courage, authority and coolness marked him as the ideal leader. He began to pick for it the best four hundred men in the army.

FISHING GOOD AT TWIN SISTER LAKES NEAR MARMORA

Game Fish Become More Plentiful in Late Years

BALL MEETING

BALL MEETING Club Decides to Continue With Playoffs As Arranged

Marmora, Aug. 15—Various fishermen in the district report excellent catches of small mouth black bass in the Twin Sister Lakes. These two small lakes, with only a narrow road separating, are located about nine miles north of Marmora near the boundry of Marmora and Lake townships.

Up until a few years ago there were no fish of anything else in either of the lakes but several parties recently have caught their limits of bass in three and four pounds in size.

Although the lakes are practically unknown to tourists they are a favorite hunting spot for local sportsmen in the fall.

There being no cottages or homes on the lakes, wild ducks and partridge are plentiful in season and some very fine heads have been taken in the near vicinity.

HEALTH IN THE PALM OF YOUR HAND

It's as simple as that . . . getting rid of that headachy, half-well feeling that keeps so many people from enjoying life. This condition usually comes from some form of constipation. You can avoid it.

"The palm of your hand" refers to the cup of thousands of sun and vegetable tea Eno's "Fruit Salt." They pour Eno into the palm of the hand and dash the pure, white powder into a glass of water . . . and drink the glass. It's a mighty healthful thing to do.

Eno quenches thirst, sweetens the stomach, neutralizes solids from foods. Eno frees the intestines from poisonous waste, cools the blood-stream, tones up the entire inner system. Also it plummet to take, keeps you active. Every effect of Eno's "Fruit Salt" is beneficial. Begin now to pour health from the palm of your hand. Handy size 50c. Household size 75c.

Blackheads and Pimples

(Copyright, 1935, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Every intelligent mother will give sympathy and help to the young daughter whose complexion is spotted with eruptions. It is not a trifling matter, or one that should be disregarded. It often results in heart-breaking embarrassment and self-consciousness. Sometimes it is the child's social life, or success in school work.

Skin specialists, standing high in the medical profession, make no rash promises of an early cure in a chronic case of acne. Treatment must usually be continued for three or four months. There are various means by which the horrid little visitors can be annihilated; there is no one cure for all cases.

The over-dry skin is usually immune to blackheads and pimples, which are the direct result of excessive activity on the part of the sebaceous glands — a condition that may be due to a diet too rich in fats, sweets and starches. Neglect of skin care is a contributing cause of these annoying eruptions. The young person is not a demon face washer, and she is likely to be altogether too free with oily cosmetics that make conditions worse.

Oil hardens in the pores, attracts atmospheric dust. Pores become distended, making the texture of the skin coarse and unlovely. The walls break, pus-producing germs creep in, pimples result.

Let the victim of acne realize that she is fighting a combination of grease and dirt, and she will be more likely to cleanse the surface of the skin diligently and thoroughly. This should be done twice a day, night and morning.

Wet the wash cloth with very warm water. Have at hand a glass jar in which has been stirred together equal parts of baking soda and powdered boric acid. Take one heaping teaspoonful of this powder and dissolve it in the water. With a wash cloth and a hard soap go over the skin surface with thoroughness, but don't be rough. Every pimple is a small boil, should not be disturbed more than necessary. After the soapy lather is washed cloth in clear hot water, apply to the face, give the final a steaming treatment. The purpose of this is to soften the blackheads in the pores, so that they can be expelled. Finish with a thorough cold water rinsing.

If the skin feels sensitive after the morning and overhanded ap-ply one of these semi-liquid, milky hand lotions that are healing.

General hygiene is important, especially the daily bath to make the skin function normally over the entire body surface. There will be less work for the pores, the more sensitive glands on the face.

The diet should be low in proteins. Vegetables, fruits and cereals should constitute the larger part of the grocery intake.

Correct Manners

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

(Copyright, 1935, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

LETTER-PAPER COLOR

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. Is it proper to write love letters or personal letters on a delicate pink paper, or should they be written on white paper?

2. Would it be proper to send my boy friend's mother a convalescent card if I have never seen her? I have just been ordered a few months with this young man.

2. Is the heading of this letter correct?

B.

1. We're always safe in our choice of letter-paper if we choose white. The next safest shades are a light gray or light blue or perhaps Scotch granite. Dark blues, dark buffs, are lovely when they come in more expensive papers, but are often unsafe when they are put out in inexpensive papers.

But we should definitely avoid pink papers and cheap green papers! Pink paper is wishy-washy looking, never has style and never shows good taste.

Fundamentally, the choice of color in letter-paper depends chiefly on our budget for our paper. If we can afford only inexpensive papers, we can show individual taste by keeping as conservative as possible—white, gray, double-shaded letter-paper. In plain weaves, with plain or simply deckled edges, and always appropriate to our hand-writing. When we receive a letter written on this conservative kind of paper, we know that the person, too, is with a limited budget, but sure taste. When we receive a letter written on pink paper or cheap green paper, we as inevitably know that the writer has poor taste.

Under no circumstances is it proper to send a ready-made convalescent card to a person, in most cases, however, it is proper to write a note of friendly value for a speedy recovery. Whether or not it would be in good taste for you to write such a note will rest in full the word Street, the heading will be perfect.

Lady Does Not Remove Glove

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Is it correct for a young lady to shake hands with a gentleman with her glove on, or does it depend on the circumstance?

Often being introduced to some person, is it necessary to say, "I am very glad to have met you" when departing?

H.

1. It isn't considered necessary for a woman to remove her glove before she shakes hands with a man. But it is proper for a man to remove his glove before he shakes hands with a woman.

2. No, it isn't necessary to say, "I am very glad to have met you" when one is leaving after an introduction. We make this pleasant and friendly comment if we wish, and it is very gracious to do so, but it depends on the circumstances of the introduction.

If the introduction has been a casual one, we will probably only say "Good-by" when we are leaving after an introduction. But if we have had pleasure in the meeting naturally it is gracious to say so. And these amiable words can be said with charming grace and ease that the person to whom we say them receives a definite impression of our personality.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By Beatrice Fairfax

(Copyright, 1935, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Want to Wed at 16 and 17 is Menace Hated School Work

"But we are in love!" they proclaimed. "Besides, we hate school. Geometry bores us to death, and as for history, what's the use of that when it changes every day?

"As for money, why can't our parents help to support us? They would be supporting us anyway for a year or two longer. And we demand happiness while we're young enough to enjoy it."

The foregoing is the extract of a joint, letter written by a girl of 18 and a boy of 17, who decline to listen to their parents' arguments against their marriage — and put the question up to me.

To choose matrimony as an escape from geometry strikes me as a jump from the lukewarm frying pan into the sizzling fire. I don't doubt that those children are delightfully affectionate and very much in love or that they're backed up by arguments for an early marriage by frequent references to Romeo and Juliet.

But youngsters should be taught to manage their own lives before they get hauled up with the lives of others. And when the youthful bride and groom expect to go home and live in their parents for a couple of years, there seems to be a good deal of the impractical in the view.

It's a wholly different matter for a father and mother to agree to support children while they're in high school, and becoming equipped for self-support in later life, than it is to weakly fall in with the lovesick bride and groom who've decided to quit school in the interests of romance.

It's a disturbed and disturbing age that those youngsters have grown up in. We all know that, and all agree that we don't cope with them. But the truth is, that they need a good deal of parental help from their elders. They need parents who are well equipped, not only with warm hearts, but clear, cold common-sense; parents who understand the pitiful folly of child marriages and will see that they don't take place.

For a boy whose only qualification for being a husband is that he doesn't like mathematics and is sure he is in love, is certainly ill-fitted for another of those tragedies which go on the rocks. And the same is true of his girl friend, who probably has not yet learned to keep her own room in order, or to boil an egg.

It's because they so want all their young people who write me to have happy marriages, that I implored them to stick to high school, then get a job and learn how to make a success of it. They should make themselves worth loving and worth marrying before they fall in. Then it will be time enough for those boy and girl sweethearts to begin life together.

Destructive Instinct In Child

Writer Gives Reason For It And Explains How to Remove it

By LISA GRENELLE

Howard was a destructive little child. He never kept a new toy intact a day. His possessions were a mass of junk, and his parents' treasures didn't escape him. Breakage followed in his path—bric-a-brac, scent bottles, glasses, ash trays, even tables and chairs.

Did Howard's parents do anything about it? Epidemic and despair. Oh, yes, the usual things—frequent scoldings, an occasional spanking, and a good sound warning every 15 minutes. They were warnings that died out this growling complaints to friends, neighbors and relatives.

It never occurred to anyone that Howard's destructive instinct has a definite cause.

Is Nerve's Cure

Howard was one of those cherished infants with whom the neighbor children were not allowed to play. While these happy vulgars tore through vacant lots and shouted rudely from the gutter, Howard was taken firmly by his nurse's hand and escorted sternly down the middle of the sidewalk. So Howard's fighting protests and pleadings got no avail, took out his loneliness and frustration on his toys.

A destructive child is an unhappy child, a child in need of something that he's not getting. Often that need is greater freedom or more privacy.

A child does not always destroy his toys because he is not allowed to play with the neighbor's children. He sometimes breaks them because he has too many, and their quantity confuses him. Often it is because he has been persistently refused, for instance, a bicycle, and instead showered with gifts for which he has no use.

May Be Jealousy

A destructive instinct is also frequently the result of jealousy, especially if the child confines it largely confines, his activities to damaging the possessions of one person whose love or appreciation he desires but which he feels has been withdrawn.

A child whose confidence has been shaken often will become destructive. If he feels that his endeavors or accomplishments are not appreciated by other members of the family, he may become sour or, if he feels inferior, inadequate, he may destroy the toy or in sick he may become so.

Always a problem of retaliation, a destructive instinct is never without cause. Discipline can never be more than momentarily effective. There is only one method of cure, and that is to go back to the original cause and remove it. This is not, as a rule so difficult, and it is well worth the trouble.

CHILDREN'S TICKETS WILL BE EXEMPTED

Toronto, Aug. 14 (CP)—Premier Hepburn announced today "in the course of a day or two" the government will cut off the Provincial Amusement Tax from children's tickets.

Premier Hepburn said the matter had been under consideration for some time and "we have decided in the case of children the Provincial Amusement Tax will be remitted."

Nebraska Days Worth $1,316,400

Lincoln, Neb., Aug. 15 (AP) Nebraska's corn crop this year is 81,273,600. Their aggregate worth is fourteen times that of all the State's airplanes, more than all Nebraska's jewelry and precious stones, and nearly as much as that of all its threshing machines and combines, the commissioner of W. B. Smith reported today. Ten dollars was the minimum for valuation on the grand assessment rolls for 1935 just completed.

Fashion Flashes

(Copyright 1935, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

A good thought for "an evening" dress to wear just now is a model of maize silk crepe that has shadders covered with orange, yellow and brown ostrich feather bands extending from the waist. The frock has a moderate V in front embellished with a bow at back.

Held over by request from the Summer are violet and purple in various tones. A nice afternoon frock is of purple silk crepe with a wide belt of gold kidskin. It was modelled in fashion shevron.

A warm welcome awaits those waistcoat-cape suits that are so smart. A new model in a deep violet tweed mixture has a waistcoat with buttons placed in V formation. The short cape and waistcoat have a notched collar and revers of blended fabric.

Bright nights find plenty of net worn. A delightful dance frock is of midnight blue silk net embroidered with matching cabochon and posed over a matching taffeta slip. There is a shoulder cascade fluffy with masses of net ruffles. The skirt is very full.

No wonder the ostrich hides his head in the sand every time he hears a sound. He thinks someone is after every fifteen feet of his feathers for a new frock. One lovely frock of mauve blue crepe romaine, done in draped cascade effect at one side, is worn with a wrap of ostrich feathers shaded from pale to dark violet. The feathers are used sparingly to form huge sleeves.

All-aboard — and women look their smartest in new travel togs. An early Autumn travel coat in plaid woolen, the design worked on the bias through the front of the body. The sleeves are bloused, a touch of turquoise, beige and cream, and there are tuxedo revers of natural lynx.

NEW YORK CLOSE

New York, Aug. 15 (AP)—Scattered buying by both retail and industrial specialties steadied a somewhat wobbly stock market today.

Seaboard Oil, Consolidated Oil, Texas Corp., Standard Oil of California moved fractions to more than a point. In the motors, Studebaker was fractionally higher and Chrysler and Auburn rose a point or two. American Chain and Foundry is the only local retail Sumatra somewhat more than a point in response to an extra dividend. *

Electric Power and Light Corp. issues were in demand in the Utilities Division and among miscellaneous shares. Montgomery Ward and Spiegel-May-Stern were higher. Such issues as U.S. Steel, American Can, Consolidated Gas, and N. Y. Central sagged fractions. Silver issues strengthened. The last time you stood. Sales approximated 1,560,000 shares.

TORONTO MINES CLOSE)

Toronto, Aug. 15.—(CP)—Volume of sales on the Toronto Mining Board today was sufficiently heavy to swell the week's total to the extent that it has prevailed for some weeks. Golds lacse, despite irregularity of the list, generally claimed more than usual attention and the predominating trend was heavier. Teck Hughes was the outstanding discovery, selling down to around 2.52. Base Metal and Silver shares were strong.

A spate of irregularity ruled in the mining list, gains and losses showing in all groups at early afternoon. Noranda and Big Missouri were strong in the Base Metals against weakness in Base Metals Corporation and Read Consolidated.

The advance gained momentum in such gold issues as Little Long Lac, McWatters, Prospectors Airways and McKenzie. Long Lac recording a gain of 30 cents, Hudgson and Teck Hughes weakened a few cents each.

The news that Washington was still a buyer of Silver stirred up action in Midwood and Castle and the former advanced about ten cents and the latter two cents, Bear had an early rise but eased back selling to erase the gain.

TORONTO STOCKS (Close)

Toronto, Aug. 15 (CP)—Under cover of a strong play in the oils and Distilleries, especially the Toronto Industrial Share Market sold off today and recessions were numbered gains at the close. Volume was well up to the best for the week. Distillers-Seagrams set a new high for the year at 23 1-2 and closed sixty 25 for a fractional gain while Walkers Common, a laggard throughout the session, weakened nearly three close to a show a net loss of about 1-2 to 2-3 while Industrial Alcohol A closed unchanged.

Selective buying with Distillers Seagrams, Imperial Oil and International Petroleum the features, appeared in the Industrial Section and the afternoon price tone was firm at the close. International Petroleum pushed up to 37 1-4 for a gain of nearly a point and Imperial at 30 1-4 had a gain of 5-8. Trading in heavy volume, Distillers Seagrams touched 23 1-2, up 1-4 for the day.

Among the industrial leaders, including C.P.R., Ford A. and Brazilian Traction and were off 1-4 to 3-8 in the afternoon trading. Food issues also appeared moderately heavy and Consumers Gas and steel stocks firmed in slow trading.

WALL STREET FINANCIAL

New York, Aug. 15.—(AP) — Selective buying lifted scattered specialties substantially in today's stock market with profit takers put to moderate dents in other parts of the list.

Among shares of Canadian companies, International Nickel and Canadian Pacific ruled steady. On the curb, Hiram Walker was a brisk lever. Dominion Government Bonds were inactive, Mixed trends eased 1-32 of a point at 99 27-32 cents.

Shares of Spiegel-May-Stern jumped more than 2 points and Asbury automobile got up 3. Among others fractionally up in point higher were U. S. Freight, American Chain, Commonwealth Southern, Chrysler, U. S. Smelting, Westinghouse Electric Power & Light common and preferred Consolidated Oil and Cerro de Pasco Loserrs of as much included American Telephone, Western Union, Consolidated Gas, N. Y. Central, Union Pacific, U.S. Steel, Johns- Manville, Sears Roebuck and General Electric.

Imported Bar Silver at New York was reduced 3-4 of a cent an ounce to 73 3-8 cents, the lowest rate since April 16, despite Secretary Morgenthau's announcement the Treasury yesterday purchased more than 21,000,000 ounces of the metal.

HOGS

Toronto, Aug. 15.—(CP)—By gaining 10 cents on Thursday, Hull led Ontario hog markets today with $8.50 top, being behind such a gain of 30 cents, London lost 15 cents of yesterday's 40 cent rise in price, bringing the price down to $8.50. Barrie also dropped 15 cents. Other markets remained unchanged. Price received today were:

Barrie, $8.50; Brantford $8.70; Chatham $8.00; Hull, $9.50; Kitchener $8.50; Peterborough $8.50; London $8.50; Stratford $8.50.

Board Room Gossip

As accepted by Biggar and Crawford by Financial Service

"American Beauty" reflected in Canadian Circles

That a real and sustained boom in American business is probable is the general opinion in London financial circles, the reasons as brought out by the "Statist" Business Review being as follows:

1. The conditions which made for the adoption of very radical policies are passing, wherefore the conservative vote in American politics tends to become more powerful.

2. The elimination of the N.R.A. is justifying confidence in the validity of prices and thus encouraging spending;

3. The huge credit potentialities, being based on the largest gold reserves in history, will not much longer be locked up for an emergency people;

4. Opportunity for the use of this credit is very great, owing to delayed improvement;

5. Factors that make for speculative enthusiasm are present in overwhelming volume and number.

6. Industrial productive capacity has been overestimated (many plants obsolescent) and domestic consumptive capacity has been underestimated.

Many quarters are endeavouring to discover the exact reason for the revival of speculative interest in the local utility stocks. Admittedly, the strength of these issues in New York has had an important influence on the trend locally. Another trend of thought has been advanced by the Montreal Financial election. The question is asked whether in the event of a Liberal victory, the export power to the United States will not be permitted on a large scale? It is known that the Liberal leader favors reciprocity with our neighbors to the South on a large way. Holders of utility securities are thus given considerable food for thought.

Commenting on the market, the Trader in Barron's states that ordinarily a boom, once started, has to run its course and the current fever for that reason, ought not suddenly to die out. Some day probably as the result of striking news—possibly the adjournment of Congress—the rush of speculation will blow its full fury, Then will be the time for the prudent speculator to take careful bearings lest he be led astray by greed and the mirage of easy riches. The unemotional trader will, therefore, appreciate that selling rather than buying opportunities lie ahead for the simple reason that earnings, in the long run, govern values and that the enthusiastic attempt to discount prospects usually marks the down. though not necessarily the end, of the final stage of a major stock market advance.

The traders' remarks above would seem to imply that stocks in New York should not be disposed of as yet and that a much more pronounced rise is to take place before extreme caution becomes advisable.

Produce Prices on Montreal Market

Montreal, Aug. 15.—Fractional gains were recorded on the local Produce Exchange yesterday. Cheese, eggs and poultry held about the same. Potatoes were again cheaper.

At the weekly auction held at the Corn Exchange Board of Trade 966 boxes of No. 1 Quebec butter sold at 30¼c per lb., while on a lot of 1,000 boxes of No. 2 the highest bid was 30¼c, which was refused. A total of 1,180 boxes of No. 3 Quebec white cheese sold at 9¼c, and on 831 boxes of No. 4 Quebec colored the highest bid was 9c, which was refused, 9¼c being asked.

The butter market in the afternoon was being quoted 30¼c to 30½c per lb. for No. 1 in cartons or 1-c.l. lots, compared with 30¼c to 30¼c on Tuesday. Receipts, 313 boxes. The spiller receipts were giving a little firmer tone to the market, final bids to the retail trade were quoted by wholesale jobbing houses as follows:

Radios Drop Final Road Game To Kingston Ponies 6-2 Being Eliminated from Finishing 2nd

Wilkins Hurls For Locals But Not Accorded Good Support

GAME LISTLESS

Clancy For Winners Hurls Fair Ball After Shaky Start

Any possible chances of the Belleville Stewart-Warners finishing in second place in the C.O.B.L. were eliminated last evening when they dropped their final road game to the Kingston Ponies by the score of 6 to 2. The Radios played listless ball committing numerous errors of commission and equally as many of omission, while the Ponies played errorless ball before the smallest crowd to witness a league game in Kingston this season. The local line dashes any hopes of the Radios finishing in the second hole, while the Kingston victory elevates the Ponies to within a game and one-half of the league leadership. The final game of the schedule will be played in Belleville on Friday night, Kingston versus the Stewart-Warners.

"Bud" Wilkins, diminutive boxy roundsman, was Coach Mike Purtell's choice, Jack Williams complaining of a sore arm. Wilkins hurled fair enough ball to win the average baseball match but was not allotted the support that a better ball club should present. Wilkins struck out three, walked one and hit a batsman as he allowed 12 hits, two for extra bases. "Pud" Clancy assumed the hilltop for the home team and after a shaky start, settled away to set down the visitors in an aculous support by his team mates, however. The Kingston hurler struck out six, passed three and was nicked for a total of ten hits, including triples by R. Smith and Grey. The two opposing centre fielders, Weir and McQuade, supplied the fielding sensations of the game with beautiful running catches in their allotted portion of the diamond.

Barclay Big Hitter

The big hitter of the day was Jim Barclay, shortstop, who cuffed the spherical hard and often. Barclay collected three safeties out of four tries and was literally robbed of a fourth when Weatherhead made a sensational running catch in left-centre. Grey counted a triple and a single as did Roy Smith, while Sonny Green had a brace of singles. Scrutton, Arnold and McQuade were the big base swingers for the home team.

Belleville opened ostensibly when Grey, the first batter clouted a triple into the centre, scoring on Barclay's subsequent hit. Despite the fact R. Smith followed with another triple, no scoring was in effect. Belleville scored again in the sixth when Roy Smith singled and scored after McQuade caught Green's lofty drive. R. Smith drove McQuade home in the second for Kingston's first tally, but a double play, Arnold to Barclay to Kingston scoring three runs on three singles respectively by Weir, Green and a stolen base. The homesters added a brace more runs in the sixth, when two Ponies collected three singles, but the Radios kicked in with an less than a trio of errors, that saw their hopes of victory dashed.

The Kingston Ponies, who are battling for first place with the Petes, move into Belleville for the final scheduled game of the 1935 O.B.L. season on Friday night when Edmonson and Williams will be the starting pitchers.

J. H. Sharpe, of Belleville, Ont., colored four hundred miles from home in a business engagement in the United States, to play in the Kingston and District golf tournament. After only two hours' sleep, he won the tournament on a course which he had never seen before with a record of 151 for thirty-six holes. He is seen leaving The Whig-Standard Cup, emblematic of his victory. Golfers were entered from Belleville, Cornwall, Peterboro, Brockville, Ottawa, Perth, Carleton Place and other cities.

WOOLER LEAFS WIN TITLE

Defeat Canada Buds 12-8 And Enter Provincial Playdowns

Trenton, Aug. 15.—(Special)—Doc Young and his hard hitting Wooler Leafs won the right to represent Trenton and District league in the Provincial O.A.S.A. intermediate play-downs when they defeated the Canada Bud last evening 12-8. The Leafs won the first two games of the finals but dropped the third on Monday night 10-9 in a seven inning contest. Darkness was called then on account of darkness.

Last night's game ended the Bud's chances after they finished a poor second in the Quinte Soup Fray only allowed the Buds five stingy hits last night while his teammates met Lee twelve off Sager and Herm Chambers. Sager started but retired to the showers in the third frame after two runs were scored. Herm relieved him of the mound duties and the latter also counted one after he started. Sager struck out six and passed two while Chambers did not issue a free ride and whiffed three. Free left Fox at C. A. Rutan 3b; Redcliffe at; Free p; Reid 1b; C. Rutan cf; Armstrong lf.

WITH THE LAWN BOWLERS

By McElwain & Watkin

Monday's open night was a decided success, bowls were as scarce as hen's teeth but everyone managed somehow and all enjoyed themselves. This is indeed encouraging to the officers of the club. Keep it up, there is a long winter ahead.

On Monday afternoon a game of triples was played between C. Dunn and G. Watkin, the Watkin rink winning by a slight margin. The teams: Joe Black, G. McGee, C. Dorse, skip; Newt Taylor, O. J. McIntosh and G. Watkin skip.

Have you paired for Labour Day yet?

On Monday night a real close game of rinks were played, C. Sulman and H. Thompson, skiping. The game finished a tie for all. This represents the play. The teams: W. A. Bacins, M. Vanner, E. Holland and H. Thompson v. Joe Black, Rod Mitchell, F. Harper and C. Sulman.

In the married couples doubles four games were played Monday night, Shaw winning from Davis; Wannacott winning from Hyde; McNicoll winning from Cross; Watkin winning from Dr. Reed.

Mr. and Mrs. O. J. McIntosh are back from a month's holiday. Glad to see them back again.

Sixteen couples have entered the married couples' doubles. Four sets of prizes will be given. First prize, a Brood Hat, for the gentleman and sweater for the lady donated by John Shaw. Second prize, Rubberset Windbreakers donated by C. Symons. Runners-up in first section, 1 Pair Pictures donated by Bob Wray. Runners up in second section Condensed Playlists donated by the Walker Hardware.

In a game of doubles Monday night between Bob Dewar and Bob Wray v. O. J. McIntosh and G. Watkin, the Watkin rink won 11 to 3.

The following team went to Kingston to compete in the men's rinks. Joe Black, Rod Mitchell, F. Harper and C. Sulman, skip. This team ought to give a good account of themselves. Here's hoping.

Two games were played Tuesday night in the married couples' doubles. McElwain-Symons and McBride; Hyde winning from F. Houston.

In a game of doubles Tuesday night Dave Fisher and Mrs. Fisher played Carl Fisher and Mrs. Tanner. The game went 22 ends, ending in a tie score 21-21.

In a game doubles Tuesday night F. Harper and John Shaw beat Joe Black and H. Bryant by a small margin.

In a game rinks on Tuesday night Wally Walsh beat A. Symons by a score 26-18. The teams were: J. Beer, Hayler, O. McGee, O. J. McIntosh and Wally Wash v. D. Symons, A. Williamson, Mr. Walker and A. Symons.

I was just wondering why it is that all games phoned to me are phoned by the winning team. Life is very funny anyway.

Married couples games must not be played Wednesday or Friday nights.

In a game of doubles Wednesday afternoon Newt Wilmer and Harry Stewart beat O. J. McIntosh and John Shaw, 18-18.

In the married couples competition four games were played on Wednesday afternoon, Watkin winning from Thompson; Fisher winning from McBride; Walsh winning from Cross; Thompson winning from McBride.

Wednesday evening's tournament gave the following teams wins:

One game, High—N. Wilbur, Mr. Butler, Mrs. Thompson and Wally Walsh, skip.

Doubles, First Prize—Mrs. Richards and Geo. Woodley.

Two internationally noted stars of theatre-goers as Gladys Cooper and Philip Merrivale, both shown above as they landed.

CURRENT SPORT

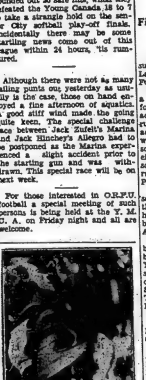
DAY BY DAY

Insofar as the local Radios are concerned the regular schedule or the C.O.B.L. is all washed up and hung out to dry. When the locals booked away last night's game in Kingston they lost any chance of finishing above the third hole in the loop, but when the Ponies come to town on Friday night they are very much interested in victory, as the Daly-led aggregation still entertain fond hopes of pushing the Petes off their lofty perch. Of course the truth of the matter is that neither Kingston or Peterboro desire to meet the Millmen in the league semi-final play-offs.

We doubt if a smaller crowd ever witnessed a C.O.B.L. game in Kingston than was on hand last evening when the Radios kicked in with five or six glaring errors and lost a listless game to the tune of 6 to 2. The locals could have easily won the pastime, or at least held a decided advantage, in the initial stanza, but they batted the pench or spirit, or something, out of the ears of the features of the game was Jim Barclay's hitting. Formerly regarded there nice singles, all honest-to-goodness hits and was actually robbed of a fourth, when Vic McQuade made a spectacular catch in left-centre. The two pitchers, Wilkins for the Radios and Clancy for the home team yielded a flock of hits, but had Wilkins been accorded the same support in the field, that Clancy received, well doubtless the Millmen would have come down in front.

The Oshawa club announced yesterday they had drafted for the season and would forfeit their remaining two games, one to Kingston and one to Peterboro, which should cause no trouble between these two clubs. Incidentally, on the other hand the Ponies still entertain fond hopes of coming down in front of the Petes, but the Daly-led club still have the Radios to contend with, if they are to finish the Ponies over here in Belleville on Friday evening, well there's no chance of finishing first would be about in the same category as the ghost of the Radios. Naturally the Radios do not desire any long lay-off, while Peterboro and Kingston enjoy a little war of their own, so it looks as if Friday night's Kingston-Belleville tussle will result in some good ball being played, Jamieson and Williams, with doubtlessly be the starting pitchers.



Down at Napanee yesterday an all-star team composed of players from the Picton and Napanee clubs defeated Chappis Johnson's colored team from Syracuse, N.Y., by the score of 3 to 2. Three successive singles culminated by Ellis' drive in the Napanee ball yard yesterday, Miller Johnson's team undoubtedly is baseball conscious.

When the Peterboro Juniors downed the Oshawa kids 8 to 2 at the Little Britain City last night, the playoff series in the junior section of the Lake Shore League was all knotted up, one game each. This will doubtlessly cause a further delay in the O.B.A.A. play-downs for the local Kiwanis kids, as the Peterboro and Oshawa juniors will now meet in a deciding death game at Port Hope on Saturday. The provincial junior play-offs were to have commenced on Saturday of this week with Belleville meeting the winner of the Lake Shore Loop. Doubtlessly this series will open next Wednesday. As daylight saving ends in Belleville on Aug. 25th, local sporting moguls only have ten more days in which to enjoy their extra hour of sunlight.

Cy Barriage's Recreations pulled a surprise by many when they downed the London Lunch nine by the score of 15 to 8 last eve, in the first play-off game in the local Mercantile league. The London lunch lead the Mercantile loop practically from the barrier to the wire, but one more defeat at the hands of the Recreations and Geo. Rikes' merry band will be on the outside looking in. While all of this was going on the Asjmas softballers pounded out 20 safe hits, when they defeated the Young Canada 18 to 7 to take a straingle hold on the senior City softball play-off finals. Incidentally there may be some startling news come out of this league within 24 hours, 'tis rumored.

Although there were not as many sailing punts out yesterday as usually is the case, those on hand enjoyed a fine afternoon of aquatics. A good stiff wind made the going fast and keen. The special challenge race between Jack Zufelt's Marina and Jack Hinsberg's Allegro had to be postponed as the Marina experienced a slight accident prior to the starting gun and was withdrawn. This special race will be on next week.

For those interested in O.R.F.U. football a special meeting of such persons is being held at the Y. M. C. A. on Friday night and all are welcome.

MISS KATHLEEN LIGHT
Kathleen Light of New Liskeard, Ont., set a new Canadian record for the junior discus throwing event at the Dominion women's track and field championships in Montreal, when she hurled the metal plate 104 feet 1 inch. Here is the eastern Ontario, miss making her record throw.

YOUNG CANADAS ARE ONE DOWN

Asjmas Win 18 to 7 in a Free Hitting Contest

Blasting the deliveries of two hurlers to many parts of Central Park the locals Asjmas won the third game in the local Senior City softball play-offs, when they downed the Young Canadas by the score of 18 to 7. Each club had previously won a tilt, but last night's victory raises the stocks of the Asjmas, they having two wins in a possible five game series.

The Asjmas collected 16 of their 18 runs in the first three innings, driving Bunt Miller to shower, "Skee" Brant taking over the pitching duties for the Young Canadas. Johnnie Bawden started on the hilltop for the Asjmas but was relieved by Frank Parrao in the fourth. Bawden struck out three, while Parrao whiffed five.Miller struck out two for Brant and the local Asjmas' back to the bench via the strike out route.

The Bowler-led Asjmas considerably fattened their batting averages last night in a free hitting contest, with only one circuit blow being registered, Doc Canning from the bat of Gerald Ethier, first baseman for the slacker. Henn, Cook and Ethier were the big guns for the Asjmas. Lack of control proved the downfall of the Young Canada hurlers as they walked no less than eight Asjmas batters in all, those entering into the ultimate scoring.

The line-ups— Young Canada — Palmer 2b; Ethier 3b; Latchford and Alexander cf; F. Miller, lf; Reid 3b; M. Latchford 1b; T. Miller rf; Browne if; Robinson c; M. Miller and Brant p.

A BIG HELP

By Jack Sords

FOXBORO LOSES TO LATTA 2-1

First Game in Playoff For The Title is a Thriller

Playing headache ball behind the superb pitching of Vance Tyner, Latta took the Foxboro team at Foxboro by the score of 2 to 1.

For the first three innings it was a pitcher's battle between Tyner for Latta and Ackerman for Foxboro's ace southpaw, Foxboro squeezed a run across in the fourth maintained the advantage until the sixth innings when Jack Hinsberg's Allegro had to be postponed as the Marina experienced a slight accident prior to the starting gun and was withdrawn. This special race will be on next week.

Latta threatened in the fifth, seventh and ninth when they had a base runner on first but were held hit safely. In the ninth with the bases full, Foxboro was pulled and Ashley finished for Foxboro.

Vance for Latta headed their batting attack with a double followed by C. Hall with two while Gow, Young and Richards each had a single. Gay led Foxboro with a double, followed by singles by Beeler, Jones, Wah and Peacock. The second game will be played Friday.

Line-up of teams:

Latta—C. Hall, J. Gowe, A. Hall, I. Young, J. Marsh, S. Vance, O. Parks, L. Shannon, B., Tyner.

Foxboro—Beeler, Wah, Peacock, A. Gay, E. Ketcheson, B. Johnson, Hainey, G. Wait, R. Peacock, H. Ketcheson.

Umpires—Plain, Don Thomas; Bases, J. Maracle.

PUNT RACES

Little untoward incident and no upsets marred the regular weekly punting races held off Victoria Park yesterday afternoon. A fresh breeze, which rippled the surface of the harbor, caused sailors of the varied craft to get in many of the finer points of navigation and the afternoon route, without the necessity of reefing sails.

Winners of the various classes were:—

A Class—John—1 hour, 39 minutes, 19 seconds; Gowe, 1:40:20; Hall, 21 minutes and 20 seconds; After You—1 hour, and 34 minutes.

B Class— Dorcey 1:43:40; Let's Go—1:43:50; Scraper—third.

16-footers — Spray—1:17:15; C. Serpent—1:19:58.

C—Class—Toole in 30 minutes. E. Class—Allegro—1:26:25.

RECREATIONS WIN FROM 'MUNCHERS'

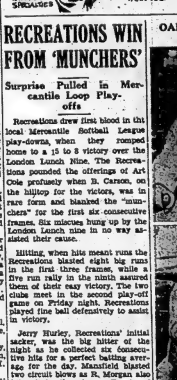
Surprise Pulled in Mercantile Loop Play-offs

Recreations drew first blood in the local Mercantile Softball League play-downs when they romped home to a 15 to 8 victory over the London Lunch Nine. The Recreations pounded the offerings of Art Cole profusely when B. Carson, on the hilltop for the victors, was in rare form and blanked the "munchers" for the first six consecutive frames, six minutes being up by the London Lunch nine in no way assisted their cause.

The fact that this meant runs the Recreations blasted eight big runs in the first three frames, while a five run rally in the ninth assured them of their easy victory. The two clubs meet in the second play-off game on Friday night. Recreations played fine ball defensively to assist in victory.

Jerry Hurley, Recreations' initial sacker, was the big hitter of the night as he collected six consecutive hits for a perfect batting average for the day. Mansfield blasted two circuit blows as R. Morgan also hit well for the winners. Rowsky of the "munchers" was the best offensively for the losing nine, he having four hits in five tries. Carson limited the losers to seven scattered hits.

The line-ups:



London Lunch—Rikes: Ostrom; Semark; Cole; Cromilish; Hall; Rowsky; Westfall and Tobe.

Recreations—Robinson; Cornell; Tripp; R. Morgan; Hurley; F. Morgan; Mansfield; Balys; R. Morgan and Carson.

Score by innings:

| | R | H | E |
|---|---|---|---|
| Recreations | 5 | 7 | 0 |
| London Lunch | 000 | 000 | 203—8 | 7 | 6 |

Umpires—Temple and Fair.

BOY 6, TRICYCLES TO "SEE WORLD"

Jersey Ferries to New York From Jersey Only to Meet the Police

Guttenberg, N. J., Aug. 15—William Sundt, Jr., 6 years old, of 134 Twenty-fifth Street, here set out from his home early this morning on a tricycle to "see the world." After an exciting day, during which he was variously entertained by the Hoboken police, the boy was returned to his anxious mother late in the afternoon convinced that the world is a rather big place for a youthful explorer.

Billy, a blond, blue-eyed youngster, started on his adventure shortly after 10 A. M. clad in a white blouse and blue overalls with red trimmings. Barefooted, he pedaled his tricycle five miles to the Twentieth Street Ferry at Hoboken, where he spent half of his exploration funds of 10 cents to board the ferryboat for New York.

Arriving in the city, Billy, pedaling from the ferry house, met a patrolman who asked him where he was headed. The boy replied that he was "off to see the world and especially to see the toys in the city stores."

The patrolman placed the lad on a returning boat, after notifying the Hoboken police that the young explorer was returning from his trip. At the Jersey side he was met by Patrolman John O'Toole, who took him to police headquarters where Captain Bernard McPeeley entertained him while trying to find out where he lived.

After a repast of milk, sandwiches, pie and lollypops, the boy who could not remember his name finally told the police that he lived near Bergenline Avenue. Captain McPeeley, telephoning the police of the various communities in that area by the avenue, ascertained that Billy had been reported as missing in Guttenberg.

30 FOOT TRUCK LIMIT

New York, August 15—Adoption by the city of an ordinance prohibiting motor trucks more than thirty feet long from entering the downtown food market section of Manhattan was urged upon Mayor La Guardia. The recommendation was made by a fact-finding committee on food trucking, which Dr. John A. Harriss is chairman. It was appointed by the Mayor several months ago.

The Part the C. N. R. Plays in Marketing Canada's Crops.

So essential to the trade, commerce, and general welfare of Canada are the various classes of freight carried in the course of a year by Canadian National Railways that it is difficult to give pride of place to any particular one, but in their all-round importance to every section of the community, agricultural products must rank very high. They form the back-bone of the nation's business activities and contribute directly and in large volume to its industry and employment everywhere.

During 1934 the C. N. R. carried over eight and a half million tons of agricultural produce, being an increase of 6.44% over 1933. In this total are included 134,700,000 bushels of wheat, 15,000,000 bushels of corn, 13,700,000 bushels of oats, and 15,500,000 bushels of barley; the aggregate of these commodities showing an increase of 4.1% when compared with the preceding year.

It is interesting to note that the average haul of each ton of wheat was approximately seven hundred and fifty miles.

Without the rail facilities of the C. N. R. no doubt some of this agricultural produce might still have reached a market, but it could only have done so at a much higher cost to the producer, and the quantity would necessarily have been negligible . . . for practically all the crops which enter into the figures above enumerated were placed in freight cars at points where the only rail transportation obtainable was that provided by Canadian National Railways.

These crops come from far scattered districts : : : in many cases from sparsely populated communities . . . but they are the result of the labours of men and women who each year create millions and millions of dollars of new wealth for Canada. In this work the C. N. R. is their partner and helper.

As is well known the crop movements of recent years have been much below normal . . . much below the standard of productivity of our prairies and agricultural areas, and much below the volume which the C. N. R. is equipped to handle. The figures quoted should, therefore, be considered in that light.

The carriage of agricultural produce is, of course, only one of the activities of the C. N. R. In every branch of rail transportation it is equipped to give the best of service : : : all the year round . . . under all conditions . . . economically, courteously, and competently. Your patronage is respectfully solicited.

During the present Summer season the C. N. R. is providing special fares and excursions between points throughout Canada. These are exceptionally low fares. The nearest C. N. R. Agent will be glad to give full particulars.

SINISTER SHADOW

by JOHN GOODWIN

"Tis," meaning is pretty clear, Barber, obviously a crook and probably a blackmailer, had some pull over the late Bannister Coote, wasn't admitted to the house, but claimed this appointment with Coote, Coote kept that appointment, taking Selby with him. The latter is evidence, and Mr. Coote, rather than carry it about with him, locked it in his desk before leaving.

"It's just as plain that Mrs. Selby and her daughter knew there was something in that desk worth getting hold of. Either they must have seen him put it there—which seems unlikely—or they got word of it from somebody. Nobody could have told them that except Selby himself."

He took down Coote's desk telephone and rang a call that was put through in thirty seconds.

"Sergeant Howe, King's Elm. Warn all stations and patrols. Wanted, Sammel Barber or Brand; seaman, age about forty, height five eleven, sallow face, dark eyes; last seen wearing old blue suit, gum boots, seaman's south-wester, oil-skin coat, pierce out of lower edge.

"Inquire immediately tiezgt-clerk of all railway depots north and east of King's Elm, night traffic branch first, especially Hall and Coote. Arrest and detain. Report King's Elm four."

He hung up, and sealed himself beside Sonia.

"And now, Miss Nell, we'll have the truth about that quarrel that broke loose last night. No use withholding information from the police. You don't want me to get it from the Selbys' I'm not waiting for Chalmers's return—if he does return. I've got to have the facts from you—the truth."

"I'll tell you," said Sonia. "And forthwith she related the story briefly and clearly; her contact with Bannister Coote, the return of Brian, and all that stems of it up to the exodus to the King O'Bells. She did not spare herself. She omitted nothing, not even the story of the Coote Diamond. But she dwelt very very briefly upon that. She felt that the facts about it must come from Brian himself. The truth that she was to have been Bannister Coote's wife she made quite plain.

Howe listened without a single comment or interruption. She noticed that he no longer watched her while she related her story, but stared straight before him at the fire. He heard her to the end.

"That's a strange story, Miss Nell. But it's natural it's human. There's two sides to it and I quite understand your point of view. I'll say it's a good thing you got out of that house last night."

"Thank you for saying it," said Sonia, with the trace of a smile. "I'm trusting you."

Howe's eyes twinkled.

"I've never balked myself, that a police officer investigatin' crime cases should play the part of accessory after the fact and sit tight as a clam on everything he knows. We'd get nowhere that way and me on a case like this. But Mr. Brian Chalmers," he added, "would be in a mighty tight place without you—and that girl at the inn. You see Miss, he had uncommon strong motives for wanting Mr. Coote out of the way."

"Sam Barber had plenty of motive too; a blackmailing crook playing a dangerous game — when it comes to the rub he'd go either to squeeze the man he was after, or silence him. Selby, as far as we can see, had no motive at all."

"But surely it's monstrous to suggest Mr. Chalmers had anything to do with a murder!" exclaimed Sonia. "It was—"

"Is it Miss? Feeling as you do, you naturally put it stronger than you should. Now, when that girl made that accusation a little while ago, I noticed it upset you considerable."

"At present we're working together, as you might say. I'm going to stretch a point and tell you something about the Selbys.

"Mr. Coote's butler, James Selby, isn't unknown to the police. He's served two terms of imprisonment; one in South Africa and one here on a similar time ago. It's true, he can't generally follow up a man like that and give him the sack for as long as he's going straight; in fact we've always kept him on, but I'm sorry I decided.

"Knowing as I do that Selby was an ex-convict who'd worked himself into a snug job in a swell house whose owner was a diamond merchant—a bigger local responsibility than I cared about—I took it on myself to ask Mr. Coote if he knew what he was doing. I put it up to him. In this room where we're sitting, and I think Mr. Coote was a bit surprised that I knew. He told me, quite cool, that he knew all about Selby who had been perfectly frank with him, and he was as good a judge of his fellow-creatures as any policeman. He said he was sorry for Selby's wife and daughter, that he'd found him reliable and faithful; he was a reformed character, he was well paid for the first time in his life, and Mr. Coote did not intend to have him harried.

"I didn't tell Coote that you can't pay a crook enough to reform him, for there isn't that much money on earth. But I'm bound to say Selby had some hold over him, not, Miss, that he'd been a bad master. Coote would have paid him off and quietly got rid of him. But he didn't; he stuck to him. He, Coote's the sort that will face anything out. A big man locally, owns three parishes, and always figured that he could do as he liked. Of course there's no law against giving an ex-convict a job. He tried to make trouble for me over that. I was no favorite of Mr. Bannister Coote's."

"Tell me," said Sonia, "do you know anything about Mr. Coote himself? It seems to me he was more of a problem than Selby."

"Whatever there is to know about Mr. Coote is goin' to come out pretty soon. That won't make so much new he's dead. What the law will want to know is, who killed him."

He rose and went downstairs to the morning room, here he found Deborah Selby and her mother in close consultation. Howe closed the door and drew a chair forward.

"Mrs. Selby," he said. "I want to know when you last saw your husband."

She had pulled herself together; her manner was impressive.

"Nine thirty last night, just before he went out."

"Not seen him since? Sure of that? Did he say where he was going, and why?"

"He said he wasn't going to let the master go out alone, while Mr. Chalmers was about. That's all he said. And all he said."

"Did you know why Mr. Coote went out?"

"I'm an idea—" said the woman grimly.

"Never mind about ideas; I want to hear what you know of fact."

She shrugged her shoulders, and shook her head.

"Do you know a man called Barber—or Brand?"

"Never heard the name."

"A sailor; wearing a black oilskin and gum boots? No? And you?" he said to Deborah.

"No such man ever heard of here," replied the girl.

"That so? And about this quarrel. You say you heard Mr. Chalmers use a threat? Where were you?"

"I was just coming out of the service passage at the back. I saw that girl, Miss Nell, come out of the mornin'-room in a hurry. There was nobody in the hall; my father wasn't there. She let herself through the front doors; there was a car waiting.

"I heard Mr. Chalmers' voice in the morning-room; he spoke loud enough. He said, 'Damn you, if you say another word I'll kill you! You'd be better dead; you'll be kept out of my own long enough.' And I heard a struggle; like a chair being turned over, and blows. Mr. Coote was an old man, no match for a strong fellow like Chalmers. Awful, it was. I was starting for the door to see what was doing, but the Chalmers came out before I got there; he went right off to the wood and him and Miss Nell drove away together. He never took any notice of me. Then my mother came out of the passage; I told her what I'd heard—she stopped me going in and called for my Dad, who was coming down the stairs—and told him that he went in at once. My mother told me to keep away; she said the master wouldn't want any women round him."

"Ah. And then?"

CHAPTER XIX

"I was run for, and father told me to bring some hot water to the master. When I came back with it, Mr. Coote was sittin' in his chair, his head hangin' down, his tray with the brandy down, and left."

"Who gave Mr. Coote the brandy and how long were you with him?"

"No longer than it took to take thetray in. I saw my father pouring some out for the master; Dad sent me away he stayed with Mr. Coote."

"Constant Howe paused.

"Of course I'm sure!" said the girl hotly. "D'you think I'm lying?" she added more gently, my girl," said Howe. "Anything else you noticed, Miss, took the tray in?"

"Yes. The ornament was sittin' back in the arm-chair, his hand had been out of somewhere, there was a bit of plaster stuck on it. I thought Mr. Coote must have got it on for him."

"Did your father tell you so?"

"No sir he said to me when he came out later was "That young devil Chalmers has been man-handling the Guv'nor; I knew what it'd come to; he hasn't been right always did." And father told me to keep my head about it. All a gentleman did didn't want it known."

"Did you see Mr. Coote again that night? "Have any talk with him?" now and the time you're in the witness-stand. Now Mrs. Selby, about that desk in Mr. Coote's room! What were you trying to find?"

"Mr. Coote once told Selby" said the woman glibly "that if ever anything happened to him Selby was to open that desk with the master's keys and pack off all the papers at it right away to Mr. Coote's lawyers. We're old servants and were trusted. When I heard that awful news; that Mr. Coote was dead and my husband missing, I went right up to carry out those orders. I'd have done it too, though I hadn't the master's keys, and mine wouldn't fit. That's all. I'm here to do what I'm told."

Howes inquiring nose gave a thoughtful twitch. He had noticed papers in that desk which, though they might have nothing to do with the present case, were not the sort of things a man would pass into any lawyer's hands.

"I get it," he said. "You weren't to telephone your master's lawyer and tell him those alone and take charge.—You, a servant, were to get the desk open and send the things along to him by the public mail. You weren't after that!" he added, suddenly holding before her the scrawled envelope that contained Sam Barber's letter.

Mrs. Selby stared at it stanchly. "Never saw nor heard of it. What is it?" she said.

"Somebody would have been in a mighty tight place if that had never been found. If you don't know what it is don't worry about it; por about your husband! Mrs. Selby, if that's the best explanation you can give me, I'd think that over too if I was you. And that'll do for the present."

As Howe rose, Deborah Selby stepped forward before her mother could stop her, her little fists clenched and her eyes blazing.

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop came home for supper and he said, Willyum I must look like the remnants of a ghost, I had the most freaky shock this afternoon, you not over it yet. You know I'm always had an unavoidable feeling that a telegram couldn't possibly mean anything but bad luck for me and you're always laughed at me for it, but this afternoon I had it proved to me beyond the pasthe shadow of a doubt, she said.

"You received a telegraph? pop said. What was it, where is it? he said, and ma said. When the messenger boy handed it to me I had a presentiment that the worst had happened, and I just stood there holding it like a person transfixed to the spot, and my hands trembled so I couldn't open it for several minutes. Bleeve me Willyum what I passed through was no discription, ma said.

Then, let's skip it, pop said. What was in the telegram for Pete sake. Was it your sister Pauline? he said. Was it your boss never to live through another moment like that, or perhaps it would be more grateful to say I'm thankful to of received that one. Every possible calamity of the rainbow flashed through my mind, pleurisy, infantile paralyz azidents, Willyum, with you in the center of each, and then just by chance my eyes happened to rite on the address, and the telegram was for Nora, it read, she said.

Yes, pod, then it was Nora that had the bad news, pop said, and ma said, Not at all, she was so pleased to get the telegram, she was in such a presentiment that the worst had happened, and I just stood there as paralyzed. The message said that her sister is arriving from Ireland and Nora accordingly demanded 3 days off to go and meet her and spend the hours what all, and if you think it wasn't bad news for me to find out that I have to stay with out Nora for 3 days, you're just thinking nonsense, she said.

I'm a reik, I need nourishment, pop said.

Meaning to go and eat supper. Which we did, being lam slew without dumplings.

Law Briefs Old

The system of submitting all cases to a court in the form of a written brief existed in Egypt about 3,000 years ago. One such brief in the Berlin museum covers litigation between an heir and an executor; it is believed to be of that age and the oldest document of its kind in existence.

TARZAN THE UNTAMED—

On the surface of the ground or through the swaying branches of the trees the moon or man or beast was an open book to Tarzan of the Apes. But even his acute senses were baffled by the spoorless trail which Akut and his mate Kerk had left in shifting air thousands of feet above the tree tops before it fell.

Eyes, ears and sense of smell were all useless to the ape-man this time. Only on his sense of direction could Tarzan depend in searching for the fallen plane.

Before he left the valley of plenty he had made several small hills and carried the chalky, boneless cuts with him. Now he had left the dense vegetation of the jungle.

The first day of his search he climbed to the highest hills where only coarse, stiff scrub grew. From here his keen eyes searched the arid landscape before him. He saw again those terrible gorges that had so nearly claimed his life once before and which he must recross. For two days he sought for some clew to the whereabouts of the machine.

He saw nothing that would help him locate it or his mate. He found that first deep gorge and circled far beyond it. He cached portions of his kills at different points, building cairns of rock to mark their location.

Occasionally he stopped and called aloud, listening for some response but only sinister silence drew to the whereabouts of the machine.

KING ADVOCATES CONTROL VESTED IN PARLIAMENT

"I am in favor of . . . Marketing Act," the Liberal Chieftain declared. "I am in favor of compulsory regulation of Marketing but I want the supremacy of Parliament maintained and want the regulations to be approved by Parliament."

Mr. King said in Great Britain all Marketing regulations were approved by Parliament. The same would and should be done in Canada. It would give protection to other classes than those interested in marketing schemes who might be affected by them.

Provincial Election Delay

Announcement of the date of the General Election, October 14, came to Mr. King just at the end of his speech, for which he protested against its delay and held it up as one of many instances of Premier Bennett's "dictatorial policies". He declared election day would mean the end of autocracy in Canada and would see the return of a Liberal and responsible government.

Referring to Hon. H. H. Stevens and his Reconstruction Party, Mr. King said most of the evils revealed by the Price Spreads Inquiry had grown up under the very nose of Mr. Stevens' own Department of Trade and Commerce. Hon. James Malcolm, former Liberal Minister of Trade and Commerce, was on the platform and Mr. King remarked such evils as revealed by the inquiry did not exist under Mr. Malcolm. On the contrary trade continually expanded, he said.

J. S. Woodsworth and his Co-operative Commonwealth Federation wanted to establish a socialistic state but the Liberal Party was opposed to that, Mr. King added. The reason was it would mean a great bureaucracy and a great extension of State Power. A bureaucracy handled force and experience with socialistic states everywhere was they meant dictatorships.

Delay Protested

Comparing the struggle of the Liberal party for office now with the struggle for responsible government in Canada a century ago Mr. King said Mr. Bennett had shown parliament of its power and destroyed responsibility of government to parliament and through parliament to the electors.

The long delay in holding the election showed Mr. Bennett's disregard for responsible government. Parliament was now dissolved but the Bennett government with extraordinary powers, wrested from parliament, would go on until election day, spending millions of dollars from the "blank cheque" raising tariffs by executive action and making appointments to further build up a "Tory bureaucracy."

A century ago, said Mr. King, Canada had no parliament but the executive was chosen by the governor and was not responsible to parliament. It took a long, bitter struggle to establish responsible government and the Liberal party was born in that struggle. Now in the last five years the power of parliament had been again turned over to the executive, power of taxation, power to regulate marketing, power to maintain peace, order and good government.

Speaks on Reform

Reform, said Mr. King, meant a larger freedom. Mr. Bennett had said reform meant government intervention, regulation and control. This showed he did not know the meaning of reform. Regulation was a means to an end and not an end it itself.

Under the "blank cheque" the Bennett government had expended or made guarantees for $503,000,000 apart from the wheat guarantees, said Mr. King. This was more than the total expenditure of the Dominion in any year up to the middle of the Great War.

"What more could a dictator want," asked Mr. King, "than power to take as much money as he wanted out of the treasury and power to make laws for peace, order and good government."

"Has Hitler any more power," he asked. "Has Mussolini any more power? Mussolini is about to send his troops off to Africa to fight. He will need funds for that. I have no doubt he will do it all in the name of peace, order and good government of Italy."

But in Italy and Germany dictatorships had gone further. No one could vote unless he belonged to the party in power. In Germany religious freedom was being destroyed. In both countries a man could not think about without running the risk of being sent to jail.

Don't Want Titles

After the way the people's liberties in Canada had been tampered with in the last five years is no time for them to wake up and see where they were being led, he said.

"Little by little our whole country is being changed from one of self-government to one of dictatorship such as they have in Europe," said the Liberal leader.

Restoration of titles was another instance of Mr. Bennett's disregard for the will of parliament, he claimed. Bennett restored them in defiance of a resolution of the House of Commons passed under a previous Conservative government.

"Mr. Bennett wants titles," said Mr. King, "not for the good of the people but just in order to be able to pick out his favorites here and there and so honor his followers in order to keep them silent. But we don't want titles in Canada."

ETHIOPIA DEVELOPING HER OWN PRIMITIVE GAS ATTACK

Italian soldiers may have very latest deadly gases at their disposal for the discomfort of Ethiopian troops, but the Ethiopians, backward though they may be are cultivating a gas attack of their own in the person of the civit cat which is an enlarged edition of a skunk, and which is said to give off an odor three times as potent. The Italian soldiers shown ABOVE, embarking for Eritrea, will probably experience contact with these animals.

JEALOUS FRENZY BELIEVED CAUSE

Wife Half Carried Into Court to Answer Murder Charge

New York, Aug. 15 (AP)—A 35-year-old matron was half-dragged, half-carried into Magistrate's Court for arraignment on the charge she murdered her husband's pretty secretary in a jealous frenzy.

Mrs. Etta Reisman was in a state of semi-collapse as she was arraigned on a short affidavit alleging first degree murder for the fatal shooting early this morning of Miss Virginia Seigh, 23.

Magistrate Frank Giorgio adjourned the case until August 31 so the accused could obtain counsel. She was ordered held without bail.

Hallie Seigh, by her husband's announcement he loved his secretary and intended to obtain a separation, authorities said, the housewife, mother of a nine-year-old son solved the triangle with Reisman's own revolver.

Police reconstructed the shooting in this way:

Hallie Seigh and Mrs. Reisman, stepdaughter, Annette, were trying to persuade Reisman, who was intoxicated, to leave his car and come into the house. Mrs. Reisman emerged from the house just in time to hear her husband, prosperous beauty shop proprietor, mumble:

"I love Virginia and Virginia loves me."

The jealous-crazed woman returned to the house, authorities said, and came out with her husband's revolver. She sent one bullet into the pretty secretary's pajama-clad body. Her stepdaughter struggled with her for the gun. It went off again, wounding Annette in the hand.

Miss Seigh had lived with the Reismans for seven years.

APPOINTMENTS ANNOUNCED

Lieut. Col. G. R. Geary, Toronto, Minister of Justice, succeeding Hon. Hugh Guthrie who was appointed chairman of the Board of Railway Commissioners for a term of ten years.

J. L. Ilsley, Toronto, Minister of National Revenue, who succeeds Hon. R. C. Matthews, who is retiring from active politics.

William G. Ernst, Lunenburg, N.S., Minister of Fisheries, a post which has been vacant since Feb., 1932.

Raoul Gedeon Dandurand, Que., Minister without Portfolio, to round out the French-Canadian representation in the administration.

The shake-up left three portfolios open—Marine, Post Office and Finance. It was expected that J. C. D. Dumesnil, Montreal lawyer, would become Minister of Marine succeeding Judge Alfred Duranleau and he was present in the Prime Minister's office yesterday.

Solicitor-General Maurice Dupre was suggested to become Post Master-General, succeeding Senator Arthur Sauve and his office filled by a Montreal lawyer.

Senator N. N. Rhodes, it was reported, would remain Minister of Finance for some time to come, despite his ill health.

To round out the cabinet, it was reported that Chester McLure, Conservative member of Parliament for Moncton, would become a Minister without Portfolio representing Prince Edward Island. The island province has not been represented since the appointment of Senator J. A. MacDonald, former Minister without Portfolio.

With Hon. Hon. Mackenzie King campaigning for the Liberals in Western Ontario, Hon. H. H. Stevens preaching the doctrines of the Reconstruction Party and R. B. Woodsworth the C.C.F. Party, in the west, Conservative leaders were expected to jump into the campaign in 10 days or two weeks.

Thanksgiving October, 24

In-made way for the election, the Government passed an Order-in-Council yesterday delaying Thanksgiving Day, October 10, the National holiday originally was scheduled for October 24.

The gray-walled, turreted East Block was a hive of activity yesterday. The Governor-General landed back from Quebec at noon and conferred with the Prime Minister for an hour.

At 2 p.m. the four new ministers, hastily sitted in morning coats, scampered to the Senate chamber for the swearing-in ceremony of office. Later they trooped down the hall to the swearing-in desk of clerk Arthur Leed Beauborough.

A few seconds later they attended their first Cabinet meeting in the Privy Council, which announcement of dissolution and the date of the election was made.

The Senate was brought up to within two of a full complement of its members with the appointment of the following:

A. J. Legar, Meamaxaook, N.B., formerly provincial treasurer in the Tilley Administration.

R. F. Smith, Conservative member for Victoria-Carleton in the last House.

Col. H. A. Mullins, Conservative member for Marquette, Man. in the last House and one of the old-time cattlemen of the West.

John T. Haig, Winnipeg lawyer, who has spent many years in the Manitoba Legislature.

Dr. Rapnas Paquet, Bonaventure, Que., who sat in the House of Commons from 1896 to 1911 and was a member of the short-lived Meighen Government of 1926.

The Senatorial appointments gave the Conservatives a majority of thirty over the Liberals with two vacancies.

Bench Appointments

Appointments to the Bench were as follows:—W. H. Harrison, former attorney-general for New Brunswick, to the Provincial Court of Appeals; J. N. A. Fairweather, Saint John, New Brunswick Court of King's Bench; L. P. D. Tilley, former Premier of New Brunswick, Judge of the County Court of King's and Local Judge in Admiralty; N. B. Mills, North Battleford, Sask., District Judge for Kindersley; A. O. Archambeault, Montreal, District Judge for Shawinigan; Judge W. T. Henderson, Stratford, Ont. promoted from Ontario High Court to Court of Appeal; F. D. Hogg, Ottawa and J. Keller MacKay, Toronto to the Ontario High Court, trial division.

The new Wheat Board will be:—John McFarland, Winnipeg, chairman; D. L. Smith, Winnipeg and Prof. W. J. Rose, professor of Economics at the University of Manitoba.

Two Conservative members were appointed Deputy Ministers—R. K. Smith, (Chairman), Ottawa, to the Marine Department and John A. Wilson, Ottawa (Marshall) to the Post Office Department. Both Messrs. Smith been vacant for a long time.

The new Secretary to the Tariff Board was J. R. ——— MacGregor of Ottawa, for the last three or four years secretary to the Board of Grain Commissioners.

The Advisory Committee to act with the Wheat Board was named as follows—Robert McKee, Vancouver, representing the Grain Shippers; S. T. Smith, Winnipeg, representing the Grain Trade; O. G. C. Short, Montreal, representing the Millers; Paul Bredt, Winnipeg; Lew Hutchison, Duhamel, Alta.; L. C. Brouillette, Winnipeg and Brooks Catton, Hanley, Sask., representing wheat growers.

JOAN BLONDELL SEEKS DIVORCE

Announcement that Joan Blondell, screen comedienne, would sue husband Dick Powell, actor, for divorce in Reno on grounds of cruelty was made by the star's lawyer. It was reported she would ask custody of their nine-months-old baby. Joan and her husband and a new picture of Joan and her baby are shown.

KLONDIKE RUSH TO BE RECALLED

Robert Bogle of Belleville Regrets Inability to Attend

Old time "sourdoughs" who mushed over the trails of the Klondike and Yukon country following the first gold strike made in that country many years ago, are again preparing for the second Klondike rush to a "stampede reunion" to be held in Seattle during the three days of August 18, 19 and 17.

About 2,000 one-time gold seekers from all parts of Canada and the United States are expected to assemble for the reunion. It was at Seattle in the late 90's that they gathered in sail from there for the northern bonanza.

One man, Mr. Robert Bogle, of this city, one of the first men to arrive in the new gold fields of the frozen north following the first strike and one of the very few remaining members of the "Arctic Brotherhood" will not attend. A constitution which at the present time is not long enough will not permit him to make the long journey again to fraternize with many of his old friends it was stated at his home today.

The reunion will be featured by picnics, sports and reminiscences of frozen gold trails and trials in the days that have gone.

Elsie Unscarred In Auto Crash

Valhalla, N. Y., Aug. 15—No plastic surgery is expected to be necessary in connection with injuries suffered by Miss Elsie Janis, actress, in an auto accident July 24, it was said by physicians at Grasslands Hospital where she is recovering. The date of her release is still uncertain.

Reports that plastic surgery would be resorted to because of scars marring the actress's features was denied by hospital authorities. The physician in charge said that the only cut in Miss Janis's face was under her right eye, and that has healed perfectly, leaving no scar.

There is some talk, he said, of touching up the scar let's by the most serious injury, which was a deep cut in the back of the head.

Mr. W. E. Tummon M.P., returned on Tuesday morning from Ottawa. Civic Hospital where he was operated on a few years ago, is preserving favorably but will find it necessary to take things easy for a couple of weeks.

A large number went to Belleville on Tuesday night to see the House of David-Perth baseball team play Belleville. They were amazed and thrilled at the exhibition of skill in handling the ball that was shown by the famous House of David team.

Miss Margaret Houston entertained a number of her friends at a marshmallow roast and swimming party at the cottage on Stoco Lake.

Rain prevented the Stirling-Tweed tennis match on Saturday afternoon. The Stirling players arrived but a heavy downpour of rain after one set had been played forced a cessation of play. It is hoped the Stirling players will return at some future date.

Tweed Memorial Park camping ground is a popular spot for tourists. At the present time four parties with their tents are camped at the park.

Current Attractions at Local Theatres

What Local Theatre Managers Have to Say About Current Offerings

AT THE STELLA

"Man On The Flying Trapeze" Laugh Film Is Triumph For W. C. Fields Ace Comic

W. C. Fields, laugh promoter of the age, reaches the top of his form as a comedian and pantomimist in his latest laugh riot, "Man on the Flying Trapeze" now running its merry way at the Stella Theatre.

With his particular gift for hilarious laugh comedy given full play, Fields carries the picture from one uproarious situation into another pausing occasionally in his monkeyshines to allow the audience to catch its breath, and a moment later sending it off into gales of hilarity over the kind of buffoonery for which he has so definite a flair.

As an amusing and quite plausible story carries Mr. Fields from one uproarious incident to another, this time he is cast as a down-trodden, subsistive husband persistently nagged by his wife and mother-in-law, consistently supported in his scrapes by his daughter, Mary Brian. At the office he is a memory expert clerk for a woolen manufacturer's. The action centers principally about Fields' efforts to attend a wrestling match. Unfortunately his wife and mother-in-law's travels his ticket while the comedian, in one of his famous trifling scenes has gone to the cellar to investigate the presence of burglars in the house. His troubles begin at once, from the moment he is jailed instead of the burglars, to the time he gets to the fight after the boss gives him the afternoon off to attend his mother-in-law's "funeral."

In a series of hilarious events which establish Fields as the outstanding laugh purveyor of the times, the worm begins to turn and in a funny but strangely pathetic scene Fields' wife and his "in-laws" seek his daughter. From that time on his luck begins to change. The sequences where he retires for the night, appears at the breakfast table, tries to "wow" his wife and arrives at his office are priceless bits of comedy which establish the artistry even more completely than his past successes.

"Shanghai" Love Story

Charles Boyer, rapidly emerging as one of the screen's finest romantic actors, meets in Paramount's "Shanghai", the second feature offering on the same program, a role completely worthy of his talents and the sensitive portrayal.

Starred with Loretta Young in an absorbingly dramatic story of the new East, Boyer rises to heights as the man who won an empire by his own strength and threw it away for the love of a woman.

Boyer is the mystery figure of the new Shanghai, the man who has come from nowhere to win virtually complete financial control of China. Indomitable, ruthless, merciless, he sweeps all obstacles from his path, does not even pause for the sake of love.

But when he meets Loretta Young everything is changed. She, wearied of a sycophantic society is drawn by his strength, he responds to her beauty. But their love is not complete because he is hiding a secret from her.

Laying the final plans for a fiendishly cough, Boyer realizes that his success will not be worth while unless he has Loretta Young's complete love. So, before a gathering of Shanghai society, he reveals himself as the son of a Manchu princess.

Tensely and rapidly, after Shanghai has repudiated Boyer, the drama races to its close in which these two make a strange decision as to their love.

Prominent in the supporting cast of "Shanghai" are Warner Oland, Allison Skipworth and Fred Keating.

This outstanding two-feature bill will be repeated again tonight and Friday, matinee and evening performances start daily at 2.30, 7.15, the last complete show starting at 8.30 p.m. "Shanghai" starts at 2.40 and 8.20 p.m.; "Man on the Flying Trapeze" at 3.45, 7.25 and 9.55.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Air Hawks"

Air Drama Now Playing Proves Thriller Packed With Action

Clustered by thrilling air action, intrigue and a romantic love story, "Air Hawks," opened today at the Capitol with Ralph Bellamy, Wiley Post and Tala Birell in the leading roles.

Bellamy's stalwart characterization as the head of the air transport company which has one of his fleet while Tala Birell, the "find" has one of the finest opportunities since her arrival in Hollywood to show her versatility as an actress.

The story deals with two rival air lines headed by Bellamy, who are competing for lucrative mail contracts.

Through an underworld character, played by Douglas Dumbrille, Bellamy's rival hires a mad scientist who has perfected a death-ray machine which can cause destruction from almost any distance.

Through a dramatic point, the machine wrecks havoc with Bellamy's planes bringing them to earth in flames.

If you like action, aviation and thrills, don't miss "Air Hawks."

The second feature, long a literary favorite as "A Dog of Flanders," written may years ago, yet as colorful a tale as one could ever hope to see.

It is the story of a boy of Flanders; of his friendship to become a great artist; of his efforts to grow up and win the love of the friendly of the little girl whom he has been forbidden to see because of his poverty; of his devotion to his grandfather; of his love for a mistreated dog.

"A Dog of Flanders" was written by Louise de la Ramee, "Ouida." Its hero CHEO have starred the brilliant young boy actor, Frankie Thomas, who got his start on the stage. He is ably supported by O. P. Heggie, the character actor who has been rewarded for his performances in "Anne of Green Gables."

Also seen in this splendid production is the dog "Lightning," a German shepherd that reaches the ultimate in understanding of the human emotions.

A Fox Movietone Newsreel that brings the latest events from all points of the universe completes the bill.

Beginning next Monday the Capitol management proudly announces the screen debut of the brilliant and accomplished English playwright, author and dramatist, Noel Coward, in a screen play written especially for him, entitled, "The Scoundrel." In conjunction with "The Scoundrel," there will be shown the first time in Ontario, a musicomedy entitled "Old Kentucky" in which the good-looking Buddy Rogers is featured along with a host of popular radio and screen players.

MYSTERY ALARM AMUSES POLICE

London Ont., Aug. 15 (CP)—Visions of masked gunmen holding up employees of the Bank of Montreal, Richmond street east and Queens avenue, at gun point flashed through minds of London police as they raced to the Bank Wednesday in answer to an emergency alarm.

Before the Bank opened for business the alarm sounded through the police station. Detectives sped to the scene while a police car gathered constables at downtown intersections.

Heavily armed the officers dashed into the Bank only to find employees and officials did not know what it was all about.

It is believed that some person in the bank accidently stepped on the alarm signal.

Pile Sufferers

Can You Answer These Questions?

Do you know why external rectal piles as applied to cure and painful Piles are only local in effect and do not reach to the real constitutional cause?

Why Piles are "come back" even after a first removal by cutting?

Do you know the cause of Piles is internal?

That there is congestion of blood in the lower bowel—the veins throb—the parts—itch?

Do you know that there is a harmless internal remedy for itch, ing, bleeding or protruding piles discovered by Dr. Leonhardt, known as HEM-ROID and sold with your money back if not joyfully satisfied with the first one bottle trial?

HEM-ROID banishes piles by relieving congested circulation and helps to heal and restore the sore surfaces.

HEM-ROID is so successful in even the most stubborn cases that J. S. McKeown and other food druggists advise every sufferer to get a bottle of HEM-ROID Tablets today—take them as directed—and if not completely satisfied with results—your money back.

THE FIRED THE FIRST SHOT AGAINST ITALY

If and when war comes between Italy and Ethiopia, the immediate cause will be the dispute over the town of Ualual on the border between Ethiopia and Eritrea, and it is at this point that hostilities may start. Already the two nations have clashed here when Chief Ghogoli (ABOVE) led his forces against the Italians, causing a further crisis in negotiations. The chief is shown in full battle raiment, mounted on his small but sion-bearded steed. Horses in many sections of Ethiopia are said to be fed with human flesh.

Children's Tax Soon Taken Off

Theatrical men here expressed themselves as pleased with the decision just announced by Premier Hepburn that in the course of a week or so the tax on children's amusement tickets would be taken off.

They foresee larger attendance of children as the result of removal of a great deal of source of annoyance on the part of the patrons and of the difficulties of making change especially when there is a popular children's picture showing.

PORT PERRY REMAINS DRY

Port Perry, Ont., Aug. 15—(CP)—The "to be or not to be" dry question was settled today and the town remained dry. Population of Port Perry, a local option village, is 1,150 and 671 persons voted—400 for no bear and 271 for the beverage.

FLIES FOR ETHIOPIA

Former pilot in France's Lafayette Escadrille, Hal Du Berrier, above has organized a number of aviators to fly for Ethiopia, and two English, eight American and two French fliers are reported numbered in the group which has sailed from Paris for service. If war with Italy materializes, the adventurers there, fliers of fortune are sure to furnish interesting news.

OCCUPATION OF ETHIOPIA IS DUCE'S DEMAND

Tripartite Conference Now Believes War Inevitable

RELUCTANT TO TALK

Greeks Protest Against Italian Activity at Islands

Paris, Aug. 16—(AP)— Premier Mussolini's demand for armed occupation of Ethiopia to enforce any concessions given Italy aroused fear today among the tripartite conference representatives they would be unable to prevent war in East Africa.

Armed occupation was Mussolini's minimum demand as specified to the representatives of France, Great Britain and Italy in their conversations for settlement of the Italo-Ethiopian dispute.

Premier Pierre Laval of France was expected to seize on Mussolini's terms as a starting point for negotiations which he hoped would close the gap between the British and Italian viewpoint.

Emperor Haile Selassie, not represented at the parleys, remained an uncertain factor since the three powers' problem is to find a way of making Italian control of Ethiopia acceptable to him.

Their hopes lay in the possibility he would accept Mussolini's minimum demand, when he is convinced war is inevitable.

Refuse to Talk

Spokesmen of the three powers gathered in naval's office in the Quai D'orsay after the French Premier had brought Baron Pompeo Aloisi of Italy and Anthony Eden of Great Britain together at the British Embassy last night.

Aloisi was reluctant to talk to Eden separately but finally was persuaded to do so by Laval.

Laval in his talk with Eden and Aloisi, learned of their apparently irreconcilable positions when while he must evolve a compromise if war is to be averted.

Aloisi gave the impression Mussolini intended to establish Italian political influence in Ethiopia by force if necessary.

Tecla Haverita, Ethiopian Minister to Paris, while accepting the possibilities of "the co-operation of other governments for Ethiopia's economic development" again rejected any idea of a mandate and reiterated Ethiopia's intentions of maintaining complete liberty.

Greeks Protest

Athens, Aug. 16 (AP)—The Greek press demanded today the government protest to Mussolini against the Italian military activities in the Dodecanese Islands, Italian possession in the Aegean.

The press stated not only are the Italians making the islands a naval, troop and depot bases for their Ethiopian expedition but Dodecanese islands as refugee camps where they are attempting to conscript inhabitants and send them elsewhere. Greek homes and shops.

The Dodecanese are also concomplaining of heavy taxes and the alleged use of political prisoners in forced labor to build fortifications.

"It is the Greek government's duty to show an interest in the Dodecanesians whom the Italians treat with unbearable arbitrariness," said the pro-government newspaper, Kathimerini.

The independent Estia urged Italo-Greek official conversations, warning the "Dodecanesians' sufferings will poison the relations of the two countries."

Diplomatic circles doubted Greece would act in favor of the Dodecanesians.

Movements Speeded up

Addis Ababa, Aug. 16 (AP)— Movements of Ethiopian troops and munitions toward the frontier were speeded up today as the first reports from the Paris conversations failed to revive hope war between Ethiopia and Italy might be averted.

Dejjazmach Abarrah, son of Ras Kassa, governor of Gondar, left with reinforcements for the northern war zone numbering 25,000 strong. Emperor Haile Selassie held further war councils with chieftains after a reception to the army press correspondents in the great hall of the palace.

Footmen in knee breeches, white stockings, red waistcoats and green jackets served food to the guests on gold platters.

An altercation between an Italian consulate secretary and an Ethiopian policeman yesterday was regarded as a reflection of the growing ill feeling between the frontier tribes and the Italians.

Returning Scientist

J.C.J. S. Plaskett, O.B.E., head of the observatory at Victoria, B. C., as he returned from Britain this week in the Alsatia. Dr. Plaskett attended the International Astronomical Union Congress at Paris, and delivered the Halley lecture at Oxford this year.

NEWS BRIEFS AND ODDITIES

Salt Lake City, Aug. 16 (CP)— Three years ago Jackie Stone was born in a taxicab speeding his mother, Mrs. Jeppe Stone, to a hospital.

Now, it became known today, Virginia Marie Jackson, a baby skinny, has arrived in the same unconventional circumstances.

"I hope," was Mrs. Jackson's comment, "that it never happens again."

New York, Aug. 16 (CP)— Not all places to take a shower, Robert Brinkman, 35, of Woodstock, N.Y., just had his pick of the tracks of the ninth Avenue elevated last night.

Brinkman comfortably settled his head on one rail and his feet on the other and dozed off.

An hysterical scream by a pretty woman broke the spell and soon policemen were on the job. James Finley, ticket agent, scrambled up the tracks to flag down a train.

"I just wanted a place to lie down," Brinkman explained sleepily in the West 30th Street police station where he was booked on a disorderly conduct charge. "I've been up for a few hours."

Portland, Ore., Aug. 16 (CP)— A thief stole George Imbodem's entire fishing tackle kit but apparently didn't care to have a" case of mistaken identity on his hands.

Imbodem's fishing license was returned in the mail today.

Chicago, Aug. 16 (CP)—Edward Switzki was brought to court on complaint of two relief workers who charged he kept them in his home more than two hours for a license. Switzki explained his two year old son needed a special diet including spaghetti.

Switzki told Judge Frank Padden, "It's a terrible situation. Judge, I didn't know conciliation. I think I have a right to help my son see something better than a spaghetti eater."

Hamilton, Ont., Aug. 16 (CP)— "The battle's over and the victory's won," said Jim Weeden, commandant of the anti-starling forces, as he reckoned the scars of his trusty gun. The starlings have left for more salubrious abode. 2,000 of the birds were bagged and cremated in a starling cremator.

Hespeler, Ont., Aug. 16 (CP)— A pair of golden-headed eagles were seen at Beverley, near here, recently. The birds were more than two feet in height with a wing spread of approximately four feet.

A golden crest surrounded the head and was the means of identification. The eagles' natural haunts are in Mexico.

Port Arthur, Aug. 16 (CP)— Opening of the Port Arthur White River link of the Trans-Canadian Highway on a paved basis next year, Hon. Peter Heenan believes. The Provincial Minister of Lands and Forests said plans are being made for early completion of a bridge across the Nipigon River that will span the highway between here and Schreiber.

Seattle, Wash., Aug. 16 (CP)— When it started Vern Arnett, 14, twitched his upper lip and wrinkled his nose. But it's an ordinary sneeze but when it actually happened a newborn in his neck was dislocated.

DECISION OF WAR UP TO PARLIAMENT SAYS MR. KING

Deals Specifically With Ethiopian Situation in London Talk

NO PROMISES

Sound Policies Not Promises Only Way to Relieve Depression

London, Ont., Aug. 16 (CP)— African war clouds hovered over the Canadian election campaign today, Premier the Rt. Hon. Mackenzie King declared he would not take action as threatening a world war likely to involve the British empire, Rt. Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, Liberal leader, said here last night Canada should have a newly-elected Parliament and a Government representing the will of the people to decide the vital question of peace or war should it arise within the next few months.

At the same time he declared a Liberal Government would not participate in any European war without calling Parliament together and putting the decision up to Parliament.

Renewing his protest at the lateness of the general election, Mr. King said Canada would have no Parliament between now and October 14. Yet the Government was in no office, clothed with extraordinary powers but discredited in the eyes of the people. If a question of participation in war arose it should be decided by a new Parliament and a new Government, he asserted.

Creating Situation

Millions of people in the British Empire were racially akin to the Ethiopians who were threatened with attack by a great world power, Mr. King continued. This fact, coupled with anxious fears Europe might bring the question of peace or war up for decision in the near future, impelled him to the belief of his Government for two months after the dissolution of Parliament, Premier R. B. Bennett was creating a dangerous situation.

The world was witnessing an extraordinary situation, Mr. King declared. Italy, which had driven Africa had been told in a few months it would be attacked. Its people slaughtered and its lands seized by another country. Were it not for the sanction the League would come sooner but it was considered by many that only when the weather was good so that more people would be killed.

Sounds Make-Believe

Premier Bennett's reform program, the Canadian Economic Reconstruction put forward by Hon. H. H. Stevens were described as make-believe by Mr. King. He

GARETH JONES BELIEVED DEAD

British Journalist Captured By Bandits Months Ago

London, Aug. 16 (AP)—A Reuters dispatch from Peiping reported today Gareth Jones, British journalist and former secretary to David Lloyd George, captured by bandits near Kalgan, Chahar Province, inner Mongolia, a fortnight ago, has been killed by them.

The agency reported in a later dispatch Jones' body was found in the scene of his capture.

David Lloyd George was "struck with horror" when told of the murder of Jones in China.

"I have always been afraid of these days he might take one risk too many as he allowed no danger to turn him from his path when there was anything he wanted to find out," he said.

Lloyd George personally appealed to the Foreign Office to start diplomatic representations for Jones' release shortly after his capture.

Jones, son of the former Jones educationist of Bury, Wales, his mother and two sisters were advised of his death today.

The Evening News quoted Lloyd George: "Many powers are interested in Mongolia and Jones was very keen on finding out things that have no doubt been in his possession unless which would have been of great interest to one or another of these powers."

President Voices Grief of Republic

Hyde Park, N.Y., Aug. 16 (AP) —President Roosevelt, upon learning of the death of Will Rogers and Wiley Post, said they were "outstanding Americans and will be greatly missed."

Mr. Roosevelt was informed of the death of the two distinguished men and Rogers by the Associated Press shortly after his arrival here today from the White House for a brief visit home.

He made the statement:

"I was shocked to hear of the tragedy which has taken Will Rogers and Wiley Post from us. Will was an old friend of mine, a humorist and philosopher beloved by all. I had the pleasure of greeting Mr. Post on his return from his round-the-world flight. He leaves behind a splendid contribution to the science of aviation. Both were outstanding Americans and will be greatly missed".

ILL-FATED FLIER WORLD-FAMOUS

Post's First Investment in Aeronautics Was 25 Dollars

Oklahoma City, Aug. 16—(AP)— Wiley Post, famed flier of Maysville, Okla., Wiley Post rose to become one of the world's greatest fliers—but not satisfied with that—at one time around the globe but pushing on to new achievements in the stratosphere.

Post had early ambitions to become an airplane pilot and these were not stopped by an accident in a machine shop several years ago which cost him the sight of one eye.

With Surrel Thbe and Dorsey Askew as his instructors, he learned to fly and joined them as a parachute-jumper in their "flying circus."

After three years of "barnstorming" he quit and went to become the personal pilot of F. C. Hall, wealthy independent oil operator who later sponsored Post on his first flight around the world.

Gaddy as Partner

The stocky flier had Harold Gatty for a navigator. Between 1 June and July, 1931, on his first record-breaking flight around the globe, Post was 8 days, 15 hours and 51 minutes, less than 10 days.

In 1933 Post went alone from Floyd Bennett field, New York, bent on breaking that record without the help of navigator. Less than nine days later, in just 186 hours and 49 1-2 minutes he had gone around the earth, and landed again at New York.

Post was born at Grand Salion, Texas. The aviation "bug" first bit him in 1913 when he got a job as mechanic helper in the Oklahoma oil fields.

His original interest in aviation was $25, when he accepted from the late Wiley Hyde, a parachuting pilot to give him "the works" of an ancient "jenny".

Parachute Jumper

It was five years later before Post made a flight, but he got together a "flying bug" that taken effect. This was in 1918 and for his first flight he bought a parachute jumper, at $25 a leap.

He saved enough to learn flying but in 1926 he tired of piloting borrowed machines and went back to the oil fields to get together a stake for a ship of his own. The second day he was back on the job he was thrown off when struck by a steel splinter chipped off a drill bit.

Post's flying first attracted national attention in August, 1930, when he won the national air derby from Los Angeles to Chicago.

From that time on he was almost constantly in the limelight of aviation, following soon with his record-the-world flight with Gatty, then his solo record-breaker, and recently his altitude flight in the super-speed in the stratosphere.

A Stratosphere Flight

Post used his faithful "Winnie Mae" plane that carried him to the heights, in his four unsuccessful attempts to span the continent in stratosphere.

His reason for this, he said, was "pure scientific" and was his only reluctance that he saw her head for the settlement country after his last attempt.

The ship, a high-wing monoplane, was named for Winnie Mae Fain, the daughter of Hall, Post's early financial backer.

On these high altitude flights he used a landing gear fastened in such a manner that it could be detached in the event the plane turned on its "belly", on a small wooden skid.

KINGSTON BROKER GUILTY OF FRAUD

To Be Sentenced on Conversion of Stocks to Own Use

KINGSTON, Ont., Aug. 16—(CP) —Bruce G. M. Jemmett of the defunct firm of Jemmett McCarthy and Company, stock brokers, today was found guilty by Magistrate Ambrose Shea of converting stocks property of Raymond P. Jemmett of Kingston, to his own use. Sentence was deferred until Saturday.

Jemmett earlier in the week was found guilty of making false statements to the Ontario Securities Commission and will also be sentenced on that charge tomorrow.

Charles McCarthy, acquitted on a charge of making a false statement, was also charged with converting stock to his own use and pleaded not guilty. He will be tried Thursday next.

Jemmett admitted he had pledged stocks belonging to Johnston in a local branch of the Bank of Toronto in order to cover a short term loan.

He told the court it was a practice of stock brokers to secure loans in the manner he had carried out this loan.

A strong plea for leniency was made by D. G. Cunningham, counsel for accused who said Jemmett had not benefitted as result of using stocks to secure the loan.

HON. SAM. GOBEIL NEW POST MASTER

Recently Appointed to Reorganized Bennett Cabinet

Ottawa, Aug. 16 (CP)—Hon. Sam Gobeil, Minister without Portfolio and, until dissolution yesterday, member of the House of Commons for Compton, Que., was appointed Postmaster General today. Announcement came from the Prime Minister.

Mr. Gobeil was sworn in on Wednesday as a Minister without Portfolio.

He succeeds Hon. Arthur Sauve, who was elevated to the Senate.

Tragedy of Post, Rogers Prostrates Entire World

Intimate Stories of World-Famous Aviator And Humorist Reveal Personal Charm And Appeal of Men Who Lost Lives in Crash

Ponca City, Okla., Aug. 16—(AP) —Mrs. Wiley Post was prostrated with grief when advised today of her husband's death in Alaska, Mrs. Post at first planned to make the northern trip with her famous husband but returned here for an operation.

Skowhegan, Me., Aug. 16—(AP)— Mary Rogers, 19, only daughter of Will Rogers, famous comedian killed in a plane crash in Alaska today, was in rehearsal with the Lakewood Summer Theatre Players when word of her father's death was brought here.

Mrs. Rogers Prostrated

Mrs. Rogers, widow of the man whose humor had placed him high in American life, also was here. She arrived Tuesday afternoon from California with Miss Theda Blake, her sister.

Rogers' son, James, had planned to come here next Monday.

Mrs. Rogers, always shunning publicity only yesterday declined to pose for news pictures with her daughter.

Word of Rogers' death cast a pall of gloom over the summer colony here where Rogers had visited a year ago to see his daughter's stage performances.

Mary Rogers Saved Show

New York, Aug. 16—(AP)— How Will Rogers, killed with Wiley Post in an airplane crash, once flew across the continent to save the show in which his close friend, Fred Stone was scheduled to star, was recalled today by Fred Stone.

Stone, as enthusiastic about flying as Rogers, was injured in a plane crash at Groton, Conn., in the summer of 1928.

Rogers cancelled motion picture and personal appearance contracts and flew to New York from California to take Stone's place in a musical show "Three Cheers" being rehearsed for a fall Broadway opening. The show was a big success.

Paul Rearmed at Edmonton

Edmonton, Aug. 16 (CP)—Thousands of Western Canada's aviation enthusiasts remember Wiley Post and his globe-circling plane the "Winnie Mae". Twice his white, world-record monoplane flashed across western skies here.

On July 30, 1931, Post and his Australian navigator, Harold Gatty, on the round-the-world flight that took them from New York and back in a little more than eight days, flew into Edmonton from the north. A wild ovation greeted the pair when their plane when they landed at the Edmonton Airport, they stepped to the cheers of thousands of Westerners.

At dawn, July 1, from the mile-long pave runway on Portage Ave., with hundreds lining the street, they took off. That night the "Winnie Mae" after covering a flight of 2,100 miles, landed at Roosevelt Field, New York.

Paul's "Great Sleep"

Post remembered Edmonton as the city where he had a "great sleep"—the best of his world-circling flight—while the Winnie Mae was refueled for the final dash to New York.

"It was a magnificent sleep," he told

PLANE TOPPLED OVER

Engine Was Forced Back Through Body of The Airplane

Seattle, Wash., Aug. 16—(AP)— The Seattle headquarters of the Alaskan Telegraph System operated by United States Army Signal Corps was advised today that Will Rogers, famed humorist, and Wiley Post, famed aviator, were killed when their plane crashed 15 miles south of Point Barrow, northernmost tip of Alaska.

Capt. Frank E. Stoner of the Signal Corps informed the Associated Press that Sgt. Stanley H. Morgan, operator at Barrow had removed the bodies of the pair, who were on aerial vacation in Alaska. The bodies were brought to Barrow and cared for by Dr. Henry W. Greist, medical missionary, at the Barrow hospital.

How Crash Occurred

Washington, Aug. 16—(AP)—The plane in which Will Rogers and Wiley Post crashed fell while only 50 feet in the air after taking off from a lagoon near Point Barrow, Alaska, it was reported here today.

The following message was received from the Seattle office of the Signal Corps: relayed from Sergeant Stanley H. Morgan at Point Barrow:

"Navy runner reported plane crashed 15 miles south of Barrow.

"Lt. Crenshaw, Standard Oil, proceeded to scene found plane completely wrecked, partially submerged in water.

"Recovered body of Rogers, then recovered body of Post from water.

"Brought bodies to Barrow immediately on arrival. Have no personal effects which I am holding.

"Advise relatives and instruct whether fully as to procedure.

"Wiley Post's wife informed. If miles south here claim Post and Rogers. Bodies asked way to Barrow.

"Tricky cft eaptn's notebook right bank while only 50 feet over water,

"Motor cut of control, crashed, tearing right wing off and toppling over and right on back through body of plane.

"Both apparently killed instantly. Bodies not mutilated.

"Post's wrist watch broken stopped 8:18 P.M.

Henry W. Greist operates the Presbyterian Hospital at Point Barrow and has been asked way to Barrow.

WEINER ROAST FOR TINY TOTS

Older swimmers using Victoria Park clipped in their nickles and dimes this week to provide the unfortunate smaller ones with the ingredients of a weiner roast and outdoor party held on the park shore east of the city on Wednesday evening. About fifty little tots were present at the twilight party, which was superintended by the lifeguard.

BELLEVILLE BAND PLAYS AT PICTON

Seated in the shadow of the remembrance cairn in Memorial Park at Picton, members of the Belleville Municipal Band rendered a musical treat to residents of Picton and surrounding district at an open air concert on Monday evening. Marches, waltzes and other oldtime musical favourites were generously applauded by the large crowd present. Following the concert the local band, was entertained at supper by Picton Band, with Sid Lockyer, bandmaster, acting as chairman. The official welcome to the visitors was given by Mayor Jones. Director Bunnell was in charge of Bandmaster Lieut. Johnson.

MRS. R. ANDREWS CATCHES REAL ONE

The shoe is on the other foot. For some time Robert Andrews, local postman has threatened to leave his wife at home while he vacationed because he believed she was the "Jonah" to the fish. But after Wednesday night at Lake Moira, Mr. Andrews now has to take a back seat because, after being hooked and landed a nice pound "lunge". It is understood, very verbally and caustic, that Mrs. Andrews became very excited after getting the strike and entirely forgot the instructions of the fish but Robert was not having anything to do with the fish himself. Mrs. Andrews was to work on the fish and brought it to the boat where Mr. Andrews hauled it in. The fish hopped off the hook and nearly jumped out of the boat but Robert was on hand to save a real good meal.

RAPIDS QUEEN TO STOP AT DOCK

Loaded with excursionists from Hamilton and intermediate points who are enjoying the cooling week end trip on the water, the large passenger boat Rapids Queen, from Hamilton, is expected to make port late this afternoon on her way to the east. ### RAWDON REEVE TO ATTEND CONVENTION

Deputy-Reeve Phillip Carr, Rawdon, who has long been known as one of the most active of Hastings County councillors in the matter of county education and schools was in Peterborough this week where he represented the County of Hastings, before a special committee appointed by the Ontario Government to investigate school costs and methods.

MOSQUITOES SCARCE DUE TO DRY WEATHER

One thing we have to be thankful for," pointed out a philosopher of the north who was in the city today on a business trip. "The weather may be dry but this season owing to the early reason there are fewer flies and mosquitoes in northern part of the county. Last year at this time North Hastings farmers were forced to use fly screens on their face and thin blankets on their horses to do their everyday chores."

FORECASTER PREDICTS LONG, COLD WINTER

Mid-August predictions are being made by elder and weather wise residents of the city that the winter this year will be an early one, with plenty of cold weather ahead.

They base their predictions on the fact that many of the swallows have already left for southern climes, by the unusually luxuriant growth of marsh grass in district swamps and low meadows and the scarcity of ducks commencing to flock in the marshes of the Bay of Quinte during the past week or so in preparation for their annual trek.

Just a coolish thought while a brassy sun continues to break summer records.

TRAGEDY OF POST AND WILL ROGERS SHOCKS WORLD

interviewers, "but I'll be glad to get back home."

Aviation skeptics got a shock two years later when the one-eyed flier announced a solo circle-the-world flight. Leaving New York, July 15, 1933, seven days later the "Winnie Mae" roared into the Edmonton Airport, was re-fueled and soon took to the air again. That night, Post was back at his starting point—Floyd Bennett Field.

Post's Oddyssy of Air

New York, Aug. 16 (AP)—Here are the aerial exploits of Wiley Post, who with Will Rogers, film humorist, died in an airplane crash in Alaska.

With Harold Gatty, Post flew around the world in eight days, 15 hours and 15 minutes, in 1931.

In 1933 he made a solo round the world flight, in seven days, 18 hours and 49½ minutes.

Recently Wiley Post announced he would concentrate on the practical side of aviation. He made two sensational high altitude trips over his home town of Maysville, Okla., wearing a "supercharged suit" of his own design.

Post made four unsuccessful attempts to make a transcontinental flight from coast to coast sphere. Each time he was forced down in Texas or Oklahoma. He failed to get New York, the last failure June 3 this year.

He used but one ship in all of his achievements—the "Winnie Mae."

Secretary Hull Mourns

Washington, Aug. 16—The United States capital today mourned Rogers was loved as few others of his time, grieved to hear of his death.

"Post was a gallant flier," exclaimed Vice President Jack Garner on learning that his fellow Texan friend and Wiley Post had crashed.

"Will Rogers' almighty good men have been lost to the world.

"I can't talk about it. Rogers was the best friend I had."

Speaker Pat Byrns, incredulous at first, later said: "It is a terrific blow. Immediate words to express sorrow fail."

Patrick J. Hurley, Secretary of War in the Hoover administration, friend of Rogers since they were boys together in Oklahoma called him "one of the greatest characters I have ever known. He was one of nature's noblemen.

"I knew Wiley well, also. He was a brilliant and intrepid aviator.

"Oklahoma has lost its two greatest sons," said Representative Rogers of that state. He recalled the humorist's endorsement had helped put him in Congress.

FIFTY - TON MILL AT GILMOUR MINE

About Twenty-Five Thousand Dollars Have Been Spent in This Property

(Northern Miner)

Past time is being made at the Gilmour Gold property in Hastings county, Southeastern Ontario, toward completing the installation of a 50-ton mill. The Northern Miner found on the occasion of a recent visit. Principals expect that it will be ready to turn over before the end of the year. The machinery had been all delivered, foundations were in, and the building was completed, at the time of the visit. Mill installation was recommended by R. J. Farquharson, mining engineer for the company, with the idea of utilizing vein material on the surface dumps accumulated in the development over 20 years ago. He sampled the stockpiles and estimates 2,200 tons of 34 oz. per ton ore in one and 3,000 tons of 38 oz. ore in another dump. Some sampling was also carried out by him on the first level of the mine, and he reports that indications are being fulfilled with old sampling records.

An Ontario Department of Mines report in 1931 credited a gold production of $25,000 to this property up to 1914. As extraction was by straight amalgamation in those days, Mr. Farquharson states that only half the gold was recovered so these old tailings will be interested in the new mill. It is planned to recover the gold by amalgamating concentrates from a Wilfley table and two Plato tables. If sufficient gold is being lost, the addition of cyanide equipment is planned. The crusher and a Sweetland Two Sand ball mill will each have a capacity of 100 tons per day. A Dorr classifier will be in close circuit with the ball mill.

Under the management settlement that nearly $25,000 has been spent on the property and that everything is paid for. Certainly there is a good deal to show for it. Under Wm. Hitchens a shaft was sunk and were actively employed. A 100 horsepower boiler has been set up and another is reported on the way. The Magnetic Iron Works has supplied a new 7 x 13 double cylinder single hoist good for over 500-ft. depth. A 500-ft. air compressor has been installed. First mining consists of a large stope on the first level. The company owns a five-ton truck which is helping considerably time and money in fixing up the last three miles of the road into the property.

Three levels have been established by the old operators at 85, 170 and 250-ft. depths. Not much in the way of drifting was done on the first level and the other two levels were under water when the Northern Miner visited the property. The No. 1 vein has been stoped for a length of 150 ft. on the first level. The old records show the St. Cloud vein with good values and good widths on the deeper levels; it is not very strong at the first level. A mine average width of 3 ft. is reported in three feet, stated Mr. Farquharson who says values should average around 4 oz. per ton, he thought.

Several veins have been located in the greenstone schists, striking northeast with the schistosity and others occurring in the fractures. The latter condition is favorable for ore bodies but a lot of exploration is evident in the area. Gold values are also reported in the vicinity. The veins dip 45 degrees to the south part.

Complete purchase out of the mine should soon be done and then can be thoroughly performed.

Gilmour Gold Mines Limited has been formed to acquire the assets of Gilmour Gold Syndicate and the operating development of the property. Each unit of the capitalization will be exchangeable for 300 shares of common stock of the new company, which has an authorized capital of 3,000,000 shares, $1 par value, and shares will be issued in due form before the end of the current year. Shares will not be issuable to syndicate unit-holders, according to Mr. Howard Sellers, in charge of a pooling arrangement is anticipated.

POLICE BLOTTER

Local police were asked to keep a sharp lookout for a 1928 Chevrolet coupe, painted silver, which was last night. The vehicle bears Ontario license plates number 1924-VZ-47.

Gordon M. Crowe, Toronto, reported to the police department yesterday afternoon that Mr. Crowe had removed the timepiece from his left wrist while in the act of washing his hands in the washroom of a local hotel. When he had completed his task he replaced the watch upon the place the watch on his wrist, but some ten minutes later when he missed it and returned for it the "ticker" was gone.

Taylor investigated a motor accident on Bridge street, when an automobile driven by Jay Faulkner, 24 Catherine Street East, collided with another automobile, also driven in the opposite direction by Herbert Hall, 20 Bridge Street East. The left front fenders of both cars were damaged when the left rear fender of the Armstrong car was also crumpled to some extent.

Measurements were taken by P. C. Taylor.

Seven transients were given a night's lodging at the police cells last night, but unfortunately did not procure any too much rest, it was reported this morning, as inebriates, who paid fines in today's police court, caused many raised disturbances in the building, thereby disturbing the rest of others desirous of some sleep.

Pedestrian, Unwilling to Jump, Spies on Autoists for Sake Victim

New York, Aug. 16—Catching self who does not consider that motorists who neglect to observe traffic rules is too serious an avocation to be given up just because unsympathetic people have called him names, Henry Lipkin, 19 years old, of 80 West 178th Street, the Bronx, has decided to "get even." The red-haired youth murmured yesterday, "cats never hurt mice." He is careful to keep out of the way of the motorists, however.

Henry, an accountancy student at City College, has become incredibly unwilling to get out of the way of automobiles that fail to slow down at crosswalks. He considered for two weeks what he might do to stop this, and last Friday he acted. Since then he has spent about an hour and a half each day at some busy crosswalk near his home and has supplied the police with notes on about thirty automobiles that stopped by red traffic lights or made improper turns. In the same time he has been called "traffic commissioner," "rat" and "skunk" but he feels that this is all in the line of duty.

Besides, there is at least one person who does not consider that Henry is wasting his time or doing an unkind act. She is Maxine Philips, a dark-haired, smiling girl of Henry's age, who sits in a wheel chair in the sun outside her home at 1,947 Macombs Road, the Bronx. Maxine was injured in an automobile accident several years ago, and it will still be some weeks before she will be able to walk again.

"I certainly do think he's doing a good thing," she said. "I've seen a great many people nearly injured by hurrying autos; something ought to be done about it."

Henry denies that it was anyone he met who led him to take up the campaign about lax motorists, but he admits that watching Maxine about in her wheel chair is one of his chief interests. The others are swimming and his course at City College, where he is a junior.

At police headquarters it was said that Lipkin would receive every aid in obtaining summonses against the drivers he accused of traffic violations, but that the charges and their prosecution lay with him since no police officers witnessed the alleged violations.

Southeastern Ontario Gold Interest Growing Steadily

All Active Properties Are Visited Underground—Consolidated Smelters Pioneers Revival—Reasonable Prospecting Chances Exist—Possibilities For Stockbuilder With High Gold Price—Operating Facilities Excellent

(Northern Miner)

Down among the farms of South-eastern Ontario there has come about in the past year a strong revival of gold mining interest. It is activated largely on account of the high price for gold at $35 per ounce. This part of Old Ontario gave the province its first gold production but for the past 20 years little or no important work has been carried out. The area, however, is abundant with gold bearing occurrences, most of which have undergone some shallow investigation, and sizable quantities of gold have been recovered in the past, principally from the Cordova mine. Last week The Northern Miner visited the various operations at work and showing, comparable with many seen in the northern districts, were viewed. With the increased gold price, modern mining and milling equipment, and the advantage of economic location near transportation and power, ore-bodies may now be developed in the projects now working.

Consolidated Smelters is embarking on underground campaigns at both the Cordova and Rich Rock properties, 40 miles apart. The big base metal company, which has long been looking for gold mines in the east, deserves much credit for its enterprise in pioneering the revival of Southern Ontario gold. The Gilmour Gold Syndicate is installing a 50-ton mill and is actively underground operations. The Craig Gold Mines has sunk and finished shaft sinking for two more levels on one of the strongest quartz veins seen on the property. The Dolero Mines has temporarily curtailed operations after rehabbing the surface plant and putting the power plant into shape. The Moira Gold Syndicate intends to start shaft sinking operations soon. The Delcrest Mines may have diamond drilling carried out at a later date, as may several individuals working through the big area, which is 20 miles long, on many gold exposures.

Geology Favorable

The whole favorable area lies east of the town of Peterborough and embraces Percy, Hastings, Lennox, Addington and Frontenac counties. Rich Precambian and Paleozoic rocks are found and many geologists are conscious of the two great age divisions are to be seen. The older rocks generally have been more highly metamorphosed but many respects are similar to the Precambian rocks of Northern Ontario and Quebec. The Hastings series of rocks are the most favorable equivalent to the Temiskaming series, familiar markers of favorable rocks. Lenses of white, massive quartz veins carrying gold and arsenopyrite mineralization, familiarly mis-picked have been found. Other favorable features of gold occurrencing has been typical of the whole area. Big early operations a big amount of work has since used to be produced along with the gold, especially at the Craig property. The best detailed geological report on Southeastern Ontario was published in 1913 for the Ontario Department of Mines by W. G. Miller and C. W. Knight. Included in the report is a topography by W. R. Rogers. The report is numbered 23, part 1.

Gold content has never been particularly high, but the grade of ore in the present activity has to do with sizable bodies which may reveal a high or medium grade ore zone. Narrower high grade bodies are also described in the reports.

Since the first discovery of gold on the Craig property sporadic intermittent waves of prospecting has been given the area until the Great War years. Since then practically no new prospecting has been carried out. Many of the old workings chances still exist and there should be many more discoveries, evidence to support the view. On the other hand, the miners' rush with the capable prospectors accordingly went over the area years ago and many of the best looking prospects were found and some work done on them. It is safe to say, however, that reasonable prospecting chances exist, and moreover the fact that it only takes about half an inch to make ore today compared with the days when only the richest ore could be mined.

Good Facilities

The back of the electric power situation has been broken as far as the important known prospects are concerned. The Cordova and Delcro mines both have Hydro power installed while Rich Rock and The Key have the power line at developments. Gilmour and Craig mines both use steam power from coal. Good road transportation exists practically all the way to these properties. The town of Madoc, which is best known as the centre of the talc industry, is the largest town at about the centre of the activity. Labor is plentiful and therefore cheap as farming in the district has passed through some rather lean years.

In conversation with old-timers of this early gold area in Northern Miner gathers the impression that the chances have been seriously enough regarded by mining interests. Because no work has been produced for twenty years from the many known occurrences, it has just been taken for granted that little chance for profitable operation exists. The feeling has grown on itself through the years and now it is especially hard to interest capital. Actually, they feel, that under modern operating conditions and a high gold price, not only have known gold veins a chance of making, but good prospecting ground exists for new discoveries. It is the same kind of loyalty and optimism that has in the past been responsible for the development of the mines and camps after early failures through out the Indian Peninsula.

Summary of Present Work

At Cordova mine, an incline shaft to 500-ft. depth has been repaired and straightened and shaft sinking operations for new levels will go right ahead. Nearly $350,000 in gold has been produced from it and sloping has been carried to 500-ft. depth. Two new drifting of 40 and 50 ft. It is the tonnage possibilities at present which intrigues Consolidated Smelters. The veins are big and continuous, particularly at Rich Rock the same company hopes to develop big tonnages of low to medium grade ore. The shaft there is being put in shape after lying idle. Drifting and exploration and development will proceed beyond shaft work on new levels, already established by former operations.

At Gilmour Gold the installation of a 50-ton mill has been spasmodic. The tonnage of ore developed even material that are stated to average in the neighborhood of $10 per ton by the company engineers. The first level has been unwatered and some sampling is carried out to check old sampling records. At the Craig mine the shaft and levels already established by former operations.

The first level has been unwatered and some sampling is carried out to check old sampling records. At the Craig mine the shaft and levels already established by former operations have just been established at 125 and 325-ft. Crosscutting, drifting and sloping at 50-ft. depth is being carried out. At the Craig level, a 58 per ton average grade is indicated. The vein is particularly strong at this point and the estimate of average width would be seven feet. The vein is 1,800 ft. known at surface.

At the Moira property the Ore Chimney, has recently spent a lot of money putting in power plant buildings and headframes for shaft, for underground mining and milling. While they have plenty of power, water, the workings have been carried out to a depth of 100 ft. and ore-shoot with an average grade of about 3 oz. per ton has been described in former reports. A 50-ton mill has been recommended for installation. The Delcrest Mines, Limited, south of the Delcro mine, has a good surface showing and surface sampling and officials state a shaft for underground work will be projected under an option to Col. A. J. Ackerman. The Delcro mine has carried underground work and vertical depth of 360 ft. but the gold reasons are not high enough and more drilling may be carried on later. Lean gold ores, with plenty of water underground and discovery of sulphides, such as Cobalt, closed Delcro down.

Altogether a more intensive investigation of the mineralization of the area would appear in order at this favorable time for gold mining.

Hen is Kidnapper Of Cat's Family

Mrs. Frank Leonard of Tarney, Mo., has a Rhode Island Red hen that thinks she is a mother to a family of family she takes care of, reports The Associated Press. A batch of eggs in a nearby nest on the farm was taken away from her recently, as she was sitting, and replaced by four tiny kittens whose mother happened to be nursing another litter on other part of the barn. The kittens snuggle contentedly under the ceaseless care of the motherly hen, and only once a day is the outraged cat allowed to feed them, all duty in feeding her family, from feathered to furred, the hen stens troop back and take up their position under their feathered care copy.

CROOKS REDUCE TAXES OF TOWN

Round-up Awaits Them After Immunity During Fair

In spite of the fact that Honiton, Somersetville, England, has a church to every 200 of its 2,000 inhabitants, a curfew, thirteenth-century, is observed on the Sabbath, its annual three days' holiday is usually followed by full jails there and in the neighboring towns, whose police feared for their safety. This year, however, on the occasion have aided the local constabulary in the fining.

These jails are not occupied by the good Honitonians themselves but by visitors attracted to the place by an ancient custom which is only manifest during fair days.

For three days, shell-game and three-card men, three-card monte operators, and wheels of fortune operate in defiance of law and order, but only those who linger after curfew has rung in the evening—most of them do linger for a last coup, or have their way obstructed by reasonable victims—are no longer immune. They are promptly taken in charge and subsequent fines and confiscations have measurably reduced local taxation.

"Evidently, the inventor of the ancient custom," writes the columnist of the Morning Post, "was a great psychologist," and he describes what he saw in Honiton.

"When the Town Crier opened the fair he was a fine figure mounted by a glove, and proclaimed:

'Oyez! Oyez! The glove is up and the fair has begun. No man shall be arrested until the glove is taken down. God save the King!'

MEXICO REVIVES ANCIENT GLORIES

25,000 Foreigners and Citizens Witness Pageant Depicting Ceremonies

Together with the general revival of native art and music in Mexico during the past few years has come a realization in that republic of the value of pageantry as an educator, especially along historical lines, judging from accounts of recent happenings in and around Mexico City. This found in the press of the capital.

This year for the first time, 415 years after the event, the descendants of the Aztecs, conquered by Hernando Cortez and his little army of less, joined with those carrying in their veins the blood of the conquistadores in an impressive celebration of the famous "noche triste" under the very tree in Popotea where the defeated Spanish invader is reported to have wept, following his expulsion from the Aztec metropolis, most of the survivors on June 30, 1520. And a few weeks later, for the entertainment of the thousands of delegates to the Lions' International convention, as well as for that of the Mexican people, itself, the glory and splendor of ancient Tenochtitlan was revived when 25,000 persons who filled the huge square "Now!" in Teotihuacan in which a re-enactment of the colorful religious and military Aztec-Toltec ceremonies known as "Creation of the Fifth Sun," and the "Gladiators' Sacrifice."

"From before 9 o'clock in the morning until nearly 12 a steady stream of automobiles and buses rolled into the archaeological zone of San Juan Teotihuacan," writes the report of El Universal of Mexico, F.

The immense temple plaza, in the centre of which stands the altar and the sacrificial stone which is the gorgeous temple of Quetzalcoatl, blazed with a rich symphony of color as the more than 2,000 actors in the event took their places for the beginning of the ceremonies, a mid-summer sun, at its zenith, bathed the tiers of spectators, who ranged about three sides of the ciudadela plaza in an array nearly as colorful as that of the participants. Several of the spectators were overcome with the heat and were carried from the field in Red Cross ambulances.

"It has been a long time since Mexico has seen such an impressive and rhythmically executed mass presentation. Although there was a slight lack of historical accuracy about the whole affair—perhaps for the benefit of the sound movie cameras which recorded the ceremonies—it conveyed some sense of reality to give a feeling of a genuine ritual exercise, one of the most sacred and one of the most intense and vital of all aboriginal ceremonies.

"Added significance was given the performance through its staging on July 30, the same day which the Aztecs chose every fifty-two years for celebration of the 'Years of the New Fire.' The last of the Montezuma's, the last of the centuries, according to the Indian chronicles, in the year 1507, and since then he has the completed ceremony been performed. The Aztecs believed that the day also meant the 'renewal of life in the world' and the universal might come to an end on one such day. Already, they believed, four suns had been destroyed and had been recreated.

"The musical accompaniment of the spectacle was specially arranged to utilize the indigenous instruments of the ancient Mexicans including the clay flutes, the tall drums, and the rattles. Actual melodies and rhythms of many of the native ceremonies were incorporated into the music, which was prepared by Francisco Domingues.

"As the grand finale marched

HEIR CHOPS WOOD TO GET ESTATE

500,000 Pengoes ($150,000) To Be Spent For Beech-wood

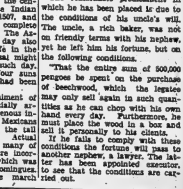
Budapest, Aug. 16—A Hungarian, who has just inherited a fortune of 500,000 pengoes (a pengo is worth about 30 cents) may soon be selling little faggots of wood on the streets.

This remarkable predicament in which he has been placed is due to the conditions of his uncle's will. The uncle, a rich baker, was not on friendly terms with his family, yet he left him his fortune, but on the following conditions.

"That the entire sum of 500,000 pengoes be spent on the purchase of beechwood, which the legatee may only sell again in such quantities as he can chop with his own hand every day. Furthermore, he must place the wood in a box and sell it personally to his clients.



If he fails to comply with these conditions the fortune will pass to some nephew, a lawyer. The latter has been appointed executor to see that the conditions are carried out.

MOIRA GOLD MINE MAY SINK SHAFT

Ore Shoot Indicated at Surface—Optioned to C. H. Ackerman

(Northern Miner)

A new shaft for underground development may be sunk on the Moira Gold Syndicate property in Hastings county, Southeastern Ontario, the Northern Miner was informed by R. Bicknell, secretary-treasurer, after a recent visit to the showing. It has been optioned to C. H. Ackerman of Toronto, who is chairman of the syndicate. An orebhoot is indicated in surface sampling for a length of 150 ft. An average grade of $6.50 per ton is given for 3.7ft. width. A shaft has been sunk in old operations to a depth of 66 ft. and good average grade indications are reported. The property was comprehensively reported on by D. E. Craigs in 1934.

The vein is strong and has been traced for great length. Pyrite gold and arsenopyrite mineralization occurs as shoots in the quartz. The vein quartz is sometimes low in gold if it does not carry at surface. The property is located south of the Dolero mine on the same break. The shoot can be lengthened to 171 ft. with 3.7 numbered 71 part 1 and grade or seven-foot width and $4.76 grade. An analysis of a 6-ft. sample from 18 channels gave .555 oz. per ton. Consolidated Smelters did some diamond drilling on the occurrence.

The syndicate is capitalized at 5,000 units with 1,500 issued for the property. Its head office is at 85 King St. East, Toronto.

JUDGE USES VERSE TO AID HIS APPEAL

Merely as an escape from the atmosphere of the court room a Los Angeles attorney—who later became a judge—wrote poetry. Often he composed a sonnet on a friend in the hour of pain.

The writer was Gavin W. Craig, Los Angeles lawyer.

His own hour of trouble has come. And by a strange turn, these poems are the tools with which he is attempting to mend the broken pieces of his career, says the Associated Press, which broke the story several months ago. Craig, then a justice of the Appellate Court, was convicted of conspiracy to obstruct justice in the Halo petroleum case and removed from office.

Steadfastly maintaining his innocence, Craig said he would carry his case to the higher courts, if necessary.

Part of the money for his campaign, he hopes, will come from the sale of his poems, collected under the title "The Hills of Hope".

Scores of lawyers' associates on the bench and bar recently received copies of a letter, written by a group of Craig's friends. They said they had "offered financial help, but he wouldn't take it."

The letter asked his friends to buy the book.

These poems show an inner light and talent in the man that only a few of his intimates ever suspected," his friends said in the letter.

It was argued by Craig's Appeals Court judges and numerous prominent attorneys of Los Angeles.

ELECTION DATE SET

Public men and electors at last have the target at which to direct their energies and their shafts. The date of the federal election has been set for Monday, October fourteenth.

Nearly nine weeks away as the polling is, it will not interfere in any way with the harvest and the fall fair season, which will soon be upon us.

The campaign will not start in earnest for a little while, though the parties are organizing and doing that preliminary work which paves the way for the last few weeks of intensive effort, not only in individual work but on the hustings.

WATSON THE POET

We are often so close to the great men that we do not recognize them as we might. This may be said of the present response to the work of Sir William Watson, poet of England who died this week. Though he was only 25 years old when he first published "The Prince's Quest", which was fifty five years ago, he did not win recognition until the year 1890 with "Wordsworth's Grave."

To most men and women Watson is probably but a name, or perhaps he may be known for a satirical poem "The Woman with the Parrot's Tongue" which stirred political England a quarter of a century ago, yet Watson wrote poetry of power and distinction, which matched him with some of the greater of lyrists. Though never laureate, he was known as the "perfect poet laureate" as he was stirred to action by public events. He was poet laureate in 1893, the year after Lord Tennyson, the laureate, died, and was knighted in 1917.

Devoting his time to the muses, he followed the life of honorable poverty as the price he was willing to pay. He came to care less and less for public acclaim so that three years ago his wife was able to say, "The only copies of his last volume which have been sold I bought myself."

Probably some of the cause of this was due to his unromantic, and clear cold style. His political poetry alone reflected passion and deep emotion.

Watson enjoyed the lifelong friendship of David Lloyd George who as "Farmer George" sent him every Christmas a hamper of good things. Latterly the family was so reduced in circumstances that it required the public appeal of Barrie, Shaw, Kipling, Galsworthy and other great figures in contemporary literature to bring the Watsons in several thousand pounds

What place he will ultimately hold in poetry is not clear. Time's threshing floor will tell that story. He did win one strong admirer, an American, Albert H. Whitin, who endowed him and his family last year.

The three lyrics he was passed over when the laureateship was vacant, in 1930, in 1913 and on the death of Bridges, when Masefield was called to the office.

Not his poetry was of high character, marked by sincerity, dignity of expression, and severe simplicity, fastidious taste and mastery of words. He considered his life's development though his audience was small.

WANDERING DAYS

These are wandering days—when the trek by motor or otherwise is one of the wonders of life. No finer weather, no finer country in which to wander and to wonder can be found than the Canadian lakes and Canadian hills and lakes and countrysides.

The quest of interest is the quest of health. Imperceptibly the healing influences of nature permeate the gently relaxing mind and though the body may be weary the mind wakes alert for another day's wanderings.

There are yet three weeks for these delightful expeditions all through Canada. Those who cannot go far may stay very near home and yet find that they have an empire of interest of which, though they were to live a millenium they would only touch the fringes.

And still the wonder and the interest grow.

EVENTIDE.

When sunset touched the hills with gold
As the close of a summer day,
A little boy, just four years old,
Came in all tired with play;
The bigger boys he said had gone
A boating on the lake,
And quiet he must be at home
Lest the new baby wake.

He prattled on of this and that
In his sweet stammering way,
Then suddenly grown tired of chat
Upon the couch he lay;
The tired eye-lids closed in sleep,
The restless form grew still,
And in a slumber, sweet and deep,
Subdued were thought and will.

And as the twilight shadows fell
And filled the quiet room,
He lay, a cubby, chubby form—
A bud for future bloom.
O precious little baby heart
Through all the coming years
May every sun but bring a calm
A solace for life's tears.

REPORTS FROM FISHERMEN state that the fish are biting briskly in the lakes of Hastings. Moira Lake is especially in the limelight with good catches of bass and an occasional lunge. One of the lucky ones this week was "Andy" Nash, District Manager for the Agnew Surpass Shoe Store Company, "Andy" is an enthusiastic fisherman and every summer pitches his tent (cottage to you) on the beautiful shore of Lake Moira and matches wits with the fish every spare moment. This week he landed his big catch when a lusty lunge happened along after the bait. A slight pole and line, the sporting fisherman's equipment, was used skillfully and after a thrilling battle the fish was landed, a beauty. It was duly weighed but "Andy" refused to divulge the actual weight for fear he might be accused of boasting or worse.

NOEL COWARD, NOTED ACTOR AUTHOR, of England, has had marvellous success as a playwright and as an actor has few superiors on the legitimate stage. Now he has made his film debut in a dramatic headliner "Bitter Scoundrel", which will be seen in Belleville shortly. Coward must be good for his plays and his acting are very popular on Broadway, where an Englishman has to work hard to command and even slight attention. Coward brought to the stage and screen "Cavalcade", "Private Lives" and "Design for Living". If he never accomplished anything else of note enduring fame would be his on those three plays alone—but his most amazing energy and ability held him to rest on his laurels and he changes from author to actor with amazing versatility and evident pleasure. When he gets tired of acting he will no doubt write another play of astonishing excellence.

NOW THAT THE ELECTION has been fixed things will return to normal, and much of this political heat will subside, for no human system can stand an election campaign stretched out over three or more months. With two months to go we can forget the issues and alleged issues for a month and take the last three weeks in our stride, fresh and rarin' to go. Speeches made now will be as stale as last year's birds when the last pump house Christmas editions long before the bell rings for the final round on October 14.

HAVE YOU HEARD THESE

In a Scottish village a farm laborer named Bill Brown lost his wife. Whilst on her deathbed she implored him never to marry again after she was gone. Futhermore, should he do so, she would scratch through the ground and come back to punish him. The threat apparently had due effect on Bill; for some months the widower refused many tempting offers. After a time the villagers got to whispering about Bill being seen with a certain lass. Met one day by a relative of his first wife, he was asked if there way any truth in the rumors about the village, to which he replied in the affirmative.

"Are ye no' afraid o' poor Mary's threat?" queried the relative.

"Nae fear o' that. I took good care to hae her berrit face doon, so the mair she scratches, the farther she'll gang doon."

REVOLT IN THE DESERT

by

T. E. LAWRENCE

Pisani, the French commandant, fortified by a Military Cross and in urgent pursuit of a new post, took bodily possession of the four Schneider mountain guns which Cromme had sent down to us after Bremond left; and spent agonised hours with Young, trying to put the scheduled ammunition, and muni-tonnage, with his men and his own private kitchen, on to one-half the requisite camels. The camps burned with eagerness and preparation, and all pounded.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

BUXTON AND THE I.C.O.

It was now the end of July, and by the end of August the Deraa expedition must be ready. In the meantime Buxton's Camel Corps had to be guided through their programme. Nuri Shaalan warned, the armoured cars taught the road to Azrak, and landing grounds found for aeroplanes. Tiny month. Nuri Shaalan, the subtlest, was left behind. Buxton was called to meet Feisal at Jefer about the arrests of August. Buxton's force seemed the second need, after Feisal, under seal, of their coming. To ensure them lasting pole-casualties, they must strike Mudowwara with absolute surprise. I would guide them myself to Rumm by the first outlying palm-trees below the rock Khaaba, and into the inner shrine of the springs, with its worship-compelling water. Meanwhile the landscape refused to be accessory, but took the shape and the chattering humans became dust at its feet.

Rumm the men had their first experience of watering in equality with Arabs and their first trouble some. However, they were wonderfully mild and Buxton was an old Sudan official, accustomed to men and understanding nomadic ways: very and kind, George Vyvian, sympathetic. Hazza was helpful in accomplishing the Arabs, and Stirling and Marshall, who accompanied the column, were familiars of the Beni Aiiyeh. Thanks to their diplomacy, and to the prestige of the British rank and file, nothing unfortunate happened.

Later I rode for Akaba, through the high-walled Ilm, alone now for its distant, unquestioning guards who followed after me like shadows, harmonious and submerged in their natural sand and bush and hill; and a home-sickness came on me, a longing virility my colonial life among these Arabs while I expected their highest ideals and their love of freedom one more tool to help England win.

In Akaba the rest of my bodyguard were assembled prepared for delivery for I had promised the Hasran men that they should pass this great feast in their freed villages, and its date was near. So for the last time we mustered on the sandy beach by the sea's edge, the sun on its brilliant waves glinting in rivalry with my flashing and dancing men. They were dusty. Seldom had the Zaagi brought a party of men so fine together, and as we rode into the brown hills for Guweira he was in splendid spirits. The fashion, centre and wings, with poets and singers between. During the long ride was musical. Il hurt him a word not have a banner like Ilm.

I was on my Ghazala, the old mare matured now to her prime and magnificently fit. Her foal had lately died and Abdulla, who rode her men, had skinned the carcass, and carried the dry pelt behind his saddle, filled with straw piece. We started well, thanks to the Zaagi's chanting but after an hour the pace began to tell on them, and began to pace uneasily, pricking up her feet like a sword-dancer.

I tried to urge her but Abdulla came behind, and striking me with his cloak about him and sprang from his saddle, caught it in hand. He lighted with a splash of gravel in front of Ghazala, who had come to a standstill, panting and trembling, the ground before her he spread his cloak, and fell down on knees and down to it. She stopped crying, snuffled its dryness thrice with her nose, again lifted her head and, with a whimper, strode forward. Abdulla rose in the day that happened; but afterwards she seemed to forget.

Auda, Nasir, Siddons had an aeroplane waiting. Nuri Shaalan (the little Arab) and me at once to Jefer, where they met us in the

Russia Tackles Waif Army; Aspects of Problem Studied

Vagrant Hordes Five Years Ago Are Estimated to Exceed $5,000,000

One of the problems which faced the first Soviet Government (of Russia) in 1918 was that of the homeless children on the street and country roads. To the usual number of youthful vagabonds had been added war orphans—were to be added the orphans of the executed intelligentsia.

There are two ways of fighting a social evil as a fire, the old way is to confine it and prevent its spread. Until 1924 Soviet Russia tried that way with her homeless children, but their number augmented until in 1920 there were more than 8,000,000. Then she tried the new way; to annihilate the evil at its source. She could not bring to life the dead parents, but she put in jail 300,000 fathers who had deserted their children. She also did other things and is still doing them. What is being done is written about in The Times of London by its Riga correspondent:

New Reformatory Decree

"The latest of a series of measures to curb the depredations of young people is the 'Reformatory Decree,' which was published at the beginning of June and which is to be put into effect in all the territories of the Union. Until the Spring of this year no child under the age of 14 could be legally punished in any way. Indeed, official textbooks in Russia describe punishment for adults as well as for children as 'a notion alien to Soviet criminal justice,' the terms 'correction' and 'measures of social treatment' being preferred; but Sections 13 and 26 of the criminal code forbade Soviet authorities to apply these mild-sounding measures to any one under the age of 18 years.

"Children found wandering might only be returned to their parents or placed in a State home for waifs and strays. Instincts of good citizenship were to be fostered in them through their daily intercourse with the Oktyabrysta, Pioneery, and Komsomol, the three organizations which embrace the whole Soviet youth. The Oktyabrysta is composed of some 3,000,000 children between the ages of 7 and 11 years; the Pioneery (or 'Pioneers') of 8,000,000 between 10 and 16 years; and Komsomol of 5,000,000 between 14 and 23 years. The first stage of organized progression is into the ranks of the Communist party.

"The new reformatory system is to embrace the children who have slipped through the net of these organizations and become—according to official Soviet terminology—juvenile hooligans.' How plentiful is the crop of young hooligans may be judged from the preparations prescribed to cope with the evil. According to the latest available official figures there are about 252,000 children in the existing Soviet homes for waifs and strays, which have recently taken in about 45,000 children a year. But great numbers remain on the streets living by their wits and committing crimes ranging from petty theft to burglary and murder.

Drastic Steps Decided On

"In February the Soviet Government declared war on 'juvenile hooligans', and determined to round up all the youthful criminal elements of Soviet towns and the countryside. The first decree in this connection, published on March 30 forbade any citizen henceforth to carry or possess a sheath-knife, dagger, or firearm without a special license, except in places where these weapons were part of the national costume.

"A week later the government decreed that all children over 12 years of age should in future be considered as adults in the eyes of the law and be dealt with according to the ordinary criminal code, which had hitherto been applicable only to persons over 16 years old. The June decree is a much longer one explaining in some detail the new reformatory system and other measures designed to 'liquidate' the waif and stray evil.

"Two permanent central waif and stray departments have been opened in Moscow at the Commissariat of Education and the other under the management of the Narkomyudel, the Political Police (formerly the G. P. U.). There are in the two departments five chief types of new homes and reformatories.

(1) Establishments for collecting and distributing homeless children; (2) 'normal' homes for housing and training destitute orphans; (3) homes for children requiring long medical treatment; (4) homes for child invalids; (5) isolated labor colonies managed by Narkomyudel.

"Each of these institutions has its special 'labor regime' worked out to suit the age and type of its inmates. The establishments for collecting and distributing homeless children must keep their charges for a time, and everything one month in order to determine the type of home or reformatory to which they are to be allotted. The regime in each establishment includes special rewards for good behavior and punishments for the decree reinstates this word which has been discarded as 'alien to Soviet ideas of justice' or misdeeds.

"When the children reach the age of 14 years they are to be sent to special schools, farmed out or apprenticed to factories. State farms or collective farms, the kind on which are obliged to accept and house them and provide them with labor.

Task a Formidable One

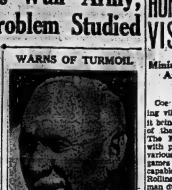
"The magnitude of the task which this new reform involves may be judged by the fact that already 300 selected Communists have been appointed, each to take charge of a home or labor colony as its director; or:

500 young Communists have been made deputy managers and 800 other persons have been chosen to act as teachers and instructors in the new establishments.



"The Soviet Press points out that the army of waifs and strays is recruited largely from children deserted by their parents in consequence of the latter's lose ideas about marriage ties and the responsibility of parents for the children they bring into the world. Thus some more than 200,000 cases were brought to court in 1934 against fathers who deserted their families, and although the courts ordered the deserters to pay alimony not half of the fathers could be found.

"Izvestia describes such children in the streets and houses of Moscow as mostly boys and girls between the ages of 12 and 15, who, despite their tender years, have great experience in theft, robbery, drunkenness and other crime and behave in court like wild things captured from another world.

"The decree for 'liquidating' the waif and stray evils prescribes also measures to prevent its recurrence, particularly by bringing home to parents and guardians a deeper sense of duty and by the infliction of severe penalties on persons who fail in their obligations toward their children.

"Curious though it may seem, Pravda describes the continued existence of 'criminal waifs and strays' and the negligence of parents 'as ward children in Russia as 'our heritage from capitalism'.

'Goddesses' in Real Life

London, Aug. 16—Centuries after their time the goddesses of ancient Greece and Rome have been photographed. A well-known woman photographer, having studied famous paintings and pieces of sculpture for details, posed various society women for her models. One of the most realistic of these studies in color is of Arethusa, goddess of fountains and ponds. Lady Bridgett Poulett took this part. She was photographed with weeds twisting upward from her body behind a transparent green curtain to get an underwater effect.

Minister of Health Honors Annual Field Day of Red Cross

Coe Hill, Aug. 16—The enterprising village was on fete Wednesday in honor of the annual field day in aid of the Red Cross Hospital here. The Fair Grounds was thronged with pleasure seekers to enjoy the various games of baseball. The games and races being under the capable supervision of Mr. Chas. Hollins who also acted as chairman during the speechmaking. The good friend of the Red Cross, Mr. Wm. Clinton was the busiest man on the grounds and it was due to his untiring efforts and the capable staff of assistants that the affair was a grand success.

The Hon. Dr. J. A. Faulkner, Minister of Health, was present, and delivered a splendid address. He dress on behalf of the Red Cross, and he was accorded a most cordial reception by the large crowd who had assembled for the occasion, and at its conclusion showed their appreciation with deafening applause. Dr. Faulkner visited the hospital and found that two cases of typhoid fever had been isolated, he immediately got in communication with Dr. Hastings of the health department in Toronto and gave orders for an analyst to be despatched to Coe Hill to make a thorough investigation into the causes and take action to put an epidemic of the awful disease to flight through the sources of contamination. Dr. Embury also spoke on behalf of the Red Cross and received a splendid reception. Dr. Embury paid a fine tribute to the Hon. Dr. Faulkner for the capable manner in which he is administering his Department of Health, and said Premier Hepburn had done one good thing when he selected Dr. Faulkner for this portfolio."

Prominent residents were noticed in the crowd.

60 KILLED AS FORCES CLASH

Athens, Aug. 16 (CP)—Sixty men were reported killed today in a fight between Albanian Government troops and rebels marching on Tirana, the nation's capital from the Fieri district.

The battle is said to have occurred from 40 to 50 miles south of the Capital with two heads of the Government forces, Djelal Aracitas and Colonel Gilardi, killed.

Doubt was cast upon the authenticity of the reports by the similarity of the name of Colonel Gilardi to that of Brigadier-General Leon Gagliardi, assassinated yesterday.

The home town of Chevtat Vertast, leader of one faction, is said to be heavily guarded by his followers.

DANCING AS CURE FOR SPIDER BITE

Baltimore Newspaper Man Says Heat Rids System of Black Widow's Poison

Joe Longton of Baltimore, who says he's an expert, has a cure for the bite of a black widow spider. It's dancing.

Longton, the only member of the "Spider Club of Mannasota Avenue" who wears long pants, says he has been investigating the black widow's habits for thirty years, reports the Associated Press.

The bite of the spider with the red horn-glass marking on the abdomen is more deadly than that of the cobra, Longton asserts.

"The best cure," he asserts, "is dancing. Yes, sir, just dancing. Heats you all up and gets the poison out of you."

"I got bitten back in 1924 and danced it off. Put a couple of cigarettes around my arm, burned out the bit place. But I had a close call at that."

Longton—he says he is also Baltimore correspondent of a New South Wales (Australia) newspaper and, nevertheless, proclaims about the spider's location.

Looking lovingly at the newest black widow in his collection—"a sweetheart," he calls her—Longton said:

"Mark my words, there'll be more of them every year, just like a pestilence. Yes, sir, they'll prove the country. And"—apparently forgetting his dancing cure—"there's nothing we can do about it."

Spends $125 to Get a Penny

C. C. Stoker, policeman, of High Point, N.C., has spent lots of money chasing a penny that he gave Mrs. Roy Powell, Peterbough; Mrs. his 3-year-old son the other day, reports the Associated Press. The baby swallowed the coin, and the hospital and medical bills so far have amounted to $125.

FOXBORO PRESBYTERIAN GUILD

The Ladies' Guild and W.M.S. of the Foxboro Presbyterian Church were entertained at the home of Mrs. Clarence Holmes, twenty-five members and friends were present. Mrs. George McClumpha opened the meeting with the call to worship; prayer by Mrs. L. English. Scripture reading by Mrs. Harold Longwell. All responded to the roll call by a verse from the Sidelights column or Current events. Plans were made for an open meeting and a dinner in aid of the budget. Minutes were read and approved and a hymn sung. Miss Nellie Bell conducted a Biblical contest. Mrs. W. Wood and Mrs. J. Johnston being the winners. Miss Beach Spencer, took charge of the buraau of questions and answers which was very instructive. Some plans were made for the bazaar. Meeting closed with a hymn, the Lord's prayer and the Benediction. The hostess served cake and ice cream and a hearty vote of thanks was tendered Mrs. Holmes and her aunts for their kind hospitality.

Proof... OF LONG !" MILEAGE!

"The thing you motorists want in a tire is long service. You want your tires to stand up to the hardest kinds of driving. So, before you buy a tire from me I'm going to give you proof that Goodyear tires have long life built right into them.

"Look at the 'footprint' of a two-year-old Goodyear tire. Plenty of non-skid rubber . . . lots of mileage in that tire yet.

"For the past few weeks I have been 'footprinting' plenty of Goodyear tires . . . owned by motorists right in your neighborhood.

"Come in and see them. You'll get proof of Goodyear's good service . . . and economical service.

"And, if you're a Goodyear owner drop in and let me 'footprint' your tires . . . it takes just two or three minutes to do it and it's an interesting operation."

FLORAL EXHIBITS WIN HIGH PRAISE AT ANNUAL SHOW

Magnificent Blooms And Colorings Seen at Armouries

PARKS BOARD PRIZES

Excellence of Exhibits Are Praised by Flower Lovers

At the annual exhibition of the Belleville Horticultural Society which opened on Thursday evening and will close Friday night (tonight) there is a magnificent display of the flowers and plants of the summer season, shown to best advantage, despite the intense heat and dry spell of the past two weeks. Here a union of sweetest colors pervades the entire armouries where the blue is being held. Here are tables filled with the blooms of magnificent development and exquisite coloring and colour combinations, and here is an excellence of arrangement which allows these things of beauty to their best advantage.

The Parks Board of Belleville gave unanimous aid this year as in poll-up prizes for five classes of three prizes each as well as a fine silver trophy for the highest number of points. Mrs. Charles J. Symons was the winner of the silver cup on points in this class.

A Japanese miniature garden, exhibited by Mrs. F. Waddell, was the outstanding feature of the show and was awarded the special ribbon of the Ontario Horticultural Society. This exhibit was not in competition.

Special mention was made of the following exhibits not in competition, the pedestal exhibited by A. R. Symons, the vegetable and flower display of S. R. Gooding of the Quinte Gardens, T. Givins and Sons Floral and fern display and Mrs. G. A. Bonisteel's gladioli display.

Rev. Harold Reid of the Belleville Nurseries was judge of the exhibits.

On Thursday evening many flower lovers attended the exhibition and this afternoon there was another large attendance. Exhibition continues this evening.

Officers of the Society are: Mrs. G. A. Bonisteel, president; Mrs. J. Watson, Secretary; D.M. Farrell, Chairman Show Committee.

OPEN MISSIONARY MEETING

A very pleasant afternoon was spent in the home of Mrs. Thos. Morgan, Minto, on Thursday, August 8th, when the members of St. Thomas W.A. Rawdon were hostesses to about 80 ladies in the form of an open missionary meeting. The meeting was held on the spacious lawn and the weather was ideal for a gathering of the kind.

The meeting opened with hymn 'The Lord Bless of Christ Contstraineth" and prayers by Canon W. G. Swayze, Rector.

Mrs. Sweet, president, welcomed the visitors with a few words of greeting and spoke of this year being our Silver Jubilee year having organized on June 30th 1910.

The program was as follows:

From Bethesda Ladies' Aid: A trio, Mrs. Francis, Mrs. Mullett and Mrs. Coulter "Speak a Word of Kindness."

Sunnis W.M.S., a reading by Mrs. R. Reid, "Count the Cost."

Rawdow W.A., a reading by Mrs. Swayze, "The Holy Scripture."

Salem, a reading by Miss H. Clements, "Quiet Hour."

Hymn, "Take My Life and Let It Be" was sung followed by a duet from Springbrook Ladies' Aid by Mrs. Bateman and Miss A. Mason, "Whispering Hope."

From Stirling W.A., a reading by Mrs. Vance a chapter from H. V Morton's "In the Steps of the Master."

From St. Andrew's, West Huntingdon, a reading by Mrs. W. Shier, "Courtship in Japan."

From West Huntingdon United W.M.S.E a solo by Mrs. W. Pitchett, "Building for Eternity."

Canon Swayze made a few remarks and this splendid meeting closed with hymn "Blest Be The Tie That Binds," and the Benediction.

The ladies of St. Thomas served a dainty lunch of sandwiches, cakes, tarts, and coffee and a social hour was enjoyed by all.

Everyone left for their homes feeling that a pleasant and profitable afternoon had been spent.

INTERESTING SHOWER AT CENTENARY

About one hundred friends and relatives gathered at the home of Mr. Allie Wright to honour their daughter, Miss Myrtle Wright, with a miscellaneous shower.

Following community singing an interesting programme was given, consisting of two guitar and mouth organ selections by Miss Mildred Cassidy, a piano solo by Miss Annabel Armstrong, duet by Miss Betty and Master Clarie Twiddy, and a humorous reading by Miss Cassidy from Indiana.

The future bride and the bridegroom, Mr. Kenneth Twiddy, were asked to take the seat of honour and the following address was read by Miss Annabel Adams:

Dear Myrtle and Kenneth,—

We, your friends, are gathered here this evening to wish you much happiness in your future married life.

You, Myrtle, have always been willing to help in the choir and all other church activities and we shall miss your cheery smile and hearty laughter as well as your most willing co-operation in all our undertakings.

We hope that in your new surroundings you will find as congenial and sincere friends as we hope you have found in this community. In your quest for happiness and prosperity may you ever remember that friends are a great blessing.

Kenneth, we feel that you are deserving of our esteem too, since you have chosen such a worthy lifepartner.

To show our respect and appreciation we ask you to accept these gifts and hope that they always remind you of your Centenary friends.

Signed by,

Mildred Cassidy
Wilmot Shortt
Annabel Adams.

As Myrtle is a valued member of the C.G.I.T. her fellow-workers presented her with a tray and cup and saucer for the following address was read by Miss Helen Hart:

Dear Myrtle,—

Having learned of the very important step in your life which you are soon taking we extend our very best wishes for your happiness in the future. Our sincere hope is that a rich richness will rest upon you and your life-partner in your new home.

We ask you to accept these gifts as a slight remembrance of our love and esteem and we hope that as time passes and as ties are broken they may serve to keep fresh and green the friendship of your friends in the C.G.I.T.

Signed on behalf of the C.G.I.T. members of Centenary by,

Alice Parks
Hazel Keene
Helen Hart.

After the gifts were opened Myrtle and Kenneth thanked their many friends in a very charming manner and invited them all to visit them in their new home.

Lunch was served and the gathering dispersed, wishing the bridal couple much happiness.

Tala Birell and Ralph Bellamy are featured players in the thrilling story of the death-dealing electric ray in the air, now at the Capitol.

HOW TO MAKE ICED TEA
Infuse six heaping teaspoons of Salada Black Tea in a pint of fresh boiling water. After six minutes strain liquid into two-quart container. While hot, add 1/4 cups of granulated sugar and the juice of 3 lemons. Do not stuff sugar in lemons. Fill container with cold water. Do not allow tea to cool before adding the cold water; otherwise liquid will become cloudy. Serve with chipped ice.

TORONTO MINES—Close
Toronto, Aug. 16 (CP)—The Toronto mining session witnessed a terrific market today in Base Engineration and Radium with the price climbing that the stock was being manipulated the Securities Commission's office yesterday announced that there was no necessity for an investigation and that an attempt was being made by shorts to break the market down. The price advanced from 85 to day with well over 100,000 shares of the stock changing hands. The rest of the board was steady.
Mining stock prices displayed no definite trend, narrow gains and losses appearing in all metal groups. copper and lead prices were higher but base metal stocks ignored the lists. Noranda being a reaction to 38 and Sherritt holding at 61, unchanged. Tech Hughes was up and in heavy volume during the morning and the price weakened a few cents but with lifting of selling pressure most of the loss was recovered.
Higher prices ruled for Brakeview, Consol. Little Long Lac and San Antonio while Sylvanite, McWatters, Prospector Airways and Reno dropped a few cents each.
Base metals were a feature of the Silvers, touching a new high for the year at 90 but only part of the gain was held. Other silvers were steady.

TORONTO STOCKS—Close
Toronto, Aug. 16 (CP)— Industrial share prices were shaken down lightly in the early trading today on the Toronto exchange but soon hardened profit-taking but the buying was better than the selling in the afternoon and prices firmed up accordingly. Most of the interlisted stocks were up at the close and there was also a good sprinkling of gains in the Golds, Paper and miscellaneous groups.
Trading slowed down in the industrial section and prices were shaded almost narrowly during the morning but the afternoon tone was firm. A dip in Dominion Seagrams and the leading oils was erased and other interlisted leaders including Nickel, Brazilian, C.P.R. and Ford A. were steady to strong this afternoon.
Exceptions to the display of strength were the Utilities where the power stocks and Consolidated Smelters, these all selling down substantially. In the afternoon International Petroleum was above 37 to show a small gain and Imperial Oil and British American were off ¼ to ¼ each.

NEW YORK CLOSE
New York, Aug. 16 (AP)— Moderate improvement was shown by the stock market today after mild selling had been absorbed.
Early rails, mines, utilities and scattered specialties led the recovery.
Gathers of fractions to around a point included Santa Fe, N.Y. Central, Southern Pacific, Baltimore and Ohio, Anaconda, Monsanto, Phelps Dodge, Western Union, Consolidated Gas Electric Power, Works, Fairbanks Morse, Budd Mfg., Thatcher Mfg., Auburn, Dupont, Case, Deere, Montgomery Ward, Sears Roebuck and Macy. The latitude was firm. Transfers approximated 1,600,000 shares.
Although imported bar silver at New York was unchanged at 63½ cents an ounce, Shanghai's seemed to feel better. The treasury's activity in the silver markets abroad was reflected in the announcement that the total acquired for the week ending August 9, were valued at $14,696,000 as against $3,180,503 in the previous week.

Board Room Gossip
As supplied to Biggar and Crawford by Financial Service.
The Federal elections will take place October 14th and with the period of uncertainty, both from a business and market viewpoint, is but another two months. Although Canadian stocks have recorded a moderate rise, it is felt that the advance would have been much more pronounced were it not for the uncertainty of the forthcoming elections.
One stock, the demand for which has not waned in the least, has been Distillers-Seagrams, this issue at the present time yesterday. New York continues the buyer and that quarter must have taken many thousands of shares in the past few months. The security is liked for its earnings of the past year as well as the bright prospects for the future. Dividends on the issue will probably be inaugurated before the end of the current year.
The rise in the market, particularly in the Utilities has not been fully reflected in the shares of Power Corporation. This issue has a large holder of this class of stock. The subscription rights have added several millions of dollars to the value of the company's portfolio. The book value for Power Corporation common is understood to be substantially above current market quotations.
The publication of the first annual report of the International Petroleum has again been delayed and instead of coming out next month will not be issued probably before until the end of October or early November. Directors are likely meeting awaited with considerable interest both by shareholders and the Street.

More Intensive Phase of Nazi Drive Forecast
By A. D. STEFFERUD
Associated Press Foreign Staff
Berlin, Aug. 16 (AP)—A more intensive phase of the Nazi anti-Semitism drive was foreseen today after Julius Streicher, Nazi leader, denunciation of Jewry as the nation's racial enemy number one.
Streicher whipped thousands of hearers to fervor in addresses before two mass meetings last night. He called Jews all of the ills heaped by Bolshevism and the Catholic baptism of Nazi views. All of these he piled, very linked with an anti-German plot.
Jews, warned by their leaders, kept to their homes, while storm troopers patrolled the streets until daylight.
Some only open resentment was shown by Americans, astounded by a direct reference to a member of the family of United States Ambassador William E. Dodd.
Streicher was vigorously outspoken in his advocacy of "steps against the racial disgrace of mixed marriages" between Jews and Aryans.
"We are proceeding into a great racial struggle," he said, "which will again save all humanity from the Jewish race."

Produce Prices on Montreal Market

Montreal, Aug. 16—There was little improvement in demand reported on local wholesale dairy produce markets yesterday. Prices for the most part showed little change.
In butter there was a slightly more unsettled trend to the markets with the price of No. 1 about 30 1-2 cents per pound.
A few broken lots were sold at this level but the total turnover was negligible.
Jobbers prices for small lots to the retail trade were unchanged at 31 to 31 1-2 cents per pound for No. 1 solids and 30 to 30 1-2 cents per pound for No. 2 prints with No. 3 trade 1-2 cent per pound lower.
The egg market held about steady at yesterday's levels.
Grade A large were quoted at 27 cents; medium at 25 cents; grade B at 21 cents and grade C at 19 cents per dozen for case eggs but quality, while shorts held were at 25 to 26 cents for grade A large, 24 cents for grade A medium; 20 cents for grade B and 18 1-2 cents for grade C.
Small lots to the retail trade were steady at the following: Grade A large 28 cents; medium 26 cents; grade B 26 cents; grade C 23 cents per dozen against the same sizes. Loose eggs sell at one cent per dozen under cartons.
The cheese market was quiet yesterday with Ontario current receipts nominally at 16 1-4 to 16 1-2 cents per pound, although the falling off in enquiries from the United Kingdom was discouraging, while an improved enquiry for heavy turkeys is reported. However, no sales are being little change from day to day.
The potato market held steady at yesterday's decline. Quebec, 80 pound bags, being quoted at 90 cents, with a few asking up to 95 cents. Supplies are fairly large and demand is light.

HOGS
Toronto, Aug. 16 (CP)—Ontario hog markets remained largely unchanged in prices today. Hull, where a gain of 25 cents was recorded yesterday, had no advance today. Peterboro also lost their 5c gain of yesterday. Other market points remained steady. Prices received today:
Barrie $9.50; Brantford $9.70; Chatham $9.00; Hull $9.25; Kitchener $8.50; Peterborough $.25; Stratford $9.50.

Rough-and-Ready Cardinals Succumb to Giants' Rally Dropping Full Game in Loop

Defeated 5 to 4, Frisch Fanning With Tying Run on Second

TIGERS HOLD ON

Cards To Have Advantage in Later Part of Race to Wire

By HUGH S. FULLERTON, Jr.

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Whether or not Bill Terry's Giants make up for last season's debacle by walking off with the National League pennant, they apparently have no intention of letting the rough-and-ready Cardinals take it away while they're playing each other.

Just as they rallied in St. Louis a couple of weeks ago and rolled the Cards in one "crucial" series, they've done the same thing at modest St. Louis threat in the current meeting. And by winning a 5-4 decision yesterday they accomplished one part of their aim—preventing St. Louis from taking the lead by direct attack.

The triumph, in a bitterly fought game that ended with another magnificent, three-base drive by Frisch fanned with his bat on his shoulder and then tying run on second base in the ninth, gave the Giants a four-game lead over their challengers, and the series has only two more games, to run.

The Cards dropped back into the odd position of holding second place on the percentages while actually trailing the Cubs by a half game. Chicago moved up again by plastering its 11-2 batting on Brooklyn's Dodgers to take some of the sting out of Wednesday's double loss.

The chief Cardinal hopes now are that the Cubs will knock off the Giants and then be knocked off in turn or that both of those teams will prove weak on the road. Of the 48 remaining St. Louis games, 30 are on the home job while the Giants' and Cubs' program is about evenly divided between at home and away.

Went Down Trying

The Cards at least went down trying yesterday. They gave away a three-run lead, when Willis Walker contributed a costly error in his own baseball then three times pulled up within a run of tying the score. Chicago had just a beanee after slamming old Tom Zachary for eight runs in the first two frames.

The status of the American League race remained unchanged as did the lower echelons in both circuits. The Tigers and Yankees, both hard pressed, managed to win handily and remained six games apart. Detroit turned over the Senators 6-3 as Charley Gehringer, leading second sacker, left the bench to drive in the game-winning run in a three-run burst in the eighth. The Yanks held to one hit in six frames by Willis Hudlin, blasted him from the hill with a five-hit, three-run rally in the second best inning in Indians 3-1.

The third place Red Sox turned back the while hose of Chicago 3-1 as homers by Cronin, Werber and Cooke decided the mound duel between Lefty Grove and Lea Thiele while the latter was knocked off the cellar-dwelling Browns again, 5-3.

Bob Brown, who hadn't won a game all season, turned in a two-hit shutout for the Braves and received the benefit of Wally Berger's 26th homer as the Braves whitewashed the Reds 3-0. The Phillies cut loose with a 19-hit assault and trimmed the Pirates 9-1.

Night Baseball Not Favored by Detroit Owner

Detroit, Aug. 16.—(AP)—President Frank J. Navin of Detroit Tigers said today his opinion of night baseball "would be the beginning of the end for all major leagues."

Speaking specifically of the majors, Navin remarked that second Division clubs usually are colorless and listless and draw in any league—night or day.

"What night baseball is doing is baseball's rejuvenation," he said. "It changes baseball players from athletes to actors. It's nothing more than a spectacle. I certainly would be against it."

"Aside from that," he added, "night baseball fails to develop young players. The fielding is different. The pitching is far different and, all things considered, the young players are handicapped by the night style of game."

Navin said that in his opinion no night game had not benefitted the minors and it hasn't helped much at Cincinnati, the only major club to sponsor it.

Reinstated Olympian

Theodor Yorzyll (above) was reinstated by Hitler as chairman of the Olympic committee after his dismissal on grounds of non-Aryanism. Der Fuehrer ordered reinstatement to avoid hitch in Olympics at. Locals from taking the lead by direct attack.

YOUNG CANADAS DEADLOCK SERIES

Defeat Aajmaas 16-5 And Make Fifth Game Possible

With an avalanche of base hits, including seven for extra distance, the Young Canadas downed the Aajmas A.C. by the overwhelming score of 16 to 5 at Central Park last night. The game was the fourth in five for the Senior City Softball championship and resulted in the clubs now being deadlocked, each having won two games. The fifth and final game will be played tonight.

The Young Canadas drove Johnnie Bawden, the Aajmaas' ace moundsman, to the showers in the fourth frame, after nine runs had crossed the plate. Frank Farraro then took over the hurling duties and stopped the Canadas for a short space of time. Eddie Schriedter, who had won over the Aajmaas some 48 hours previous, again was triumphant as the Young Canada's hurler. Schrieder struck out six Aajmaa batters but walked four while Bawden whiffed three as Farraro struck out two. Schrieder was given excellent support by his teammates and pitched steady ball in victory.

Of the seven extra base hits registered by the Young Canadas Palmer's circuit blow was the only four base hit of the night. F. Murray and M. Lalefield each registered triples as Schrieder smashed out two pretty base hits on his own cause with Robinson, Latchford and Reid also hitting for two bases. Bawden and Gray hit the best for the losing inning. Tied two games each in the play-off series, the winner of tonight's game will be awarded the city championship.

SIMPSONS TAKE FIRST GAME 9-6

Defeat Ontario Intelligencer Nine in Mercantile Playoffs

In the first round play-offs of the local Mercantile League resulted in the Simpson's nine taking the first game from the Ontario Intelligencer aggregation by the score of 9 to 6 at their Yeomans Street grounds last evening. The second game in this three-game series will be played tonight.

Errors piled up on the hilltop for the Simpson nine and hurled consistantly in this victory, being the second excellent support by his teammates, while Harris pitched equally as well for the "Intelligencers" but not afforded the same support. Both teams are one of the best played in the league and saw many spectacular catches on the part of the fielders as the batsmen applied the willow with a vengeance at times.

Besides hurling good ball Bateman hit well for Simpsons as did Northcotham and O'Neil, Byers and Harris proved the best offensively for the "Intelligers", however. The low-scoring that was in evidence speaks for the high class of softball played at the College Field tonight. The line-ups:

Ontario Intelligencer—Philp, ss; Cooper, cf; Robinson, 1b; Brown, 2b; Oliphant, rf; Canning, 3b; Reid, lf; Kemp, c; Harris, p.

Simpson—Bateman, p; Rowbotham, c; O'Neil, rf; Clarke, 3b; Rowbotham, ss; White and Ketchison, 2b; Cooper, 2b; Reynolds, lf; Phillips, cf.

Score by innings:

Simpson.. 2 0 0 0 3 1 3 0 0—9 runs
Ont. Intell. 3 1 0 0 0 2 0 0 0— 6

Umpires—C. Smith, Fair and H. Smith.

HOSPITAL INMATES AT KINGSTON ESCAPE

Kingston, Ont., Aug. 16.—(CP)—Two heavily clad young men, inmates of Ontario Hospital here, escaped from that institution early today. They made their escape by stealing keys from one of the keepers. A small boat was later found floating near Kingston Penitentiary and it is thought the men made their getaway by water.

CRACK SOMERSET BOWLER IN ACTION AGAINST WORCESTER

Worcester found P. G. H. Fender their nemesis when they played Somerset in an English county cricket game recently. With some smart bowling he took seven Worcester wickets for 88 runs, and was mainly responsible for making the opposing eleven follow on. Fender is seen bowling from far end of the pitch to a field including three short legs, one of whom, Barling, is making a fine effort to take a catch clean-cut from Warne of Worcester. The teams met at the Oval.

CURRENT SPORT

DAY BY DAY

Tonight's Kingston at Belleville O.B.L. fixture is the final game to be played in the regular league schedule, although there are still two postponed games unplayed. As these two games bring together Peterboro and Kingston—the cellar town a lot depends upon the result of this evening's twilight fixture, as a loss for the Ponies would eliminate their chances of finishing ahead of the Sea Horses. If the Ponies come down in front tonight, however it is expected they will demand their pound of flesh and ask for their two postponed games with the Sixties in hopes of finishing on the top rung. There never was much love lost between Belleville and Kingston sporting organizations and naturally if the Stewart-Warner can upset the Ponies' apple cart, all the more fun for the locals. Another reason the Radios want to win tonight is to advance the league play-offs before the Belleville and Kingston Fairs open the week after next. If these two clubs finish second and third neither team would be able to play home games on the week of August 26th or 30th owing to their fall fairs. With the semi-final play-offs over, the final league play-offs could commence in Peterboro while the Fairs were in progress, there-by eliminating any clash between all fairs and the O.B.L. finals. That's why a lot of bearing is being put on tonight's local game.

With absolutely no reference or reflection towards any one person or any individual club, we would appreciate some enlightenment in regards to a question that once again becomes prevalent, under existing circumstances. The matter pertains to how it comes about that certain Belleville baseball clubs can come into this province and in one story verms our team in the O.B.A.A., while other Yankee Clubs are deprived of that privilege. For instance the C.N.E. was allowed to allow the locals Radios to play against the Detroit Bell Nine and a night game recently, yet Belleville Johnson's colored giants were granted permission to play against a Belleville team three years ago and other Ontario clubs at a more recent date, while we have been unthankingly denied the privilege of the Johnson's colored boys play against the House of David combinally. The colored boys played the bewhiskered bellsters in Ottawa recently and what is the difference between the two clubs that we cannot blame any person, concerned as both of these organizations are known to play baseball for what remuneration they receive. What we would like to know however, is why distinctions between clubs are made. Of course we know, that Chapple Johnson's colored boys are a fine baseball clubs aristocrat cards, but when they are known to play against professional clubs, and this should about tell the story, why permit the colored team to play O.B.A.A. and other amateur clubs and not permit the House of David. The manner the baseball manals lower their lofty ideals and permit these American baseball touring teams to play against our Ontario clubs, the amateur local players will be afforded the opportunity of better conditions, as they can learn much quicker and to a better advantage, while playing against more experienced clubs, even if they are professional.

Apparently the Belleville and Trenton softball moguls are in hot water. At least one would gather that when the patient body, the O.B.S.A., has suspended both of these organizations until they can establish a clean slate for themselves. As intimated in this column recently, the trouble all started over the trafficking of players from the Trenton league to the Belleville league and also right in our own back yard. Just what the exact trouble is over in Trenton we cannot say, but it is safe in saying, that Vern Mitchell, secretary of the O.A.S.A., has sufficient information at hand to make his suspensions stick, that is unless the two local organizations can iron out their own difficulties amicably and without prejudice. Ever since organized softball has been played in this city, there have been continued protests and arguments between clubs, none of which has helped to elevate the status of the game in the eyes of the fans. Some smart person once said—"The union there is strength" and how true!

One of the next feature sporting events of the year in Belleville will be the bigger and better Class "B" Belleville Fair. President Walter Aselstine informs us that entries are pouring into Secretary Dick Ketchenson's office daily. "Without fear of contradiction, we'll have the greatest fair this year in the history of the community, predicted President Aselstine last night. Secretary Ketchenson informs us that entries are coming in from all parts of Ontario and on the same day the S.E.A.C. is staging a mammoth aquatic meet off Victoria Park.

After some little controversy the final arrangements for the play-offs in the Bay of Quinte League were completed in Belleville last night, when Ron Church and B. A Fanning succeeded or pickerpd about for positions at the Fair Grounds last night. It was finally decided the play-offs would commence in Picton on Tuesday next with the second game being played in Belleville next Friday, at 7-11-9. George Baker of Gananoque, and Walter Grow of Picton were named as the umpires for the first two games. No mention of when or where the possible third game would be played was forthcoming from the league officials, but not feel quite so egotistic, now that Manager Fanning has a staff of battery men in Carl Casey, Ernie Sarlth and Phil Lofl.

The Young Canadas staged a complete upset in the Senior City softball play-offs last night, when they defeated the Aajmaas and administered upon them a terrific 16 to 5 drubbing. Canada's blasted Johnnie Bawden from the hillock while, Eddie Schriedter hung up his second victory, in as many nights against the Aajmaas, "The folks are as good as the people now and we'll take 'em tonight in the final tilt", stated Manager Fanning shortly after last night's game. Incidentally last night's game was the fourth in as many successive games in which Bawden has occupied the mound as the starting hurler for the Aajmaas. Each team has won two games in the finals now with tonight's game the deciding tilt. While all of this was going on Aajmaas of the Mercantile softball loop took the Ontario Intelligencer nine into camp in the first game of their league's semi-final play-downs. The score was 9 to 6 and Simpson's game as it was a fine exhibition of softball.

CLASSY HURLING BY JUNIE BARNES

Toronto Defeats Bears Due to Hurler's Six Hit Effort

(By the Associated Press)

Newark Bears are looking at the International League's play-off system in an entirely different light today. For two years the Bears have been opposing the system, known as the Shaughnessy plan, so called after Frank Shaughnessy, manager of Montreal Royals who followed the National Hockey League playoff system.

Last year and the year before the Bears won the regular pennant race by wide margins, then were summarily eliminated in the post-season intra-league series by teams which finished lower in the standings.

Now the Jerseyites have hopped to the other side of the fence. They have been no higher than fourth place for the greater part of the season and at present are languishing in sixth position with their hopes of getting into the play-offs resting on their ability to muscle into the first division.

The Bears are hopeful of getting up there and do a little bumping off of teams in the play-offs on their own account.

Although handed a neat 9-2 pasting by Toronto last night which broke their tie for fifth place with the Leafs, the Bears are not too far behind to make up lost ground. They are only two games behind the fourth place Baltimore Orioles.

Junie Barnes Smart

The Bears' failure to get past the Leafs last night can largely be attributed to the classic twirling of Junie Barnes who limited them to six hits in as many tallies. Syracuse crept in the eighth.

The Leafs got aplenty of support from a doubleheader with Baltimore but increased their lead to a full game when Syracuse dropped a decision to Rochester. Four-base circuit clouts enabled Montreal to win the first game in the ninth 5-4 but Frank Pearce's fine pitching whitewashed them 5-0 in the nightcap.

The Chiefs didn't have a chance against Kleinke's steady pitching and dropped out of the play-offs to the Red Wings 9-1.

Buffalo stacked up a ten run lead in the first two innings to coast home a 16-2 victory over Albany Senators.

KINGSTON WOMAN SUFFERS EXPOSURE

Regina, Aug. 16—(CP)—Mrs. Victoria Richardson, 70 of Kingston, Ont., was recovering in hospital here today from 17 hours exposure to heat and rain, that followed a walk in the country northeast of here.

Losing her direction she wandered for hours, finally reaching fields and over country roads until found by a search party headed by her son-in-law C. St. Pier.

"RED" RYAN TO SEEK HIS WIFE

May Go to Newfoundland to Make Some Enquiries

Toronto, Aug. 16—(CP)— Norman J. "Red" Ryan, recently liberated from a life term in prison because he became a "model" prisoner, said today he was making inquiries with a view to going to Newfoundland in search of his wife.

Ryan said he would attempt to find out whether she was alive or dead. He had not heard from her during his decade or so of incarceration in Kingston penitentiary. After his release he charged letters from her written 14 years ago had been withheld from him.

All attempts to locate his wife have failed so far, he said. Ryan refused to divulge his wife's name. He said he and others had been unsuccessful in their search for his wife's parents.

ALLEGED "COIN" MAN HELD

New York, Aug. 16.—(CP)— Described as police as "the super confidence man of the United States," suave Leonard Weisman was held by federal officials today on two charges of using the United States mails in defraud. Montreal was the base for operation by which he allegedly film-flammed two New Yorkers out of $100,000.

SINISTER SHADOW

by JOHN GOODWIN

"What about young Chalmers then? Is he going to be master here—him an' that girl?" she said hotly. Howe glanced at her.

"I don't know who's going to be master here," he said, "and I've no mucol on my hands just now, Deborah, to be interested in your future."

He left them together, and crossing the hall met Sonia coming down the stairs.

"A very interesting morning's work, Miss Dell," he said. "But I don't, think that if I was you I'd stay on in teh house by myself."

"Nothing on earth would induce me to stay here alone!" said Sonia.

"Thinner," she shouted. "Come!

"Unless it would do Mr. Chalmers any good?" said Howe, "Well, I don't think it will. I'll see you to the station. You know your way back to the King O'Bells; I won't be troubling you again till later."

He escorted Sonia to the great iron gates, where he took leave of her with an admiring salute, and returned to the house alone. He made a further search through Sanister Cootie's room. Teat done he took a look at the stables, and finally made a careful tour of the park, which took him a couple of hours. While he was out in the open an immense bull-mastiff came cantering up and investigated him. She seemed to recognise that the man in uniform had business there, and neither bristled nor showed him her fangs. She sniffed at Howe's trousers and showed him wherever he went looking curiously mournful and depressed. Howe, though fond of dogs, only frowned at her once.

"I wonder which o' your two masters you're going to miss most," he said to the huge brute, and took the more notice of her during the remainder of the walk. Howe's search was unfruitful until, coming along the south wall of the park, something black caught his eye, half hidden in the wet grass. He picked it up a piece of black cloth ragged at the edge and perforated as though it had caught on barbed wire.

While he examined it, the dog sat on her haunches, watching him with red eyes. Howe pocketed the fragment, made a further search, and half an hour later left the park. On his way he stopped to speak to a gardener who was tending a flower-bed by the gate.

"There used to be two of these dogs," he said. "Where's at the other?"

"Dannie," said the man. He leaned on his spade and eyed at Howe. "This is a bad business about the Survivor, eh?"

"Rotten bad," agreed Howe.

The gardener spat into the hole he had dug.

"Hope it ain't goin' to make any trouble for Miss Deborah," he said. "She's all right. He's a man, he is. We all like him."

"Do you?" said Howe, grimly. "Well, it's a mighty good thing to be popular."

"What do you think of him, sersean?" persisted the gardener.

"A policeman Jon, doesn't have any likes or dislikes. What he wants is cold facts," said Howe, "and a dead man's the coldest fact there is."

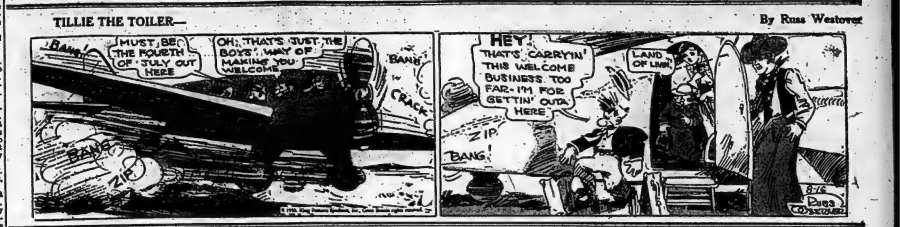
Sonia found the loneliness at the King O'Bells intolerable; the strain of waiting strung her nerves tense all the time her brain was busy with delightful greed and conjecture. At two o'clock Mary Stubbings came in with a luncheon tray.

"No use saying you won't have anything, Miss," said Mary, "you got to eat, an' you got to keep your spirits up. You're as pale as a ghost, you are, but you're worryin'. Don't—you're goin' to be all right."

She set the tray down and hesitated.

"I've been talking to my young sister, Jude. She'd like to have a word with you, if you don't mind."

Your sister?"



Mary nodded towards the window. A girl was walking through the yard, arm in arm with a young man.

"She's Mr. Chalmers' girl. I see her if I was you, Can she come in?"

"Of course Mary." Sonia felt a queer little thrill, whether of anxiety or relief she could not define. "If she has as much sense as

Sonia found the loneliness at the King O'Bells intolerable; the strain of waiting strung her nerves tense all the time her brain was busy with delightful greed and conjecture. At two o'clock Mary Stubbings came in with a luncheon tray.

"No use saying you won't have anything, Miss," said Mary, "you got to eat, an' you got to keep your spirits up. You're as pale as a ghost, you are, but you're worryin'. Don't—you're goin' to be all right."

She set the tray down and hesitated.

"I've been talking to my young sister, Jude. She'd like to have a word with you, if you don't mind."

"Your sister?"

Mary nodded towards the window. A girl was walking through the yard, arm in arm with a young man.

"She's Mr. Chalmers' girl. I see her if I was you. Can she come in?"

"Of course Mary." Sonia felt a queer little thrill, whether of anxiety or relief she could not define. "If she has as much sense as she'll do. Bring her along. I'd like to meet her."

A few moments later Jude Stubbings came in, alone. She was nearly eighteen, with a determined, freckled little face, a rather wide mouth, and hair of a deeper red than Mary's. Evidently a girl with a will of her own. She had not Mary's looks, but she was attractive in a distinctly attractive. She closed the door quietly, made a careful inspection of Sonia, and fumbled a little nervously.

"Tis down Jude," said Sonia, "and join me at lunch, won't you?"

The girl shook her head.

"Don't waiting for me outside. But he can wait." She seemed to find a difficulty in beginning. "You're goin' to marry Mr. Chalmers, aren't you?" she said abruptly.

"That's so, Jude, Why?"

"They say Mr. Cootie was murdered—last night. I know Mr. Chalmers. I'm sayin' he's the right sort. Hot-tempered, maybe. There's things I wouldn't put past him. He's one he'rd'd thing he'd do—that. But now . . . you see how it is. If they find that be—"

She stopped short, god reddened.

"What do you know about it, Jude?"

"What do I know? Well—just I've heard in the village . . . an' what my sister's told my. They don't know much." She came nearer, and lowered her voice. "It's like this, isn't it? If Mr. Chalmers was off at eleven last night, that lets him out. He's all right."

"Of course," said Sonia quietly. "And he did."

"And he did,"

Jude nodded.

"You stick to that," she said. "Just take my advice. I don't talk. If I was you I'd say very little to that Sergeant Howe then you was without a word more than you have to. He's a policeman, but he's no fool. A man that means to get on, and this is the only big job he's had. He'd laugh at the idea that a woman could get round him; they're so sure of themselves, those men. Maybe some of 'em are right."

The only answer when Howe asked questions. Why do you tell me this, Jude? There's nothing behind it? If there is—now's the time to say so."

The girl shook her head, her lips tightened.

"Nothin'. Not a thing. To tell you not to worry—you'll be all right. Folks that talk make more trouble for themselves than they ever got out of—especially women. And men aren't behind 'em at that."

She looked at Sonia and smiled.

"I like you," she said shyly. "I'm sticking to your man. I'm waitin' for him below. Thank my goodness. Were to be married before Christmas."

Sonia looked at the youth who was leaning with bovine patience against the shed beyond the yard, chewing a cigarette; a rather fleshily dressed young man, looking like a farm hand who had donned his Sunday clothes and took the pride of them. A silver-headed cane was tucked under his arm.

"I hope you'll both be very happy," said Sonia.

"I'll look after that. I think a woman who wouldn't stand by her man if he was in any trouble, ain't worth a rush. And a man who won't stand by his girl the same, he's worth nothin' at all." She colored and laid her hand suddenly on Sonia's arm.

"No business o' mine? But Jude's my name, an' I'm with you. I'm wishin' you luck Miss—and him too. I'll say goodbye."

She left the room as abruptly as she had entered it, and a minute later was strolling off arm-in-arm with Bert. The visit left Sonia with a refreshed admiration for Bryan, which lasted for some moments; a sense of some hidden beauty in him which she had not foreseen or grasped. On reflection she quickly dropped that idea. Jude was transparent enough. That touch of sentimentality did Sonia good, and heartened her. Was it really for her—or for Brian? Yet she felt assured she had found a friend. She liked Jude. Behind that impudent little red-headed country girl had a spark of the devil in her.

CHAPTER TWENTY

Days waiara, thought Sonia; deeper yet. It became clearer every hour that while everybody had heard of the tragedy, little sympathy or regret was beam for Sanister Cootie. Not one—except the Bellyn —seemed to feel the loss of Sanister Cootie. Note, for instance, at Norchester. That gave her an added confidence in herself which could not suppress. The penalty had to be paid and was inexorable. Where could she find the answers? It was maddening not to know . . . It might be worse than that.

In the parlor she found an Ordnance map left there by some travelling motorist; it was on a large scale. It covered the district. She opened it, marked the position of King's Bells with a pencil, then the mine, and the two main roads that led south to London. She studied it laboriously.

The hours went by, but Howe did not put in an appearance to be that he said he would. She did not know what he was doing, but was only the certainty that he was active. Was it safer for her to sit tight and do nothing? That Sonia felt to be impossible. When the lights began to fail, she could stand it no longer She left the inn by the back way, took the short cut to the hill by King's Elm gates, and avoiding the village, struck the main south road.

She took the map with her, pasing a side lane on her left, and slipped behind the hedge that bordered a steep field. Here, sitting on the slipe among the elder bushes she had a clear view of the straight highway a mile, though the dusk was falling Something told her that Brian would come. And if he came, she must intercept him, at any risk.

There was very little traffic. An occasional lorry rumbled by, and a couple of cars; would give him until dark; if he came at all he must surely come this way. Reckoning by distance and time, he should have returned well before this. She began to think she was on a fool's errand; then the twin glow of a pair of side-lights appeared; a hooded sports two-seater came in view half a mile ahead, whirring along like a bullet. Brian's car, or two.

She came out across the road rigidly, with the assurance of a traffic policeman, and raised a hand. The car's brakes squealed as it pulled up abreast her.

"Sonia . . . . Good Lord!" said Brian's voice. He flung open the door. "Get in—quick!"

She tumbled in beside him. He was away again at once.

"Turn to the right—up the side-road, Brian! We've got to get together before you meet Howe."

He didn't answer, but his free hand caught hers as he turned the wheel, swinging into the lane that ran east through Abbey Woods, leaving the traffic well behind him, and slowed.

"So you've come back." Her fingers tightened on his . "I wondered if you would—"

"Come back! Did you think I'd leave you to tackle this alone!" His face was white with strain and fatigue, but his eyes shone like a gull's. "Nobody's going to part us this time. But we're taking a chance; what we've got to say must be said quick."

"Why didn't you tell me—when I rang you."

"Couldn't. Some one cut in on us—the way they always do! I didn't dare call you again. What you said, over the wire, was plenty I didn't dream you would think I'd quit." He shot the car into a cart-track that led through the wood, stopped the engine, and turned to her.

"Sonia you told the police I didn't leave the inn till eleven? They don't know. I went out before ten—that I was down there by the mien, nearly an hour!"

"Yes. I told them that."

Little Benny's Note Book

This afternoon the sky got all shades of black and all of a sudden the air got kind of cold and it said, Well, look at the rain that's coming down for about 3 minnits and us fellows all jumping around in it and yelling and feeling grate, and after supper I started to tell pop about it, saying, You awt to of saw it, pop, it came down like the mischief and stung like the deuce, holy smokes pop some of the things incluoding tweets, deede you awt to of saw it, pop.

I am prepared to admit that I made an unusual size, perhaps even a remarkable spectacle, but when you compare hale stones to cobble stones I am afraid you are abusing the privilege of litterary comparison, pop said.

Meening I was inaggurating, and I said, Well anyway, pop, how about it I I said they came down like baseballs?

You would still be stretching the probabilities to an excessive and hemie deplorable extent, pop said. Philosophers and medical men both agree that the ideal life is based on the principal of moderation in all things, including tweets, deede and the discription of hale stones, he said, and I said, Well how about if I just said they came down like bullits, how would that be, pop?

It would be silly nelevy to strike the ideel but still short of sitiating it, pop said. If you said jelly beans you imile comes closer to striking the happy medium between crab acuality and fantastic imagination. Suppose we say jelly beans and let the case rest, he said.

Sure, pop, coy Benniley Christmas, you awt to of saw it, pop, they came down like medium size rocks, I said, They certainly came down, I said, and pop said, I agree that they descended, and now chase yourself around to Fesel's cigar store and get me a half a dozen Queen Billies

Wich I did feeling against it.

ETHIOPIAN RULER HAS CONFIDENCE

Look to France and Britain to Preserve His Rule

LONDON, Aug. 15.—(CP-Havas)—Emperor Haile Selassie of Ethiopia still has confidence, he avowed in an interview published today by the Paris-Chronicle, that France, Britain and France will prevents invasion or subjection of his country by Italy.

"We do not believe France and Great Britain will side" with Italy's ambition to those that Italy is committing toward us the Emperor said. "We do not grasp either the partition of Ethiopia to be carried out for the benefit of Italian ambition have guaranteed our integrity. Ethiopia's loss of any part of protectorate is absolutely excluded."

ROME, Aug. 15.— (CP-Havas)—Popolo D'Italia, officially-inspired Italian newspaper founded by Premier Mussolini today drew the conclusion Great Britain's standing in opposition to Italian invasion of Ethiopia rests on the British fear for certain colonial possessions are being viewed with a predatory eye by the Mediterranean power.

It became increasingly apparent Italy was determined to wage a campaign in East Africa as it moved forward at a head-long pace toward completion of its war machine there.

What Local Theatre Managers Have to Say About Current Offerings

AT THE CAPITOL

"A Dog of Flanders"

A Film That Abounds in Colour, Romance and Charm

Endowing the problem with the same degree of faithfulness is used in filming "Little Women" the "Little Minister" RKO brought "A Dog of Flanders" to the Capitol Theatre yesterday with all its color and whimsical beauty, all its romance and charm.

It is a tender and human tale that has borne joy to millions of boys and girls, men and women, "A Dog of Flanders" is brought to the screen in a transmutation which will prove interesting, appealing and entertaining to adults and children alike.

It is a colorful tale of a boy of Flanders; of his dream to become a great artist; of his efforts to grow up to be worthy of the friendship of a little girl whom he has been forbidden to see because of his poverty; of his devotion to his grandfather; of his love for a mistreated dog.

The human role is undertaken by a remarkable boy actor, Frankie Thomas, who is best remembered for his acting in "Wednesday's Child." This sensational twelve-year-old has the role of Nello all the wistfulness, gallantry and honesty that the author incorporated in the original story.

Frankie is well supported by little Anne Shirley, who was seen in "Cimarron" and "Sweet." O. P. Heggie, who is also in the cast, as is the canine actor, "Lightning."

Sharing honors on the same program is a second feature, entitled "Air Hawks," that depicts with thrilling vividness the destructiveness of the latest scientific implement of war, the sleuth-ray.

"Air Hawks" it is used as a means of thwarting a "rival airplane" manufacturer from getting lucrative mail contracts.

Ralph Bellamy, who is at the top of an airline, is threatened because he will not sell out his interests to a concord group. They secure the services of a fanatical scientist who has his deadly light beam and destroys Bellamy's planes. How the mad scientist is himself destroyed by his own invention through a series of thrilling episodes, that include some daring stunts by Wiley Post, noted air pilot and stratosphere flyer.

Others in the cast include Tala Birell, Douglas Dumbrille and Genia Marshall. A Fox Movietone Newsreel completes the program.

On next Monday, the Capitol management will proudly present the renowned English dramatist, author and producer, Noel Coward, in his first screen appearance, "The Scoundrel," he has written specially for him, and he is said to achieve the same great success that has attended his theatrical and literary efforts. In "The Scoundrel," Mr. Coward is supported by an excellent cast including Julie Haydon, Hope Williams and Martha Sleeper and Rosita Moreno.

"The Scoundrel" is the type of picture that makes you like it very beginning, otherwise the theme is lost." Therefore it behooves the Coward fans to observe the starting time of this feature.

AT THE BELLE

"Doubting Thomas"

Rogers' New Screamingly Funny Film Here Tomorrow

Strike up the laughs for Will Rogers' new film vehicle, "Doubting Thomas," coming to the Belle tomorrow (Saturday), and Monday, matinee daily. You'll hold your sides as Will tries to hold his wits in this rib-tickling story about a thunder-struck husband and his slap-struck wife which was adapted from George Kelly's stage hit, "The Torch Bearers."

Reports from other cities where the picture is establishing box office records and the audiences on uproarious mood at Rodgers' new wisecracks in the role of a simple, home-loving sausage manufacturer, whose only world is gone into a turmoil when his wife, Billie Burke, goes theatrical. She appears in an amateur charity show and at the Belle theatre audiences hold on to their seats, it will be more than audiences in other cities have been able to do.

You'll laugh your fill when Billie Burke, under the influence of Allison Skipworth, who plays a theatrical impresario, wants to make a career of the stage until Rogers finally effects a cure by hiring a bogus Hollywood director to tell the amateur group what he wants for their screen tests after which Will Rogers' reverse will in evidence which can be chalked down as one of the highlights of the Rogers' films.

P. G. Dedyshe produced "Doubting Thomas" for the film. It was directed by David Butler and besides Will Rogers, Billie Burke and Allson Skipworth has an outstanding cast, including Sterling Holloway, Gail Patrick, Frances Grant, Frank Albertson, John Qualen, Johnny Arthur, Helen Flint, Fred Wallace, T. Roy Barnes, Ruth Warren, Jimmy Cooper, Helen Freeman and William Benedict.

El Brendel and a host of funmakers and berry of beautiful girls are featured in the star personality musical comedy sensation, "What No Men," to be presented on the same program with Belle Island World News, and a new Mickey Mouse cartoon "Mickey's Service Station."

2 Outstanding Features

Two outstanding features will be exhibited at the Belle Monday for the last times in "Shanghai," a beautiful love story starring Charles Boyer and Loretta Young, a new love team you will never forget, and America's favorite comedian No. 1, W. C. Fields and Mary Brian in "Man on the Flying Trapeze." Performance starts tonight at 7.15, the last complete show starting at 8.55. "Shanghai" at 7.15 and 9.55, "Shanghai" at 8.30 p.m.

DECISION OF WAR

said the Liberal Party favored reform and its record showed it. The Conservative Party, he said, was opposed reform until the eve of the general election.

Economic recovery had to go before reform but Mr. Bennett was putting the cart before the horse and claiming the reforms would bring about recovery. During the years of Liberal rule successive social measures were put into effect as the way was paved for them. Stevenson said Canada was the land where surpluses made social measures possible.

By following sound policies a Liberal Government could bring the country out of the depression and pave the way for social reforms on an expanding scale, King declared to promise immediate recovery and said he was not interested today than Mr. Bennett because he would have to face the task of refusing to compete with Mr. Bennett in promises which could not be fulfilled.

Stevens Not Changed

The Conservative Party was a "House divided," the Liberal Chieftain claimed. Mr. Stevens was a Conservative and had not changed overnight from his habits of 30 years. On his own admission he had left the Cabinet because of personal pique and had, with a relative Party heresy Mr. Bennett shut him out of caucuses. He had not left because of any difference in policy.

When it appeared Mr. Bennett was too far to lead the Party, Mr. Stevens was hoped to succeed him. But when Mr. Bennett regained his health and Mr. Stevens' chances faded he broke with the Party. That breach was temporary and the two factions headed by Mr. Bennett and Mr. Stevens would again come together he maintained.

No political leader with a sense of responsibility would come before the people now with a lot of promises, said Mr. King. For himself he refused to say that by some action respecting railways, by some new legislation, some change in the tariffs or the social structure, or some bit of reform, any appreciable number of the people now in difficulty could immediately look to the future with a measure of security. The times were difficult and the experience of the past few years ought to show of how little value were rash promises.

ROGERS SMILED WHEN MEMOIRS WERE MENTIONED

"I Ain't Near Enough Dead Yet", He Commented

ROGERS DIED WEALTHY

British Newspaper Calls Rogers World's Wisest Fool

Seattle, Aug. 17.—(AP)—The coast guard radio reported at 6:52 a.m., that Joe Ottoman took off on a plane bearing the bodies of Wiley Post and Will Rogers from Barrow for Fairbanks as 3 a.m., (E.S.T.) (9 a.m. E.S.T.).

Portland, Ore., Aug. 17.—(AP)—Will Rogers smiled at the thought of death during a visit here only two weeks ago. He was asked when he was going to write a book.

"Oh, I dunno," he grinned. "I ain't near enough dead yet."

He said one publisher had been "after me a long time to write my memoirs." He chuckled, "Maybe I'll borrow 'em."

"But heck," he chuckled, "you got to be old and pretty near dead to get enough material to write on."

Hollywood, Aug. 17.—(AP)—Will Rogers' wealth was estimated at about $3,500,000—and beloved by his associates in the industry. Rogers and Fred Stone was profoundly shocked by Rogers death with Wiley Post in the Alaska air crash.

Stone and Rogers were a sort of Damon-and-Pythias combination of the entertainment world.

"The death is a national calamity," said Stone. "He was a man who loved everybody and everybody loved him in return. He was a man with a word."

Two pictures featuring Rogers have been released. They are "Doubting Thomas" and "Steamboat Round the Bend".

Personalities of Tragedy.

Warren, O., Aug. 17.—(AP)—Tom Mix, screen and circus star and former neighbor of Will Rogers in Claremore, Okla., paid a premonition in an interview here a week before the death that claimed Rogers' life and that of his aviator companion, Wiley Post.

"I'm worried," Mix said, commenting on Rogers' trip into Alaska. "I have a feeling something is going to happen to Will one of these days. I've been feeling that way will fly."

Humorist's Widow on Way.

Stamford, Conn., Aug. 17. (AP)—Mrs. Will Rogers, widow of the famous comedian, arrived in New Haven railroad's down-coast train today and continued to New York by automobile.

Mrs. Rogers with her daughter, Mary, and her sister, Miss Theda Blake, started for California from Hollywood after the funeral three hours after learning of her husband's death in Alaska.

Dorothy Stone, daughter of actor Fred Stone, intimate friend of Will Rogers, and her husband accompanied the Rogers party as they had been behind a police escort.

It was understood they left the train in Stamford to avoid the possibility of a crowd awaiting their arrival in New York.

Plane Like Lindbergh's.

The plane in which Lindbergh was reported to have offered to fly the humorist's widow to California but it was understood Mrs. Rogers declined.

Mrs. Rogers was informed of the tragedy while en route.

Plane Had Spare Parts

Los Angeles, Aug. 17 (AP)—Although it was assembled from spare parts, Wiley Post was proud of the low-winged monoplane which carried him and Will Rogers to death in the Arctic.

"She'll never be abused like the Winnie Mae was," Post told mechanics. The Winnie Mae was the ship in which Post thrilled the airplane on two hazardous round-the-world flights.

Charles Babb. International dealer in used aircraft, disclosed Post purchased the fuselage and wings of the new plane from him.

Babb said he wanted a wing with a large lifting surface," Babb said. "I assumed he knew what he was doing when he bought it." Babb said he explained that he was going to put a Lockheed sirius wing on a Lockheed orion fuselage, saying this combination would give him great-er visibility.

Fuel Built Own Ship

Post's motive to build his own ship instead of buying a new Electra, Babb stated, considerable comment among fliers who believed Post financial resources indicated he noted the noted pilot in going ahead with his plans.

Neil Morriott, supervising aeronautical inspector here for the Department of Commerce, said Post's plane was operating under a restricted license.

Restricted licenses, Marriott explained, are granted for certain types of test flying, industrial flying—such as crop dusting—as distinguished from licenses to carry passengers on commercial lines.

Rogers Wisest Fool

London, Aug. 17. (AP)—News papers here flared with banner lines over the news of the death in Alaska plane crash of Will Rogers and Wiley Post was received.

The Daily Mail, one newspaper, "was the funniest man in America and the world's wisest fool."

They recalled Rogers' statement on the occasion of the King's Jubilee, "If England and America fought, I'd fight for England. I'd be in the middle and start laughing at each other."

"The press learns with deep regret the sad news of the untimely death of Mr. Rogers and Mr. Wiley Post," was the statement issued by the Prince of Wales.

Tribute from Dominion

Paris, Aug. 17 (CP-HAVAS)—Although Europe had many articulation tragedies to mourn—the death of Will Rogers and Wiley Post in an Alaskan plane crash drew comment on all sides.

Rogers' wit and genial personality were known in many countries, especially during his visits where he was one of the core forces behind the commercialization on the general disarmament conference and also among the first to protest the failure to despite the harmonious win in which he commanded himself.

The two overnight air crashes in Europe were by mankind and Italy. Two persons were killed and one was injured, when a plane piloted by Italian Air Force officer fell to death in Cornwall. The pilot and a passenger were killed instantly. Their mechanic suffered serious injuries.

GATTY SAYS POST LEADER IN WORLD

Former Associate is Deeply Affected by Alaskan Tragedy

Melbourne, Australia, Aug. 17 (AP)—Harold Gatty, who flew with Wiley Post on his first trip around the world, said today Post was "a leader in world aviation."

"His courage, experience and energy will be really missed," said Gatty.

Wiley, a free lance, he was a pioneer in stratosphere flying."

Gatty was deeply affected by Post's death.

"Wiley was an extraordinary man," he said. "He possessed an unprecedented capacity for becoming part of his machine. The absolutely confidence between the which he overcame his disability, his uncanny sense to judge distance and size with one eye, gives an indication of his character.

"He is one of the best friends I ever had. We remained the closest friends although the plans and interests had been widely separated."

Britain Mourns Rogers as Own, Jubilee Words Pleased British

London, Aug. 17 (AP)—Will Rogers was mourned in Great Britain today as in his native land.

Rogers really liked England and the feeling was mutual. It was recalled the Prince of Wales, his friend, once described his as a "great man."

The British were especially delighted by Rogers' Jubilee Broadcast last May in which he said: "We'd like to have them (The Kins and Queen) come over here. If they can't come over, let us know if there is any chance of joining you—tell us about the same terms as 'great man.'"

CANADIAN ARTILLERY CORPS BECOMING MECHANIZED

The Second Ottawa Field Battery Royal Canadian Artillery, N.P., commanded by Major C. E. Crain, M.C., now in training at Petawawa Camp, is shown above as a mechanized battery. This is reputed to be the oldest artillery unit in Canada.

Last Article By Will Rogers

New York, Aug. 17 (AP)—The last lines Will Rogers wrote in his long series of letters to editors appeared, by coincidence, in newspapers Friday, the last day of his life.

These lines, sent from Fairbanks, Alaska, follow:

"Visited our new emigrants. Now, this is no time to discuss whether it will succeed or whether it won't; whether it's farming country or whether it is not, and to enumerate the hundreds of obstacles and confusions and rows and agreements and management in the whole thing at home and here.

"As I see it, there is now but one problem now that they are using and that is to get 'em housed within six or eight weeks. Things have been a terrible mess. They are getting 'em straightened out, but they are not fast enough. There's about 700 or 800 of 'em. About 200 went back. Also, about half many of 'em are living in tents. They have a fight now to keep them in the middle and start laughing at each other."

"What Prince learns with deep regret the sad news of the untimely death of Mr. Rogers and Mr. Wiley Post," was the statement issued by the Prince of Wales.

Tribute from Dominion

Paris, Aug. 17 (CP-HAVAS)—although Europe had many articulation tragedies to mourn—the death of Will Rogers and Wiley Post in an Alaskan plane crash drew comment on all sides.

GENERAL BOOTH POET, COMPOSER

That vast Army which, in all parts of the world, fights for peace —The Salvation Army—has for its leader one of the most remarkable of living women, in the person of Evangeline Booth. Daughter of the rugged warrior who founded the Organization—William Booth—this world-renowned woman counts, among her many other qualifications, that of poet, song writer and musical composer. One of the founders of the Canadian Territorial Congress, which she will conduct in person, from October 4 to 10, in Toronto she has also managed singing of her latest composition entitled, "The World for God." It has already been translated into several languages, and has been sung by many audiences as numerous as ten and fifteen thousand people, in Australia, United States, Australia, Great Britain, India, Norway, Sweden and Finland. The Maple Leaf Garden, Toronto, will offer a splendid setting for this noble song on the afternoon and evening of Sunday, October 6.

HOTEL PROPRIETOR DIES SUDDENLY

Gananoque, Ont., Aug. 17.—(CP)—William C. McCarney, proprietor of the Portsmouth Hotel here, died suddenly last night. He was in his 66th year and is survived by Mrs. Neil McCarney, formerly of Brockville.

For 46 years he had been associated with the Frontenac Hotel at Gananoque and as the time of his death he and his brother Harold were the proprietors.

During the last winter he was confined to his room for 10 weeks with a heart condition. It was believed he was improved but Friday evening another attack struck and at 11 o'clock he died.

CANON SHATFORD DIES IN N. S.

Rector of Montreal Church Expires at His Summer Home

Bridgewater, N.S., Aug. 17.—(CP)—Rev. Canon Allan P. Shatford, rector of St. James the Apostle Church in Montreal, died today at his summer home at Conquerall Bank, near here.

Canon Shatford had been suffering from heart trouble complicated by pneumonia. He rallied for a time but suffered a circulatory collapse yesterday and became gradually weaker.

His willingness to share their hardships had made him beloved by thousands of Canadian soldiers. He had served the church for more than 40 years in Montreal and previously in Ontario. He visited the battlefields of France during the war and was later honored with the Order of the British Empire.

Canon Shatford was born May 8, 1873 at St. Margaret's Bay, N.S. He was ordained in 1896 after being educated at King's College, Windsor, N.S. His earlier charges were in Bridgewater and North Sydney, N.S. In 1906 he was called to Montreal as assistant rector of the church of St. James the Apostle and became rector six years later. In 1897 he married Miss Elizabeth Bridgewater, Bridgewater.

He was not only a powerful orator but had a gift for writing verse and a touch of satire that enlivened his sermons.

So great was his popularity often it was almost impossible to obtain a seat to hear him.

C.N.R. to Prove Greatest Asset Says Stevens

Regina, Aug. 17.—(CP)—Given a reasonable chance, the Canadian railway system will yet prove to be heir greatest asset, Hon. H. H. Stevens, K.C., M.P., declared in these railways falling into hands of a group of powerful financiers.

"This is not the time to sell our railways. This is time to hold on to the systems and operate them to the best advantage of Canada," he said. "A deliberate attempt is being made to create a public in the United States against railways so they will lose confidence in both railway systems.

A plan was afoot whereby "a great power in transportation, a trust, an international group with extensive bus and truck organizations—would seek control of Canada's systems.

It was his belief, he stated, Premier Bennett would declare for a national government to meet the problem. The Hon. Sir George H. Perley, K.C.M.G., Sir James Street and would receive first call in effort to control the Dominion financially.

The obstacle encountered by financiers in attempting to form the transportation trust had been "political interference" by national railways.

Hence the persistent propaganda about the national railways being a "white elephant," he said. "The public is being misled by statements like this report. The national railways are the best asset the country has.

True, said Mr. Stevens, there had been reckless expenditure for a time on the national railway system. Now, however, the national system was well managed.

MAY RETIRE BRITANNIA

LONDON, Aug. 17.—(CP Cable) —The King's famous racing yacht, the Britannia, is being laid up for the winter and it was said today the old cutter has probably finished her racing career. She is 42 years old.

MENTAL CASES OF MILDEST TYPE TO BE BOARDED

Population of Mental Hospitals so Increased That Action is Necessary

HOSPITAL EXTENSION

Addition Planned For Orillia Hospital, Says Mr. Hepburn

Toronto, Aug. 17 (CP)—Extension of the system of "boarding out" the mental patients and "parole" cases in Ontario's hospitals and construction of an addition at Orillia hospital are being planned by the Ontario government to cope with shortage of accommodation in the institutions.

Premier Hepburn 13 months the population of the mental hospitals has been increased by approximately 1,000 and Premier Hepburn admitted today "we are very much alive to the situation."

"We don't know what to do," he said. "We haven't the money really for extensions or buildings. We are planning Orillia and in the mild cases and we may build an extension to the Whitby hospital. We believe it is more economical to extend present hospitals than to build new buildings."

Reaction to Rapid Deaths Rapid Universal

(By The Canadian Press)

Reaction to the tragic deaths of Wiley Post and Will Rogers in an airplane crash near Point Barrow, Alaska, Personalities and friends were quick to express their distress.

Clyde Pangborn, noted aviator pioneering flight around the world, flight to beat Post's record, said the fatal plane crash was "the worst tragedy since the Knute Rockne crash from a public view-point."

John Barton Payne, formerly chairman of the American Red Cross who died last January, spoke through the medium of a telegram from London time before his death. In the telegram Mr. Payne said: "Will Rogers never left a friend by the Gate when asked "To what right his passing, Mr. Riley?" by saying, "I know Will Rogers."

"Will Rogers' youngest son, Jimmy was beside his father's death as a Manhattan hotel. "He went to bed," a friend said. Jimmy was said. "We don't know where."

The movie capital of Hollywood where Rogers had been a star and a friend was stunned by the news of his death. Darryl F. Zanuck, Vice-President of Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corp., for which Rogers was unable to make a comment, Irving Thalberg, Wiley Post's home town where he was always a "home town boy and friend to everybody" was prostrated by the shock. The people gathered in small groups and talked.

"This is the thing Maysville has always been dreading," said Willam A. Shown, publisher of the Maysville News. "He was our friend."

Former President Herbert Hoover in a statement said: "The world has feel a deep sense of personal loss."

S. H. Hedges, chiefs of Wiley Post, at Dallas, Tex., said he had wanted to go with his nephew on his flight. "But I'm mighty glad I didn't." When he was told about the tragedy he kept repeating, "O that's too bad, that's awful."

Dr. John Finley, Editor Emeritus, Secretary of the Royal Aero Club, said, "Wiley Post was regarded by his fellow-airmen as a flier and an efficient fellow. His achievements have been a wonder of the world and have drawn our deepest admiration. Will Rogers' personality endeared by friend to learn of the death of this marvellous pilot."

PASSENGERS REMOVED

Belfast, Aug. 17 (AP)—The 200 passengers on the Anchor Donaldson liner Letitia, aground off the entrance to Belfast Lough, were removed by tender today after the steamer had failed to refloat herself at high tide. The lines is out of Montreal.

Cat Taken to Island, Returns, Owner Swears It Must Have Swum

Powassan, Ont., Aug. 17 (CP) —Who said cats don't like swimming?

When Paddy Mousseau gave his cat to Jack Bennett to prove or rejected once it again, for Bennett took the animal to his island home on Lake Nipissing, more than 10 miles from Mousseau's residence.

Put the tabby returned. Apparently it swam to the mainland and made its way across country.

Powers are Uncertain What Italians Want; Domination Seems Clear

Britain And France Take Firm Stand Against Occupation

ETHIOPIA'S CONCESSION

Eden Asks Clear-cut Statement of Il Duce's Meaning

Paris, Aug. 17.—(AP)—Premier Mussolini of Italy held up the three-power conference seeking a way out of his dispute with Ethiopia while he pondered a French-British decision on a showdown today.

A forenoon meeting of the Italian French and British conferees was postponed while Baron Pompeo Aloisi waited beside the telephone for Il Duce's answer.

War or peace remained as much a problem as ever since the British and French Premiers were not certain just what Italy wants.

Alternative Sought

Italian quarters said Mussolini's position is clear; he intends to dominate Ethiopia and is preparing to do so by force; that it is up to France and Great Britain to suggest an alternative if they object to his methods.

Premier Laval of France and Anthony Eden of Great Britain nevertheless indicated today to put the question of showing Italy's hand up to his chief last night.

They awaited Il Duce's reply before talking further.

Action Sought

Action from front of the struggle to free Ras in Ethiopia, one Italian-Ethiopian conciliation commission. It carried the Italian ultimatum of December, decided to meet Monday when the expected Nicholas Politis of Greece would be named as the fifth arbitrator.

Answer Sought First

The French and British conferees had from Premier Haile Selassie an offer of economic concessions coupled with a firm stand against military occupation.

Eden, Great Britain's Minister for League affairs, particularly desired a clear-cut statement of what Il Duce meant by "preponderant influence" over Ethiopia before the British Emissary and Laval consulted Mussolini.

As for Haile Selassie spokesmen for the conference said he was withholding his maximum concessions until he hears Mussolini's minimum demands.

Italy Unmoved

Rome, Aug. 17.—(AP)—First formal activities of the Paris tri-power conference were postponed today in her conviction diplomatic negotiations would accomplish little toward solving the Ethiopian controversy.

No informed circles it was repeated although Italy intends to recognize legitimate interests of Great Britain and France in Ethiopia she has no intention of relinquishing her policy of domination unless Emperor Haile Selassie concedes her Pacific political rights.

Haile Selassie Hears Offer

Addis Ababa, Aug. 17.—(AP)—The rainy season gave indications today of slackening and Ethiopia pulled up may and earlier than usual and hurry the plait of Italo-Ethiopian hostilities.

The torrential downpours which have placed tremendous difficulties in the way of Ethiopian arms and troop transport, have hampered appreciably in the last few days.

BROKER SENTENCED

Kingston, Ont., Aug. 17.—(CP)—Bruce G. M. Jemmett of the defunct brokerage firm of G. Jemmett McCarthy and Company, today was sentenced to one year determinate and one year indeterminate in the Ontario Reformatory for converting stocks to his own use. ## DOMINION-OWNED BANK ADVOCATED

Premier Hepburn Speaks for Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King

Rondeau Park, Ont., Aug. 17.—(CP)—Anticipating further struggles with financial interests, Premier Hepburn wants a Liberal government at Ottawa because of the Liberal policy of a nationally-owned Central Bank. Addressing a rally of ent County Liberals here yesterday he advanced this as one of the reasons why Rt. Hon. Mackenzie should be Prime Minister of Canada.

He said the struggle for lower interest rates would continue but only the appointment of Liberal ministers to National affairs could enable Ontario to solve its debt problem. In its attempts to put Ontario finances in order by reducing the burden of the Quebec Provincial contract the Ontario government had angered the financial interests, which had sought to discipline it when it had to borrow money.

Speaking at Leamington he declared a deaf ear on us," said Mr. Hepburn. "But we had the people with us and we asked for $30,000,000 and we got it and more. We will have more to say to the financial interests, we could deal with them more effectively if we had a Liberal Canada such as that advocated by the Liberal Party."

YOUNG OFFICERS AT S. A. CITADEL

Lieutenants Brown and Richel will conduct services at the Salvation Army Citadel on Sunday, August 18 with which week-end these two young officers have been for years, members of the local corps and undertake training for work in the Army attended the S. A. Training College from which they graduated in June. Mr. Brown is stationed in Bowmanville and Mr. Richel in Colborne.

The young officers are on their holidays and it is expected that there will be large congregations at the Citadel on Sunday to hear the young men as they appear in charge of the service.

PUMPER HOUSED IN LOWER HALL

A brush fire, said to have been set by boys who were playing in the rear of was extinguished in the grounds of St. Michael's Academy, at 11 o'clock last evening by members of the fire department.

Today the newly acquired city pumper found permanent lodgings in No. 1 Fire Hall, where it will be sheltered. The change gives the appearance of a big-time fire department to the lower station.

CRABS DESTROY FISHING BAIT

Mr. Otil Seaman, local citizen, called off his fishing trip today.

Nearly 100 minnows acquired by him yesterday in preparation for today's fish were placed in a pail last evening and this afternoonght four crabs were added.

This morning 100 minnows floated, dead, on the surface of the water. The crabs during the night had taken a number of the stomach out of each of them.

HOUSEWIVES TO ASSIST SURVEY

O. V. Parker of the Dominion Department of Agriculture has passed through this city some time ago, is at present engaged in Oshawa, taking that city's quota of cheese eating cheese. In the course of his work 800 housewives will be asked, how much cheese and milk does your family consume? The answers will be tabulated and analyzed in order to find ways and means of spreading the cheese market.

The survey is being carried on under the direction of Dr. W. Hopper of the Economics Branch of the Department of Agriculture and will include the report from 4,000 households. Oshawa and London have been chosen as the representative cities in this province. A similar survey will be undertaken in Quebec.

FIRE CHIEFS ASK STANDARDS BE SET

A standard system of handling, storage, transportation and dispensation of gasoline in every city and municipality in the near future is one of the likely results of the Association of Dominion Fire Chiefs' Convention which was concluded yesterday at Brockville, stated Fire Chief Wm. Lynch of this city who is on duty again today.

"Filling stations will probably be standardized very soon if the recommendations made at the convention are carried. This was one of the principal topics of the meet", stated the local chief. "The matter is not being tackled any too soon," he added.

MR. W. E. TUMMON, M. P. MUCH IMPROVED

Reports from the summer camp of Mr. W. E. Tummon, M.P., at Stoco Lake, where he is at present recuperating, indicate considerable improvement in his condition, following a recent visit by Conservative representatives for South Hastings is expected to be able to assist actively in his present campaign within the next week or so.

MOTOR CAR CHASE ENDS IN ARREST

A wild motor car chase on the Cannifton Road early last evening resulted in the arrest of a man giving his name as Ernest Armstrong, Kingston. It was not until Plainclothes Officer Fred Izard forced the Armstrong car off the road while travelling at a high rate of speed before the driver gave up. Information regarding Armstrong's previous driving antics were received in Belleville last evening from Chief Hayes of Tweed and the R.C.M.P., both of whom Armstrong is alleged to have escaped by furious driving. Following his arrest Armstrong was arraigned before the Tweed authorities where he will appear today charged with reckless operation of a motor car.

28,117 VOTERS IN SOUTH HASTINGS

Voters' Lists, now being printed in Ottawa will be available for distribution within a few days, it was stated by Mr. Frank Cushing, returning officer, when the printing has now been completed.

In all 28,117 voters will be required to cast ballots at the coming Federal election in the South Hastings riding, it was computed by Mr. Cushing.

The polling stations in the townships of Sidney, Thurlow, Tyendinaga and Tyrconnell, and the municipalities of Belleville, Trenton, Deseronto, Tweed and the south half of the village of Stirling.

NEW CONSTABLE FOR TRENTON FORCE

Jack Taylor, who has been reporter on the Trenton Quinte Sun for the past two years, was appointed in yesterday as a member of the Trenton police department and will commence his duties on the first of the month.

Sergeant White, whose health has not been of the best during the past few months is taking a well deserved vacation.

BEES SWARM ON TELEPHONE POLE

The "keeper of bees" was needed on No. 2 highway just outside the limits of the city yesterday afternoon, when traffic was partly demobilized by a swarm of bees which settled on a telephone pole by the side of the road, attracting the attention of numerous tourists who stopped their cars to watch the spectacle. The swarm finally followed the queen bee who flew off to the east.

GIANT BULL FROG CAPTURED IN BAY

A bull-frog that would have put Mark Twain's famous jumping frog of Calvaras County to shame, in point of size, was captured in a permanent cook late yesterday afternoon by Teddy Rush. The prize measured over nine inches in length of body, it was reported.

BICYCLIST CARRIES NAZI EMBLEM

Pedestrians along Front street early last evening were treated to the sight of a stranger appearing cyclist with a gilt German eagle flag bearing the Nazi swastika mounted on the steering column of his bicycle. The lone rider was also wearing riding togs and topped by a motorcycle driver's helmet on a headpiece. Equipped with personal baggage, pedalled briskly through town headed westward without stopping for refreshment.

SEVEN GUARD RAILS ARE BROKEN OFF

No serious injuries followed a motor accident that happened at the Belleville entrance to Victoria Park last night when an automobile driven by Mr. Phil Kingston, of Lake street, Toronto, failed to make the right hand turn and went into the stone fence at the left hand gate posts in its path. The accident was investigated by Belleville police officer Bert Erwins, who stated today that the damage to the car was confined largely to the front end and fenders as a result of the accident. Dr. Kingston was proceeding eastward prior to the accident and apparently failed to make the right hand turn at Marysville. The car struck the stone fence with such force as to cause it to collapse, damaging seven guard rails.

INSPECTORS PLEASED WITH CHEESE QUALITY

Decidedly pleased with the quality of cheese examined and the condition of the factories inside and out, Dr. Gibson, superintendent of the Eastern Ontario Dairy District and Mr. G. Publow, former director of Kingston Dairy School, who have just completed a survey of all cheese factories in Prince Edward County, and five cheese factories in Hastings and Hastings, added: "The quality of cheese is good and the makers are keeping up the standard of cleanliness and efficiency."

The inspection is in connection with a competition for cheese factories in the Prince Edward district arranged by the Prince Edward County Agricultural Society. Judging will not be announced until later in the fall, when grading is completed. A large cash prize is one of the added prizes, donated by W. I. Hicks, dairy instructor of the county.

BOAT TRAVELS FAST NEVER TO BE STATED

It was erroneously stated in last night's issue, that the Rapids Queen, the palatial excursion steamer calling at this city yesterday afternoon, was going east. The boat was coming from Montreal, travelling west and returning to her home berth at Toronto, not Hamilton, as stated. She will call in here again Monday evening, Montreal bound.

TYPHOID CONTAGION WELL UNDER CONTROL

Ontario Department of Health doctors, who were sent to the district of Coe Hill by the Hon. Dr. Faulkner, Ontario Minister of Health following the discovery of two cases of typhoid when the local representative visited there this week stated yesterday, that there was no evidence of a local point for the disease, and the contagion was pretty well under control. Residents of Coe Hill district were given an immunization by the department officials. The two cases are being cared for by the Red Cross Hospital of Coe Hill.

A. B. COLLINS, K.C. AND T. SCANLAN ATTEND

Mr. A. B. Collins, K.C., of this city and Mr. T. Scanlan, Toronto, owned by Mrs. Collins has left the city for New York, where Mr. Collins will attend the Knights of Columbus supreme convention being held there from August 18 to 22. Mr. Terry Scanlan, also of this city, and three other Belleville men accompany the party of distinguished members of the Order as well as officials from throughout Canada.

Mr. and Mrs. Collins while away will visit friends in Long Branch, Perth Amboy, New Rochelle, Westport and New York City.

FOUR OF OLDEST RESIDENTS DIE

Within the past three weeks, Actinolite district has lost four of its oldest residents by death. The combined ages of the quartette totaling 356 years, a record for this section. Mrs. Melvin Dafoe, who died Saturday last was 97; David Harman was 94; John G. Bogart, died on Friday last was 81 and Joseph Reid was 84.

MACHINERY SALES GREATLY INCREASED

Farm machinery sales are also undergoing a boom in this city this season, it was reported by salesmen and executives of implement lines of Belleville. Binders, harvesters and other large implements being purchased chiefly, with substantial down payments being made on equipment. The reason given is that many of the older machines have broken down during the past several years, when few purchases were made.

HOUSE-WOMAN SENDS BILL BACK

A new tip for tidy housewives is passed on by a local woman.

Determined to end the nuisance of having her front porch littered constantly with wind blown circulars, bills and advertising circulars, the local woman is trying a new scheme.

Now, every circular and advertising bill loosely tossed in the general direction of her front door is carefully collected and placed in an envelope with the address of the sender on it. The letter with the advertising is posted "collect."

POLICE BLOTTER

Little Gwendolyn Lundberg aged five years, was knocked to the pavement when she stepped into the path of an oncoming automobile on West Bridge Street, early this evening. The automobile was driven by Mr. Raymond Zufelt, 24 Octavia street, who was proceeding westward to the baseball game at the Fairgrounds. Gwendolyn was not just alighted from the West Belleville motor bus and walked around the front of it and stepped directly into the side of Mr. Zufelt's car, which was coming from the bus on the north side of the street. The injured lass was attended by Dr. Ross Gay, who announces that her injuries were not serious, however, they consist of a cut on the left knee and cuts about the forehead and legs. No charges were laid in the matter, it is stated by the accidentals.

Constables Evans and Taylor, upon information received, investigated an accident on Dolgeville street last evening where John Wilson, 199 Coleman Street was found in a wrecked condition after the loss of much blood. He was removed to the Belleville General Hospital for observation. The accident occurred when Mr. Wilson's car window came in with his fist, badly lacerating his right wrist in two places.

Newly Purchased Pumper Passes Satisfactory Test

N. G. McDonald For-Mosers Gore, Nasmith And Storrie Retained in Interests of City

Complete data on the tests, which the city's pumper underwent prior to its acceptance by local city council has been forwarded to the local waterworks and fire department and will in turn be submitted to the city council at its next regular meeting. The tests were under the direction of Mr. N. G. McDonald, of the firm of Gore, Nasmith and Storrie, retained in the interests of the city.

Complete Report

The following is the test of the report by Mr. McDonald.

"As requested in your letter of the 2nd inst. we have tested the fire engine for your department.

"This fire engine is called a "Pacific Underwriter" or "Pickle Chieftain Special" and is of the automobile type. It is a combination pumper, booster and hose truck. The truck has a wheelbase of 168 inches and a tread of 58 3-4 inches. The weight is 6020.

The pump is of the rotary gear type having a capacity of 750 Imperial gallons per revolution. The suction inlets are openings, 6 inches and 2 1-2 inches in diameter respectively, are provided on the pump.

"The power for driving the pump is by operating the fire engine controlled by "Waukesha" six-cylinder, dual ignition engine with 4 1-4 inch bore and 5 1-2 inch stroke. According to the manufacturer's curve sheets this engine develops 192 brake horsepower at 2000 r.p.m., 100 at 1525 r.p.m., and 80 horsepower at 1125 r.p.m.

The object of the test was to ascertain if the fire engine fulfilled the requirements of the Canadian Fire Underwriters' Association as to the extent that the specifications under which the machine was purchased. These specifications were made up by the manufacturer, the Pickle Fire Engines, Limited, Toronto, and contained details of the equipment to be supplied.

Guarantee Specifications

"The fire pump was guaranteed by the manufacturer to have a capacity of not less than 600 Imperial gallons of water per minute at 120 pounds pump pressure; 300 gallons per minute at 200 pounds pump pressure; 300 gallons per minute at 250 pounds pump pressure and 200 gallons at 250 pounds pump pressure taking water from seven feet lift in 30 seconds or under test. This is the standard requirements of the Canadian Fire Underwriters' Association for engines of this type. The specifications do not define capacity, but it is understood that the net pump pressure is intended, that is, that the suction lift is added to the discharge pressure in accordance with the practice of the Fire Underwriters' Association and that no corrections are made for the differences in velocities in the suction and discharge passages to which the gauges are attached.

Test Carried Out

"The tests were carried out on the 17th inst. The fire engine was located on the shore of the bay, the supply from the harbor through twenty feet of 6 inch suction hose was drawn. The suction lift was seven feet, static. The pump pressures were read from the pressure gauge and a pressure vacuum gauge on the discharge and suction sides of the pump respectively. The water from the pump discharged through a nozzle having a 1 1-8 inch and a single nozzle. The velocity head of the discharge nozzle was measured by a Pitot tube and pressure gauge from which the discharge was then computed. All gauges used throughout the test were checked and computed. All gauges used throughout the test were checked against a dead weight gauge tester both before and after the tests. Pump speeds were read by revolution counter and stop watch, while engine speeds were measured by gear ratios. Readings of pressures were taken at fifteen minute intervals and the readings were taken half hourly. During the first of the tests the engine ran for a period of two hours, difficulty was experienced in the accumulation of steam on the pressure of the suction hose. The pump had to be stopped on two occasions for periods of one minute and two minutes to permit steam to collect. During the third the similar to the previous tests, velocities and shorter running periods no difficulty was experienced in maintaining steam. The results of the tests are tabulated below.

| | Test Number | | |
| | 1 | 2 | 3 |
| | 2 Hrs. | ½ Hr. | ¼ Hr. |
| Duration of test ..... | | | |
| Suction Pressure, Ins. per square inch..... | 122 | 300 | 253.5 |
| Suction Pressure, Ins. per square Inch ..... | 5 | 2.5 | 3.0 |
| Net Operating Pressure, Ins. per square inch ..... | 127 | 298.5 | 256.5 |
| Pump Inlet Pressure Ins. per square inch ..... | 83 | 96 | 71 |
| Size of nozzle tip, diameter inches ..... | 1 | 1 49-64 | 1¼ |
| Nozzle Discharge, Imperial, Gal.. ..... | 513 | 504 | 507.5 |
| Power delivered by pump water, H.P. ..... | 54.3 | 42.3 | 27.2 |
| Pump Speed, R.P.M. ..... | 807 | 637 | 426 |
| Engine Speed, R.P.M. ..... | 1700 | 1360 | 1305 |
| Power available from engine, B.H.P. (from manufacturer's curve) ..... | 100 | 110 | 90 |

Requirements Exceeded

The above results indicate that the requirements of the specifications of the Canadian Fire Underwriters' Association as regards capacity and pressure have been exceeded.

"An additional test was run taking water from the lake at the east side of Coleman Street, near Dorchester Street. Three hose lines each 100 feet in length were used with two 1½ inch and one 1 inch nozzle. The pump was connected to the hydrant through two 30-foot lengths of 6-inch hose with the same connection at the pumper. The running conditions were 94 lbs. per square inch and the discharge pressure 107 pounds per square inch making a net operating pressure of 73 lbs. per square inch. The total discharge was 780 gallons per minute.

No Undue Vibration

"The machine operated throughout the tests without undue vibration. It is noted, however, the evidence of overheating in any part. The valve type and mechanism functioned in a satisfactory manner. The machine was carefully examined after the tests were completed and the condition of the bearings, cylinders, auxiliary equipment and accessories was found to be satisfactory in the specifications.

"The cylinder head of the engine was removed after the tests were completed and the parts of the valves examined. They were found to be in excellent condition. There was a slight leakage of water on the rear side of the cylinder wall of the engine, between the valves in front. This mark, which was extremely slight appeared to extend throughout the length of the water pin. In our opinion, this mark will cause no trouble whatever, and is not sufficient grounds for rejecting the boat. Mr. Hicks stated that he would give the city a written guarantee agreeing to replace the block should any defects or trouble arise because of this mark. Although we are quite sure that no trouble will develop, we suggest that the city accept the additional guarantee.

"As the result of our tests and examination of equipment, we are definitely of the opinion that the machine fulfills the requirements of the specifications and of the Canadian Fire Underwriters' Association in all respects.

"Yours very truly,
(Signed) "N. G. McDonald"

POLICE COURT

Four wayward travellers were caught in the R.C.M.P. net last night, while trying to steal a ride on a C.N.R. passenger train. The four "tramps" appeared in today's local police court before Magistrate Kennie Roberston and P. S. Deacon, Belleville, charged with the C.N.R. and pleading guilty to charges of trespassing on railroad property. The usual ten day sentence was meted out, when the tramists intimated they could not pay the minimum fine under the act. Definite orders to clean-up the trespassing on railroad property has been issued to the local detachment of R.C.M.P.

One lone tramp was asked for an hour to raise his fine after pleading guilty to a charge of intoxication. He was unable to do so and the fine eventually paid.

Seen and Heard in City

There's nothing to see in Belle-sherry meadow in the county, while time dawn. Scoring blasting water-filled hase of the pond, scholarly looking gentleman, with a book, came swung from one arm, strolls along the graveled roadway with the dog busily hunting robins who barely deign to move from the sidewalk's path. Only the blatant echoes of an auto horn disturbs the summer idyll in the heart of the city.

"Paper! Paper—all about the elections!" A newsboy, sharp eyes open for business, dashes from the direction of the mid-afternoon siesta of Front street. He cries his wares in vain. "Paper! read all about . . ."

The rest of the cry is lost as the door of the busy restaurant engulfs him. In spite of the heat business goes on.

Green clicks of 'em at the four corners. Dry-bricks whine and chatter as quivering cars are brought to a halt. Four traffic tides past in twos and three while drivers idly watch the cops swing arms crossed checkingly by on a vagrant breeze from the lusty smell of oil and dusty pavements arises in a shimmering cloud. Then comes Sandy, a tall, gaunt hand of one pedestrian-universal badge of the blind—and the sightless one passes by.

Hand tools displayed in a large show window and in the grateful shade of overhanging awning, coolies-men pause to survey and admire. Fingers turn inquisitively as each tool is closely examined. Hand inside the door to the hardware counter the most popular item in the store is found. Here the fall replies are just around the corner.

The popcorn wagon and its attendant vendor of the crunchy display is heaped like a snowbank in one corner. Other sides in the afternoon sun throw strips of shade of a building, peeping merchant from the doorway on the corner. Too hot to eat. The small handful of night owners, less occasional children the only business transactions of the day. Not business enough to go on, even if summer heat is here.

POLITICAL BAND FORMED BY GIRLS

Conservatives' New Organization Promises to be Interesting

"No longer is it necessary for the young ladies of Belleville to have envy in their eyes and sad tones in their hearts when they could take the place of the male members of the different bands in the city," they parade by on celebration days in good fit-ting uniforms or as they play stirring music at the band concert. Belleville is now the proud possessor of a girls' band sponsored by the Conservative party of South Hastings and under the directorship of Mr. W. E. Tunnicliffe, M. P., and Alderman Richard Arnott, President of the Young Canada Conservative Club of this city.

Although the band is still in its infancy, having only recently completes a little over two weeks ago there is no doubt from results so far it will be a welcome addition to the city. Two great reasons that are bound to make it a success are that they have a first class leader and teacher and the girls themselves seem inspired with the idea that they have a stake in such a degree of proficiency that it will remain a permanent organization for many years to come.

The musical director is Mrs. Gilmour, formerly with the famous Gilmour Band of the United States, which was built up by the name of her husband and which for many years toured the States with success. Her husband was classified as one of the leading bands in the country. Some of the members have attained musical success by studying with Mrs. Gilmour who has played at the Canada Central Exhibition at Ottawa and at the Canadian National Exhibition at Toronto and whose band has stirred thousands of Canadians with its exotic playing. Mrs. Gilmour herself has been giving untiring efforts to the girls' band in the hope of making it a real concert band by afternoon of next week excepting Sundays she has the girls at the Y.M.C.A. and instructs them in the arts of finer music. She has also been untiring in her efforts for the use of the band the instruments used in her husband's band which she has with her here and three times a week in the evenings the girls are instructed in the Orange Hall under the guidance of Mr. Gilmour and his wife.

Much progress has been made so far. Several easy marches can already be played by the girls which is a real mark of accomplishment. They have a number of pieces in their early stage would be a good addition to many of the bands in the city due to her almost perfect rhythm and timing.

It is the intention of the girls to be able to make their first public appearance at the Belleville Exhibition is in full swing and subsequently at the many numerous political meetings that will take place in the near future.

There are 24 girls in the band with about four or five more expected. The complement of the band is as follows—Misses Eileen Haskell, Helen Hutchinson, Dorothy Clark, Nellie Bowers, Jean Thompson, Peggy Allen, Lois Langman, Mary Aikenhead, Jean Hall, Dorothy Jordan, Fern Morris, Doris Mowery, and Elizabeth Hall.

Oxen Kinda Slow and Pokey but Owner Willing to Match Them Against Any Team in District

"They may be kinda slow and pokey, and always have their own rough lols and fences just to get a real picture of an old-fashioned team. They've stopped him to his work and looked himself and his team at every angle. "Sometimes three or four of them are taking pictures at once" commented the owner.

"But I don't mind", he added. "They're probably only one of the two or three teams in the entire province. Visitors, naturally like to take pictures of them, and I'm glad to have them so interested."

One of the yokes used by Mr. Malloy in his work has been handed down from generation to generation for over 100 years and is a variety of pioneer life in that section of the county. Deep weathered ridges have been worn in the yoke where the wood has long felt the contact of hide and hair it is deeply worn and smoothed. When it finally wears out it will fashion himself another one, for he is recognized as being either handy with tools or both.

Mr. Malloy voiced the thought that there might be more in store for ply raising bull calves and then "educating them for the show ring purpose", he says "if farmers only knew how dependable they are and how much work they can do in a day, there would be more demand for them."

"And then, besides all that", he adds, "there's the fellowship. The two of them left here and there through the country it only for the pleasure of the ride. Sometimes

MINUTE INTERVIEWS

Warden Janes Bowman of Hastings

"The country has been blessed this year with bountiful crops and a better feeling is evident among the farming community which bodes well for business. There has been a pickup in some prices of produce, and work seems a little easier to obtain this year than at the same time last year. There are definite signs that the country is on the road to recovery and of inactivity has passed. There is only hope with the rest that industrial activity will continue, nationally and, in permanent form."

J. O. Herity, Industrial Councillor and Secretary of the Local Chamber of Commerce.

"It is surprising when you consider the birth of quintuplets in a remote part of the province, that there are not more things, say for example the summer holiday industry, the pageant of Dionne quintuplets in the north country has been one of the biggest tourist attractions, and thousands of them have been routed through Belleville, which we are pleased to be credited, but this is felt noticeably in the business circles. It is also true for the counter attraction of the Quintuplets and the tourist traffic, for the most of it, which is routed through this district, it is safe to say."

John Bee, Marshall Bead

"I'm through growing corn enough to say rain until something is done about the corn crop, and so are a good many other farmers. Not in years has the borer been so numerous or active as he has been now. There is hardly a standing stalk of corn in the county that hasn't been infested with the borer. Pastures are in fair to good the same condition in backyard gardens. Nevertheless you have to look over a whole acre to get enough for your corn dinner".

Wm. B. Sleeffer, Taxi Driver, Belleville

"I know a lot of 'don'ts' for car drivers, but what's the use of repeating them, for they don't pay any attention anyway. But, if you have been driving for a long period of time, you unknowingly in order to avoid fatigue, shorten the distance between pace and avoid spurts. Get your correspondence with the road and don't grip the wheel too tightly, keep it relaxed and yet maintain at the same time. Don't slump in the seat and don't strain the legs to reach the accelerator and brake —they are nearly all adjustable if the seat of the car are not. Don't talk to passengers in the back seat and don't look while you're trying to drive the car. Time and time again I remove his cost while driving at a fast rate of speed along the road. That's how angels happen".

Jack Hathaway, Store Proprietor

"Western stories, whether they deal with the straight shooting hard riding cowboys pursuing the cattle-rustlers, or the more tender romances of the open prairie, are still leading the list of best sellers in the magazine race. The West, young man, or read about it it may can't seem to be the birth of the majority of readers. Mystery and adventure yarns are still big favorites, as are the exploits of the detectives and police in the magazine field."

Mrs. C. R. M. Mother of Four

"Whoever is responsible for it should see that effort is made during these very warm days to clean the wading pool at the upper end of Victoria Park established for the smaller children. The bathing pool lower down on the park is splendidly managed in connection with older children and the wee ones have been deprived of bathing up this wading pool again this summer and the question for a good many harrassed mothers just now!

Find Stone-Age Boy With Dog

Berlin (Reuter).—A child dog-lover of 2,000 years ago has been unearthed at Neustadt, Central Germany. Workers enlarging the cellars of a local wine merchant came upon a prehistoric grave and under it the skeleton of a boy and a dog. Experts declared the child to be the work of Stone Age mourners, who buried their dead child's pet with him.

BOARD DEMANDS LEVY ABOLISHED

Understood Buyers Dropped Prices 1-16 Cents to Cover Cost

London, Ont. Aug. 17—(CP)—Members of London Cheese Board stood today behind their resolution condemning the license levy of 2½ cents a hundredweight by the Dominion Marketing Board and a demand it be abolished.

Eight factories boarded 901 colored cheeses last night and all sold for 9 11-16 cents. It was understood buyers dropped their bids one-sixteenth of a cent to cover the five-cent levy. They were also forced to pay the Ontario cheese patrons' Marketing Board and the added clerical cost of making returns for each purchase as well as the 41 licenses fee for each purchaser.

The resolution which will be sent to the Dominion Minister of Agriculture and other government officials follows:

"Knowing the English market, which takes around 70 per cent of Canada's cheese produced in Canada, is very premium over world markets will not accept a 2½ cents levy per hundredweight of cheese;

"Knowing that the Canadian export trade, with which by the marketing hazards and its methods of financing, which is attempting to promote cash returns to the cheese factory-man, that they cannot afford to absorb the levy.—

"We are forced to the logical conclusion that the levy of two and one hundredweight of cheese will eventually be paid by the farmer in necessarily lower returns, which will result from such a levy".

Ottawa, Aug. 17.—(CP)—The levy of five cents for each 100 pound of cheese, declared unfair by London Cheese Board at London, Ont., has protested, was made by the Canadian Cheese Patrons' Marketing Association, it was stated by Dominion Marketing Board officials today.

The case of Belleville is not necessary.

The Ontario Cheese Patrons Marketing scheme was proposed to the Dominion Government under Section 2, It has for its object the improvement of marketing Canadian cheese in the United Kingdom.

It plans to send a representative abroad to study marketing and to found advisable, send over direct shipments of cheese. To meet experimental purposes. It also plans to encourage the sale of cheese through the bodies that represent the actual buyers. To meet these expenditures, the levy was imposed.

Under another scheme, the dairy products marketing boards control schemes the cheese producers are granted a Dominion Government subsidy of $1.50 per each hundred pounds for which parliament passed a special vote last session.

The London Cheese Board at yesterday's meeting approved the five-cent levy, claiming although paid by the buyers it was really taken off the price of cheese to the producers.

HOLMES RE-UION

Eldorado, Aug. 17.—On Wednesday, August 14th, the annual Holmes reunion was held at the home of the youngest son, Mr. William, at Eldorado. The rooms were nicely decorated for the occasion with seasonable cut flowers. About eighty guests were present at noon to do justice to the good things set before them on Mrs. Herbert Sager tables.

After the dinner the young people enjoyed a game of ball while the older folks relaxed visiting in the shade of the trees.

In the late afternoon they left for their several homes feeling that it was good to meet at least once a year. Next year the reunion will be held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Sager, Belleville.

Those attending were: Mr. and Mrs. Alida Holmes, Sadie, Roy, Durwood, Gordon, Mrs. Geo. Holmes, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Sager, Allen, Jessie, Herbert, Maurice, Roberta, Barbara, Mr. Sidney Holmes, Mr. and Mrs. Edmund Grives, Mabel and Merle, Mr. and Mrs. Goldie Holmes and Jean, Mr. and Mrs. Tom Lynn, Gwen and Shirley, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Holmes, Mr. and Mrs. Roy Holmes, and Alberta Holmes, of Queensboro; Mr. and Mrs. Fred Smith, Jean and Ross, Mrs. Hilda Anderson and Doris, Vivian Wyatt, Mrs. and Mrs. Ernest Holmes and Dalton, of Cooper; Mr. and Mrs. Dan Bird, Sid Bird and Miss Pearl Livingstone, of Toronto; Mr. and Mrs. Fred Fleming, Fay, Ingeborg, which is surrounded by a prominent cash returns to the cheese factory-man, that they cannot afford to absorb the levy.—

"We are forced to the logical conclusion that the levy of two and one hundredweight of cheese will eventually be paid by the farmer in necessarily lower returns, which will result from such a levy".

EVERGREEN WINS FROM MINTO

First Place Team in Loop Show Their Ability

Stirling—After surviving a hectic five game series for second position in the league standing last the first of the finals to the smart squad from Evergreen on Thursday field, on Friday evening. Keen competition has been the feature of every game throughout the season, with Minto and Ivanhoe being tied for second place at the end of the regular schedule. In the play-off to break the tie five games were necessary with Minto gaining the honours, and also the right to play Evergreen for the championship. The first game which took place at Minto on Friday evening was well attended and the fans were given a real treat. The game was scheduled to be played at Evergreen, but as the Minto team was busy fighting the fire at Mr. Nathaniel Heath's farm which was fortunately prevented the game from going past the fifth inning and ended with Irish out in the fifth inning on account of the heavy rain. The second game was played at Minto—D. Reid, D. Sine, C. Mumby, L. Tanner, B. Heagle, L. Mumby, Umpire—Mr. Reynolds, O. Sine.

Evergreen—A. Rodgers, D. Stapley, D. Rodgers, C. Dervolin, D. Rowe, B. Heath, R. Broadworth, J. Mitts, Umpire—

Mr. Walter Warren officiated behind the plate, assisted by Lloyd McCauley on the bases.

From Broadway to Belleville for the Biggest Fair Ever

Well! Well! Here we are again, as the clown used to say in the old Barnum & Bailey circus, before the days of five rings and a tent as big as all out-doors, the old fashioned one-ring circus where the audience and the performers could talk to one another.

Well! Well! again—what we started out to say was that the big event was getting close. The Belleville Fair which has a long and honorable history. Plans are on foot for the Big Time for that great showman and Friend of Everybody, Tom Power, the Belleville Fair is one of the biggest events of the season.

Hamid Attractions, 1580 Broadway, New York City, largest booking office of amusements in the world, are furnishing three big attractions for Belleville Fair in the original Canadian Midway. The world famous French Poodles, Garbo and Major, said to be the "Laugh Bit of the Ages"; the "Original Gold Dust Twins," a real high act in color, precision, never forgotten, their Comedy Boxing Bout being described as "the funniest act in show business" and "The Four Laddies," an awe-inspiring dare-devil performance 110 feet above the ground, together with funny acrobatic and comedy knockabout numbers.

Belleville Fair has everything a first class Fair should have, in the way of exhibits of farm, factory, mine and forest, as well as a wealth of Special Attractions which appeal alike to the Tired Business Man, the Real Farmer and his wife who feel the need of relaxation and entertainment after the summer's hard work.

There will be other features of a highly entertaining nature, for 1935, including a grand program of speeding on the track by the best horses that can show their heels to Canada, a big Midway and a thousand and one novelties and surprises.

SAILING TOWNS

New York Aug. 16 — Paul W. Chapman, former president of the United States Lines, will re-enter the shipping field if the Federal Government looks favorably upon his plan for the construction of two large transatlantic liners, it became known yesterday.

Mr. Chapman has conferred frequently in recent weeks with Secretary of Commerce Roper and has submitted detailed plans for ships which, it is said, would be larger than any commercial craft afloat and capable of carrying more than 5,000 persons in a single crossing.

Mr. Chapman became one of the most important figures in the shipping world in 1930 when he bought the United States Lines and the American Merchant Line from the Shipping Board for $18,000,000. He lost the lines in August, 1931, when the board declared his company incapable of continuing the operation of the ships and ordered them sold to an organization controlled by the International Mercantile Marine Company and the Dollar and Kennedy Steamship interests.

Planned $20,000,000Ships

Mr. Chapman had planned to build four ships for the United States Lines and actually had started to build two, now known as the Manhattan and the Washington. These are cabin ships of 30,000 tons and when plans for their construction were announced Mr. Chapman said they would be followed by super liners of more than 50,000 tons to cost $50,000,000 each and capable of a speed of 28 1-2 knots an hour.

these two big ships with the Leviathan in a fast transatlantic passenger service, but when he lost the ships he fled if the world and the new owners concentrated on the completion of the two cabin ships, which are now under inspection by the Atlantic service and will be joined soon by a third ship.

Mr. Chapman worked with a staff of sixty experts nearly a year in developing the details of his proposed big ships, and when forced to abandon his plans engaged William Perroit, head of his shipbuilding staff, as advisor on construction. The recent visit Mr. Chapman and Mr. Perroit have made to Washington is believed to confer with government officials.

New Superliners Proposed

Details of the proposed ships would not be discussed yesterday by members of Mr. Chapman's staff, who limited their statements to one word—"No." Mr. Chapman planned in 1930 was nothing compared to what he is working on now," it was said, unofficially, "that his plan called for two superliners 1,250 feet long capable of attaining 38 knots, and costing about $50,000,000 each.

The cafeteria system, which frequently has been urged upon shipowners as a means of holding down expense and making possible a profitable service, also has been proposed. A passenger rake of about $60 would be charged and an extra charge for meals served in cabins would be served as passengers requested.

Shipping men do not consider such a ship practical, but their potential value as troop transports in time of war is said to have brought supporters among government officials. The new Shipping Bill, backed by Senator Copeland, would provide government aid for vessels such as Mr. Chapman proposes.

THE TRAGEDY IN ALASKA

Two of the greatest men of the age have passed from life. Wiley Post, conqueror of the air lanes of the globe, intrepid aeronaut, and aspirant for a new course through the stratosphere, and Will Rogers, the lovable cowboy, humorist, gentle philosopher, who saw through the shams and weaknesses of this time, debunked the hypocrite, and shed a glow of love and kindness on the homelike things of life in the spirit of a kindly mentor. These great men, the conqueror, and the philosopher, died in a peculiarly modern accident, an airplane crash. That Wiley Post might meet with such a mishap might be expected. from the dauntless nature and the heroic attempts of the man who was never daunted by defeat, but for the smiling and honest Will Rogers, humorist, and entertainer, to go the same road down to the grave as did Post, from which the world will not recover for many a day. Post's death itself shocks the world but to have two boom friends like Post and Rogers go in a crash is unbelievable.

Will Rogers was himself one of the warmest advocates of flying. He urged everyone to use the modern means of travel and courted his own death in flying at every opportunity he had. That his life should be the price of his love of aviation is one of those events in life which puzzle us.

President Roosevelt placed these men properly when he set them forth as two of the greatest Americans who ever lived their country must be proud. They cannot but serve as models for mankind in the years to be, in achieving, in thinking on life's great issues.

Aviation has suffered an irreparable loss which can never be estimated in the removal of Wiley Post. A man of great resourcefulness, shared nothing, attacked everything that came into his mind and this past season he gave a remarkable demonstration of his dauntless character in his repeated attempt to chart a new air route through the stratosphere or empyrean. With the characteristic irony of life he did not die on one of these attempts to set a new air but on a holiday jaunt up in far north Alaska.

Will Rogers had one of the greatest following of man has ever had. His writing was filled with millions who knew him from his screen and his radio presentations. The former cowboy and entertainer became with the talking picture one of the outstanding actors of the sound picture for he possessed character, a gift of entertaining and of appealing to the audience, and broadcasting his own personality which was instantaneous in its effect. Few actors are universally acclaimed by rich and poor, by those with little education and the most highly educated, but Will Rogers had what few men in the entire world possess, the great gift of universal appeal. This was the result of the blend of his mental and moral makeup, and great as was his art it was his character and his philosophy which made every one of his stage plays, every one of his screen plays, a success. Millions who knew him through his entertainments, feel they have lost a friend, a mentor whose lessons in life's values will not be forgotten. There is no one to take his place, for such men are rarer than jewels, they are the priceless possessions of few ages in the world's history.

In the public prostration at the shock of the death of these titans of men, the broken-hearted family of the comedian and humorist, the distraught wife and the bowed parents of the world-famous flier are not forgotten by the sympathy of millions who knew these men through the news or the moving picture.

Their part in life these men had well lived. They have given to their fellowmen a priceless heritage and have gone away, Rogers in the prime of life and Post in the very May-morn of youthful achievement. In a far far land they died, but their homeland and their admirers mourn all over the wide globe.

One may paraphrase lines from King Henry VIII.

"They gave their honours to the world again,
Their blessed part to heaven, and sleep in peace."

But when we think of Will Rogers and Wiley Post we do not think of death, for they were the very embodiment of intense living.

IRIS-TIME

Iris-time, and glowing colour
Spreads its wonder everywhere;
Springtime blended into summer
Heaven's sweetness in the air.

Iris golden, bronze and purple,
Iris in her richest sheen,
Ruby, rosarie, azure, creamy,
Companied by tenderest green,
Strength and dignity and beauty,
Curves that Grace has claimed her own;
Angel petals, half-revealing,
Wondrous secrets making known,
Sturdy, strong and gently fragrant,
Taking many a lovely guise;
Thralling us with radiant richness,
Glory of the April skies.
Half-concealing, half-revealing
Gifts that God, the loving, wise,
Planted in a flower's bosom.—
Gifts of love that never dies.

CROWS NOW BEING UP FOR DEBATE, 'Constant Reader' gives us this one: The story of the tame crow in the Great Family Journal, the crow which insisted upon accompanying the family on a motor tour and getting the whole family fed, all kinds of trouble through his thievish ways, reminded me of a particular friend, resident of Belleville, a mighty game hunter, who spends his winters in the south, his summers in and about Belleville and his fall with the ducks. This man is the mightiest open hunter of them all. Talk about Ingram calling the lordly moose to their doom this hunter actually has a call for the crows which brings them flying helter skelter range of his trusty gun. His record is 235 crows to date and his friends think the government should do something about it, strike a special medal or ribbon. If anyone can hang up a crow record equal to that we'd like to hear about it, says "Constant Reader", who adds that the crow hunter is also most deadly among the ducks in season. Now there's a crow story which is vouched for by "Constant Reader", a prominent citizen who was never known to prevaricate—much.

ONE OF THE GREATEST GET TOGETHER GATHERINGS of the year is the Belleville Fair. Friends who have not seen each other for months; perhaps since the last Fair, meet about the Fountain on the Midway or in the grandstand, and the visit is worth much more than the effort and money involved in devoting a day or two to Belleville Fair. Of the many special attractions from all parts of the world secured for the entertainment of Fair visitors, none will be enjoyed more than the program of the Belleville Men's Chorus, one of the finest musical organizations in Canada. The chorus will sing in front of the grandstand on two evenings of the Fair, and in such a setting, the open air, the brilliant lighting, the crowds of people, one could hardly imagine anything more enjoyable.

REVOLT IN THE DESERT
by T. E. LAWRENCE

Siddons flew me back to Cairo that evening and in the morning at Abaka I told Dawnay, just arrived, that life was full, but going steadily. Next morning we heard by aeroplane, how Buxton's force had fared at Mudowarra. They decided to assault it before dawn mainly by means of bombs. We, in three parties, one to enter the station, the other two for the main redoubt.

Accordingly, before midnight white tapes were laid as guides to the zero point. The opening had been timed for a quarter to four, but the way proved difficult to find, so that daylight was almost upon them before things began against the southern redoubt. After a number of bombs had burst in and about it, Buxton rushed up and took it easily—to find that the station party had evacuated it only a moment before. These alarms roused the middle redoubt, but only for defeat. The men were routed in twenty minutes later.

The northern redoubt, which had a gun, seemed better-hearted and splashed its shot freely into the station yard, and at our troops. Buxton, under cover of the southern redoubt, directed the fire of his own guns which, with their usual deliberate accuracy, sent in shell after shell. Shadoof engine house, the machines and bombed it, while the Dawnay party, on the ridges to east and west subjected the breastworks to severe Lewis gun fire. A white flag was displayed at last of the enemy surrendered quietly. We had four killed and seven wounded. The Turks lost twenty-one killed and one hundred and fifty captured, with two field-guns and three machine-guns.

Buxton then set the Turks to getting steam on the pumping-engine, so that he could water his crew and guns, while men blew in the wells, and smashed the engine-gear with two hundred pounds of rail. At dusk, charges at the foot of the great water-tower and in single chimney stones across the plain; Buxton a moment later called Walk-about to his men, and all four hundred camels, riding like one, and roaring like a gale, marched off for Jefer. Thence we had news of them. They met a Turkish flying column on the road, and marched for Blair where Joyce and myself had agreed to meet.

Accordingly on the evening of August fifteenth, 1918, we set off with Buxton in his camels, and war. Young had duly sent to Bair fourteen days' rations for men and beast. Of this there remained eight days for the men, ten for the animals. The so-called road was to supply column, driven forward only by Young's energy. It was three days' hard-all-minimum with tear of the desert. They had lost, stolen or died on the way, 17 Buxton's stores upon their way.

We had to adjust the plan to its unexpected demands. Buxton purged his column of every inessential, while I cut down the two armoured cars to one, and changed the route.

Buxton and his men started in the mid-afternoon while I delayed till evening, seeing my man load my car and himself with a gun-cotton charge in the dusty Egyptian packcamels. Joyce dismounted hobgrass were for this ride a load or drive the explosives' train.

We had judged that Buxton would sleep just short of the Hadj so we rode hither by night, and by day, nor was the track frodden. We looked over the crest of the Hadj, from a bitter cool wind-swept cliff Hermon into our flustered face. The slope showed no movement and silent, and to our town-dwellers, accustomed to the reek of Arabs, camels or the human body, still freshly dug, there was something disquieting, almost sinister, dangerous, in the steely desert wind. So we turned back a few paces, and then rode round by the ridge to sleep comfortably in its cloistered air.

In the morning we looked out across fifty miles of blank country, and saw nothing but the two armed companions, but Daher shouted presently that he heard firing, and their column winding up from the southeast. They had met last night, but had not fired till dawn. My men jested with humour against the Turks, and I sat with the sheikhs who could lose his road between the Thalathkuwwat and Petra. Then Buxton's car saw between the Marble Arch and Oxford Circus.

Buxton's force, in the morning, with the sun hot on our backs and the wind fresh in our faces, from Dhirwa. They looked different from the stiff, respectful companies which had escorted Arabs, for Buxton's supple brain and friendly characteristics had given to the experience of irregular fighting, and revised their training rules for the needs.

He had changed their column of camels' pads and formal subdivision of two hard companies; he had changed their daily review and that, instead of their old immaculate lines, they came clodded and wrangling with still or drew together without delay upon each variation of the enemy's attack or defence. He had reduced the loads and re-hung them, thereby lessening the

ENGLISH RELIEF METHOD PRAISED BY WELFARE HEAD

Hon. David Croll Will Make Report To Premier

REGISTRATION SYSTEM

Says Unemployables Only Carried by Municipal Relief

Toronto, Aug. 17—(CP)—Praise of English methods of relief administration and municipal financing was voted today by Hon. David Croll, Ontario Minister of Public welfare, on his return to Toronto after a five weeks' absence in England.

"I am going to prepare a report on what I 'sensed' in England and will submit it to Premier Hepburn," the Minister said.

Mr. Croll found cash relief was used almost exclusively in England with satisfactory results.

Workhouse Disgrace

"A man in England will 'do almost anything to keep out of the workhouse. It isn't like that in Canada. The treatment is inhuman but rather it is considered a disgrace to go there. The lazy man is penalized by being cut off from other forms of relief but his family is always looked after."

Municipal Responsibility

Mr. Croll said municipalities assumed the relief responsibility only for "unemployables" and certain classes such as domestics and certain business men who had never been included in the National Insurance plan, in operation since 1911.

"I don't know that their problems differ very much—in fact, none," he said.

He was specially impressed by the thorough system of registering unemployed in the United Kingdom. At Kew, he said, the government files had records on the 36,000,000 persons out of the 46,000,000 population who had received relief or insurance benefits at one time or another.

"Until I have been given a chance to study the system carried on in England, I hesitate to say I have an opinion on it" stated Miss Bryden, supervisor of the local relief office, when presented for comment. "As I understand it, each family keeps pretty close tabs on the other one there, which might help a lot in some cases".

TENANT HOUSE AT PICTON DESTROYED

Dig Trench Around Place to Prevent Fire From Spreading

PICTON, Aug. 17 — At eight o'clock Friday morning fire broke out in the tenant house on the farm of Isiah Van Meer in Yeremans Township, owned by Orval, one and one half miles from Picton. In spite of all that could be done the house burned to the ground.

Neighbors and the time Neighbors soon gathered and dug a trench about the doomed house, so that the flames would not spread to the barn, with its harvested crop, or the farmhouse. Two fire fighters worked until ten-thirty before the fire was under control.

With everything in dry condition the fire might easily spread to other farm buildings.

Messages of congratulation and good wishes, were sent by Picton friends of Mrs. Gregory Bowerman, former resident, who celebrated her ninetieth birthday in Toronto on August 9th. Mrs. Bowerman still enjoys remarkable health, is able to read without glasses and takes a keen interest and places of interest in the city.

Mrs. Joseph Hinch and young son of New York City are spending some time the guests of her sister, Miss Iff Alice Bowerman and other relatives in the county.

Little Doris and Delaphine Brooks of Natures are holidaying with their grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. H. Kale.

Mrs. John Sayers and daughter, Marion are visiting the former's brother, Mr. Peter Ward at Adolphustown for a few days.

Mr. and Mrs. Fulver and family and Mrs. Edith Fovers and daughter spent Sunday at Outlet Beach.

Ex-Mayor W.B. Riggs 82, Celebrates Day

Quietly, at his home on the corner of East Bridge and George Sts., ex-Mayor W. B. Riggs one of the city's best known residents is today observing the 82nd anniversary of his birth. During the day Mr. Riggs was the recipient of many congratulatory messages from friends throughout a wide area, and was heartened also by personal gifts of remembrance from relatives and his immediate family, although always active during the past few years as the farmhouse. Mr. Riggs has been more or less confined to the house where he has been in the habit of receiving his friends for personal chats. His interest in municipal affairs is still keen as of old. His memory of early days in Belleville remains with which he regails the hours, and his callers with his reminiscences.

Toronto Conservatory Revises Syllabuses

Coincident with the opening of its 50th session, the examining board of the Toronto Conservatory of Music announces that its pianoforte syllabus has been completely revised and re-graded. The violin syllabus also has been revised to some extent. It is anticipated that in both cases the work will meet with general approval, as they are specifically designed to enable students of average ability to proceed towards the higher grades by easy stages while in no way retarding those who are capable of more rapid progress.

Letters to the Editor

"Frenzo" To The Flower Thief

Every city and town has its mean, dirty, fat, impudent and its rubbishless inhabitants; Belleville is cursed with a few who exhibit these characteristics to a marked degree.

If the woman (to be sure it was a woman—no man would have taken the pains to smooth the earth back over the holes made by the theft) who stole the red cox comb from the flower bed on Pinnacle Street Wednesday night and returned to take more last night, will come back again tonight she will get the other remaining two, and a big surprise thrown in. Any one who is too miserable to spend or cents to buy the spring for a box of these plants, but they seem so ardently to desire later on in the summer when they see them in full bloom in a neighbor's garden, and too lazy to plant and tend them in such a manner as to bring them to this point — where they attract no admiration is certainly to be pitied.

To compare said type of humanity to the little black and white furry animal we meet up with sometimes out in the woods, always by accident and with regret, would be a gross insult to the alertness, riched "puny".

Tall Stories About Plants!

Tall stories are floating around the countryside these days.

They have nothing to do with fire-proof beds, nor are all the tellers of the tales registered members of the Tall Stories Club.

The subject is hollyhocks, sunflowers, corn, sweet peas and in fact almost any other fruit, flower or vegetable that grows.

You can't stop at any of the roadside stands for a mess of green corn without the farmer wanting you to walk a few rods to the next acres and view a sunflower, that has no sense of proportion. Over the les cups in local homes, housewives match tall tale with tall tale in the summer time, sometimes growing out of bounds.

If may have been the abundant rain, the heat wave or both in some sections of this district, but it's a season of tall growth, and it is a poor farm or vegetable garden that can't lay claim to something tall or big.

Mr. Harold Campbellford advances the claim of corn 13 feet 2 inches in height, but a sunflower took of scorn is given him by C. W. Dixon, Tyendinaga, who points with pride to a flock of sunflowers almost six inches taller than that in question. Mr. Dixon and Mr. Howard Stirling presents a stem of hollyhocks over 12 feet in height and James McDonald of Wellington, Prince Edward County invites his friends to come and see his broad-faced sunflowers which bob up and down above the heads of their grassy surroundings.

It's a season of tall stories and superabundance of crops, but not only in the vegetable world are the oddities to be found. The woodchucks, for example this season are taller, larger, heavier and bolder looking than they have been in years, declare one Hamilton resident, who has observed them closely.

Along the Lewnan, Avonlea, Grasselbourg, Central Butte, Riverhurst, Bengough subdivisions in Saskatchewan weather has been warm and showery. Crop damage by rust is variable and, added to this, several heavy hail storms have caused material damage to several thousands of acres and where farmers are partly insured only about is now being cut for feed. Along these subdivisions crop estimates show a variation of from six bushels to the acre of low grade to 10 to 13 bushels to the acre in the better grade.

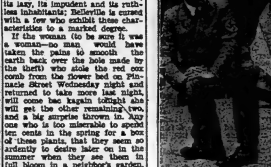
From Herbton, through the Melville, Wynona, Regina, Qu'Appelle, Rosetown, Elrose districts weather has been seasonable, with some rain and one or two local hailstorms.

In the eastern districts rust damage is severe but west in the Rosetown area only slight rust infection is noticed on late wheat and evidence of saw fly can be seen in some localities. Damage from either cause in the western section will be negligible along all subdivisions constituting the Prince Albert division weather has been mostly dry and warm with some hail storms. Rust is reported from many districts but damage at present can not be estimated. Prospects in all this territory appear to be far less than a normal crop yield.

From the Drumheller, Oyen, Stettler, Three Hills, Red Deer subdivision come reports of all crops advancing rapidly and harvest will be general about Aug. 20th. A few of the grasshopper menace continues but farmers are still using poison bait. Except for grasshopper, straw and those localities hailed out, this whole territory will harvest a fair to good crop.

Crops Advancing

In North Central Alberta, all crops are advancing. Filling and ripening fast. Cutting will commence in from a week to ten days, although some barley and grain will be cut next week. Needed. If any August frost holds off, North Central Alberta will ship out a lot of wheat.



From the Peace River country comes reports that weather has been cool and showery, with some snow on the Grande Prairie subdivisions causing grain to lodge badly, and warm, dry weather is needed.

With an increased run of cattle this week and with the quality decidedly plain trading has been fairly active and prices ruled level with those of a week ago. Good quality stocker and feeder cattle are in demand and bringing prices practically on a line with killing cattle.

The hog market has ruled quite steady and has not been influenced by the upturn recorded in the United States.

Weekly Crop Report

Winnipeg, Aug. 17—Wheat cutting is now general over all except the more northerly areas of the grain growing region. The picture has week is one of wide variation, as although weather has been moderately warm and windy, damage from rust, hail and drought has made a mottled picture on a crop which earlier on promised so well. Rust crops are by far as affecting this year's crop, has practically terminated except on a few very late fields situated on the northerly fringes of the infected area. The common bread wheat will have a considerable amount of outrun grade from No. 4 to feed and in many districts fields will not pay for binder twine. Some cutting and in some districts threshing. Is now in full swing and this crop should give a very satisfactory outturn this year. Hail storms in as Rockyford in the south to Viking, Holden and Mayerthorpe in the north have damaged several thousand acres to score from 25 to 75 per cent according to the weekly crop report of the Agriculture Department, C.N.R.

Clear and Hot

Manitoba weather has been clear and hot, and cutting is well advanced, while some threshing machines are commencing to hum. Dirmon extends south and central Manitoba will produce a fair sample and a moderate yield but it is impossible to estimate what the common wheat outrun will be as yields vary from nothing to 15 bushels per acre.

In Northern Manitoba, in the Dauphin, Swan River territories, rust damage is now estimated from 15 to 60 per cent, with little danger up to coarse grains, although coarse grain straw will be considerably lowered in feed value for the winter.

Along the Lewnan, Avonlea, Grasselbourg, Central Butte, Riverhurst, Bengough subdivisions in Saskatchewan weather has been warm and showery. Crop damage by rust is variable and, added to this, several heavy hail storms have caused material damage to several thousands of acres and where farmers are partly insured only about is now being cut for feed. ## Just Five Minutes

BY HELEN LANGWORTHY

Officer O'Day looked puzzled when a sleek town car slid to a stop in front of the Martin Jewelry company and the chauffeur sat woodenly indifferent while the car's other occupants fumbled with the door handle. Officer O'Day took huge steps across the sidewalk to open the door himself.

An attractive young woman met his glance with startled eyes and a quick flush.

"Thank you so much," she murmured.

The store was deserted except for Mr. Martin and the saleswoman bent over a ledger. Mr. Martin hurried forward to wait upon the woman.

"I'd like to see some diamond rings," she said.

Mr. Martin glanced at the woman curiously. So many of his patrons nowadays were likely to wear last slightly shabby clothes. He noticed that this customer's fashionable tan coat and hat looked of new, and expensive. Even the matching parasol with its curved handle, appeared unused. Wherefore Mr. Martin placed his most expensive stock of diamonds on the counter.

A hungry smile lit up the woman's face as she selected a ring with perhaps the largest diamond in the display. She tried it on.

"You know," she confided in a husky voice, "I made some money, a wise investment, and I decided I'd spend a diamond."

"An excellent idea; excellent," Mr. Martin said, trying to appear nonchalant. She raised her hand to see the diamond closely. At that instant the loop of the parasol slid off her arm and it hit the floor with a muffled thud. Color rose in the woman bent to retrieve it.

"Those other rings," she said, said. "I wonder if I might care for one of them."

A worried frown came to Mr. Martin's face. He wanted desperately to sell the large diamond. With anxious eyes he watched her finger the two largest diamonds in one after another. Mr. Martin would have been more concerned had he been able to see the other side of the counter.

Slowly, very carefully, the woman's left hand slid down the handle of her parasol, down to the framework, and dropped the big diamond among the folds.

The instant that it dropped the woman slid the other rings into a small pile.

"After all," she said, with a deprecating smile, "I really don't know which I like best." She pulled off the ring she had worn in an hour or two, when I have decided."

That had been almost too easy, she thought. There had been a question in her mind whether she could place the diamonds in a pile. But now—they were definitely theirs. She walked slowly a few feet. Confidence now, nothing could go wrong. Jim, and Jim's taxi, ready to speed away.

Mr. Martin was busy with her on his side of the counter.

Officer O'Day turned short when she saw a display of beaded bags. "Oh, aren't they adorable!" Instantly Mr. Martin was placing a half dozen on the counter.

Officer O'Day, who prided himself on his observation, watched the woman said doubtfully that she thought she'd look first there in the car would be fuming with nervousness. They had planned that she would take only a few minutes.

Then she would take a taxi and Jim would pick her up. Jim would exchange their appearance, the money in the garage would be rushing thru the night. Jim, and Jim's taxi, would be gone.

Five minutes and five minutes and Jim's uneasiness. Leisurely she chose the bags, compared them. There was one, dark red, that caught that she seemed to prefer. When Officer O'Day had examined it and it lay at the bottom of her purse.

She heard herself murmur things about how she'd look first there and would be back after all. Once more she glanced at Mr. Martin's face. Slightly more than five minutes had passed since the woman entered the bags. Her heart beat a little fast-

But still she talked pleasantly to her. Martin as she walked to the door. And then, involuntarily, she took a deep breath.

Then little rain! Mr. Martin said behind her.

She hesitated with the door partly open when Officer O'Day came to her rescue. "Are smiling down at her. "Just an April shower, only started this morning. Better wait," and then reached for her parasol. "Here you are."

"No, oh, no," the woman said and her voice sounded strangely excited. "I'll wait a while. I'll ask Officer O'Day to get me a taxi."

Officer O'Day would never have it known that as little a thing as Lady's parasol could cause him to yield to him.

"Oh, I'll see fix it," he said confidently and pulled the parasol from the woman's convulsive grip.

While waiting for a taxi, the woman behind several scenes the next instant: Patrick O'Day raising the parasol, peering at it. Then he pulled off a beaded bag as it hit the sidewalk and the lighter tinkle of a diamond ring as it struck. Then the woman's amazed expression on the officer's face; Mr. Martin yelling hoarsely and Jim, the rat, pulling away from the curb, roaring down the street, alone.

BUTTER AND EGGS HIGHER IN PRICE

Double Rolls Sell For 55 Cents And Eggs 27c Per Dozen

A sharp increase in the price of farm commodities was noticeable on the market today, more especially in the prices of butter and eggs, both of which saw higher prices with butter selling at 55c for two pounds and eggs advanced to 27c per dozen.

Despite the intense heat the market was well patronized, both purchasing citizens and farmers displaying their produce, complaining of the humidity.

The addition of floral displays and cut flowers helped to beautify the place. No change in prices was noticed on the outside market. One interesting was the object of much discussion from a number of children, it being eventually purchased by a little girl for the sum of 30 cents.

The various quotations on today's market were:

FARMERS ARE BUSY REAPING HARVEST

Lonsdale—The farmers are busy reaping their harvest of grain which is a heavy one this year, while locally the corn and potato crops are also heavy.

The housewives have also been very busy canning raspberries and huckleberries as there was an abundance of both.

Mrs. Lindsay Bell, of Toronto, has been enjoying some holidays with her father, Mr. John Dowdell.

Mrs. Jack McCullough is returned to Toronto, after spending two weeks with friends.

Reverend Mr. Bowerman has been in the hospital for throat treatment.

Mrs. Harry McCullough entertained a number of friends on Saturday afternoon.

Last report from Mr. Stewart McCullough is he is cheerful and comfortable.

Mrs. Kenneth Lawrens has returned home from Detroit after spending a few days at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harry McCullough. She was accompanied by her sister, Miss Lena McCullough.

Mrs. Harry McVickers is at present visiting his sister Mrs. Hollingsworth, Cape Vincent, who has been ill and is improving slowly.

Splendid progress has been done in this part of the country from the severe wind storm that passed over so recently. The corn, and the grain were an entire loss and where the trees did not blow down, many lost many miles away.

Rev. H. Clark, pastor in charge of the village church has gone to his cottage home in the summer resort where he spends his holidays and friends wish him a happy pleasant holiday time.

Aerial Hearse Brings Bodies From Arctic to Civilization

Point Barrow, Alaska, Aug. 17 —Wrapped in snow-white linen, the bodies of Will Rogers and Wiley Post are safely resting today aboard an airplane piloted by Joe Crosson, ready for the flight from Brockett Mountains to Fairbanks.

A dozen white soldiers and one of Eskimo gathered on the Glenlake Arctic shore while the bodies were laid in the plane.

Fifteen miles south on the tundra of Point Barrow other Eskimos arranged for their own use the scattered fragments of Post's and Rogers' airplane in which the actor-humorist and the famous flier plunged to their deaths in a fog on Monday three days ago.

The additional floral displays and cut flowers helped to beautify the place. No charge in prices was noticed on the outside market. One interesting was the object of much discussion from a number of children, it being eventually purchased by a little girl for the sum of 30 cents.

Point Barrow, Alaska, Aug. 17 (AP)—an aerial hearse waited here today to bore the bodies of Will Rogers and Wiley Post from the Arctic to civilization over the rolling throngs back home.

A plane sent from Juneau arrived to transport the remains of the noted pair, who died two weeks ago in the Brockett Mountains, through the sky after painfully soaring from the snowy wastes.

The planes will head for Fairbanks, Alaska, and then to the kingly humorist and his aviator companion, accorded farewell honors by the people of the north country.

Wiley Post, townsfolk, grizzled sourdoughs and the only witnesses of the tragedy, scientists and others joined in offering aid and expressions of regret.

Joe Crosson, Post's Alaskan friend and an aviator too, and Robert Ellsworth, companion of Sir Hubert Wilkins' Arctic submarine expedition through the Brockett Mountains and thru' the Wiseman tundra was yesterday to take the bodies back to civilization.

Warned Against Fog

It was Crosson, veteran of unnumbered Alaskan flights, who had them goodbye at Fairbanks and then headed into the fatal cloud bank of the fog at Point Barrow.

Mrs. Will Rogers, widow of Post and Rogers, whose names were known throughout the world, had only been behind the Presbyterian Mission Hospital at Barrow on the long journey from Brockett Mountains. Mr. Henry W. Grist, "mission surgeon, and Charles Brower, pioneer trader in the Arctic," prepared them for the journey here.

In the same warehouse last May the bodies of 14 Eskimo victims of the influenza epidemic were laid out in plain board coffins.

Brower was the man whom Rogers said he was flying to Barrow to buy furs for his wife when he operated a whaling station and fur trading post on the lonely northernmost tip of Alaska.

Post's pontoon equipped ship in which the celebrated little Orkhideo globe girdler and the world famous actor, humorist and philosopher met death, was found by the Eskimo, say in fragments on the bank of a shallow stream 15 miles south of here.

Rogers' Favorite

The heroic impact as the ship fell in the beginning of a takeoff was mutilated it. It appeared the exact cause of the crash would never be determined. Natives with whom Post talked after landing to get instructions to Point Barrow said the ship lifted its nose "like a duck" and the 550-horsepower motor missed fired.

The plane fell off on one wing, then ploughed nose first into the fog.

A wing struck the ground and the ship turned a pontoon tore into the earth and the heavy motor broke from its supports and lurched back upon the flier and his companion.

In Baltimo, breathless from 15 miles of running across the tundra, Eskimos sent first word of the crash to Barrow.

Post plane blow up. Two men dead," the Eskimo mumbled to Staff Sergeant Stanley G. Morgan, Army Signal Corps wireless operator.

Hastily mustering a party Morgan engaged a fast motorboat and set out in the gathering darkness from Walakpi, tiny native settlement on the delta, where the tragedy occurred.

Reception Committee

His reception was slowed by floe ice.

Eskimos already had removed Rogers' body from the wreckage but Morgan found that to use ropes to pull the shattered plane apart before Post's body could be lifted from beneath the motor in two feet of icy water.

The bodies and personal effects taken from the plane were placed in a cabin and covered with Barrow.

Now, to the westward, governors fully cancelled arrangements for a giant reception. Rogers had said "Alaska is my home." His flight toward Alaska he wanted to rope a few steers and become citizen Rogers of deer ready.

Running side, fishing apparently were uppermost in Post's mind in making his plans for the trip which ended in death. He called it his "tiger hunt" in Siberia, just a short hop away. Starting 6ea from Nome Rogers bought a pair of trousers and shoes for the flight toward Alaska he wanted to rope a few steers and become citizen Rogers of deer ready.

Post's last flight was expected to be a long one, virtually without hazards as compared with the setting trail blazing that won him fame.

MUNICIPALITIES ARE ORGANIZED

Conservatives Effect Organization For Coming Election

Deseronto Conservatives completed organization on Friday evening when a meeting committee was appointed under the direction of Mr. George A. Reid, organizer, Belleville, to decide who was chairman of each polling sub-division, E. P., D. A. Payne, K.C., and Mr. Reid. The newly elected president is L. McCullough. Those present left with the conviction of present day problems and the local organization Mr. Deseronto would give a substantial majority for Mr. W. T. Timmon, the Conservative candidate.

At Sidney Town hall on Tuesday night the organization was thoroughly organized in the Conservative cause. Representatives of the township association was in the chair and addresses were given by J. F. Hill, M.P., Frankford, Graham of Trenton and G. A. Reid of Belleville. Refreshments followed and the speakers spoke optimistically of the outlook in the coming general section.

At a meeting which crowded the hall in Trenton on Friday night at which Howard Graham presided, warns and polls were thoroughly organized under direction of ex-Mayor George A. Reid. Speeches were Mr. Reid, Howard Graham, Eben James and R. J. E. Graham of Belleville. Predictions in the result of the election and in the return of Mr. Timmon to the Commons was expressed by the speakers.

Mrs. Bessie Redner, age 70 years, resident of the Trenton district, died in the Belleville General Hospital Friday evening, August 16th. She had been a patient in the hospital for about two weeks.

FREDERICK RAWSON

Many friends in Belleville will regret to learn of the death in the Kingston General Hospital on this Saturday, Aug. 17th of Frederick Rawson of 324 Bleecker Avenue, this city. He had been in failing health for some time and had been undergoing treatment in Kingston.

The late Mr. Rawson, who was in his 56th year, was born in Nottingham, England, his parents being the late Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Rawson. Eleven years ago he came to Belleville from St. Catharines and was employed by the Canada Wire and Rug Line, which he satisfactorily operated up to the time of his death. He was a good citizen and was held in high regard by a large circle of friends and acquaintances. In religion he was a member of Emmanuel Church.

During the Great War he served overseas with the 2nd Brigade, 6th Battery, Canadian Field Artillery and of recent years he took an active part in the work of the Canadian Legion, being associated with Post 39. Fraternally he was a member of Hamilton Lodge No. 383, A. F. and A. M.

Surviving him are his widow, who was Miss Ivy Hartigan prior to her marriage was also Amy Edwards; two daughters, Miss Elva and Miss Phyllis at home; one son, Fred Rawson at home; seven sisters, Mrs. R. Cooper, Mrs. James Sussex, Mrs. H. Pepper, Mrs. C. Huddleston and Mrs. G. Ashton, all of England; Mrs. W. J. Thompson, Winnipeg and Mrs. A. Spencer of St. Catharines.

Weddings

KOSTER—LA ROCHE

St. Michael's Church was the scene of a charming wedding Saturday morning at nine-thirty o'clock when Lois Lilian, daughter of Mrs. La Roche and the late Mr. Eugene La Roche, became the bride of Dr. Basil Mcdonald Koster, son of Mrs. Matthew Koster and the late Mr. Koster, of Toronto. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Fr. Kester, Basil, John, M. A., brother of the groom.

The bride, who was given in marriage by Mr. Copeland, of Toronto, made a lovely picture in her gown of white crepe with lace coat and carried a bouquet of Sweetheart roses and lariopsis.

Miss "Peggy" La Roche, sister of the bride, was bridesmaid and wore a dainty dress of powder blue lace and carried Briar roses with lariopsis.

Dr. Lajchford of Toronto, was groomsman. Mr. Neal McLellan and Mr. Ian Aitchinson acted as ushers.

Wedding music was played by Mrs. J. Grant and Mr. Harold Barrett sang "Because" and "Dolly".

After the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride on Geen and Mrs. Geen, Bridge Street West.

Later Dr. and Mrs. Koster left by motor on a wedding trip to Montreal and then to boat trip to the Saguenay, the bride traveling in a frock of navy blue with white accessories and corsage of white roses.

Upon their return they will take up residence in Kingston.

FOX—WILSON

The home of Mr. and Mrs. James S. Wilson, of West Huntingdon, was the scene of a pretty wedding on Saturday, August 17th, at 3 p.m., when their daughter, Gertrude Evelyn, was united in marriage to Mr. William Raymond Fox, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles L. Fox, Toronto, Ontario. The marriage ceremony was performed by Rev. Harold Turner, B.A., pastor of the United Church of Canada, Stirling, which took place on the lawn beneath an arch of evergreens trimmed with white gladioli and other summer flowers. The bride, who was given in marriage by the bride's father, wore a dress of white satin ribbon, and wore the gift of the groom, a white gold wrist watch set with diamonds. She was attended by her sister, Miss Vera Wilson, gowned in pink moss crepe with hat to match and white accessories, and carried a bouquet of pink and white gladioli tied with pink chiffon ribbon. The groom was supported by his brother, Mr. Percy Fox, of Toronto.

After the ceremony the guests repaired to the dining room which was prettily decorated in pink and white streamers and flowers, where a dainty wedding lunch was served by six girl friends of the bride.

The bride's table was centred with a three-tiered wedding cake adorned with the marriage altar and vase. Rev. Mr. Turner proposed the toast to the bride which was responded to by the groom and other toasts followed. The groom's gift to the bridesmaid was a Kodak; to the groomsman an onyx ring; and to the pianist a gold wrist watch bracelet.

Later in the afternoon the young couple left by motor for Muskoka and Lake of Bays. For travelling the bride wore a brown maleban crepe suit with matching accessories. Returning home by way of Montreal and leaving in a few days for Sussex, New Brunswick, where they will spend the winter. The groom is a large army of gifts testified to the popularity of the bride and groom, among them being a six-piece silver tea service, a gift from the Raynor Construction Company, of which the groom is an esteemed employee. Guests from Toronto, Port Hope, Belleville, Madoc, Sterling and surrounding community numbering about fifty were in attendance.

Current Attractions at Local Theatres

What Local Theatre Managers Have to Say About Current Offerings

AT THE BELLE

Latest Rogers Comedy Turned Back Tuesday.

Will Rogers' fans all over the country are waiting for the laugh holiday that will give them their favourite star in "Doubting Thomas" coming to the Belle today and Monday, matinee daily, in which Will Rogers portrays one of the funniest roles he has yet attempted.

Advance reports have it that this Fox Film, produced by B. G. Dewhirst and directed by David Butler from the play "The Torch Bearers", by George Kelly, has had a rip-rocking effect on all the audiences of the theatres in which it has played.

Rogers portrays the role of a simple, home-loving sausage manufacturer whose home-life is suddenly tossed into a turmoil when an amateur impresario, Alison Skipworth (who played the same role on the stage) persuades his wife, Billie Burke, that she has been suppressed all of her married life and that she really belongs to the stage and her public.

Rogers' son, Frank Albertson, finds that his sweetie, Frances Grant, has the keenest dramatic flair, and soon has their troubles after wife and fiancee engage in a dramatic charity show which will force Belle theatre audiences to hold on to their seats.

Rogers finally effects a cure that will make America's favorite comedian well once more.

Sterling Holloway is a scream as the bungling second-effects man for the amateur play and the rest of the supporting cast which includes Patrick, John Qualen, Johnny Arthur, Helen Flint, Pedro Regas and T. Roy Barnes, are more than adequate in their roles.

The Grand Treats.

Three selected short treats have been assembled for exhibition with the same program including El Brendel and Phil Regan, the singing cyclone, in a funny and tuneful musical comedy in beautiful Technicolor entitled "Old Man Rhythm", the News of the World, and "Mickey's Birthday Party" a very funny Mickey Mouse cartune.

Thrill and Fun Show.

For thrills, laughs, action and romance you must see "Devil Dogs of the Air" on the supporting bill for "Here Comes the Navy", featuring Pat O'Brien, Frank McHugh, James Cagney, Pat O'Brien, Margaret Lindsay and Frank McHugh, coming to the Belle Tuesday with a full line of laughs, "Devil Dogs Night at the Fite" featuring William Cargan, Patricia Ellis and Allen Jenkins'.

EMPLOYMENT AT PEAK AT TRENTON AIRPORT

With representatives of almost every building trade engaged, construction work now underway and in the various buildings at the R.C.A.F. Camp near Trenton is at present employing in excess of one thousand men. Approximately 75 carpenters, 50 painters, masons, plumbers and others are being given work there. Transportation to and from Belleville costs the men $1 per week, while meals may be obtained in the camp for the nominal sum of 75 cents. "All you want to eat," claim the local men.

Cleaning Service Quoted At The Capitol

Noel Coward, the man responsible for "Design for Living", "Cavalcade" and "Private Lives", three of the most popular motion pictures of the past five years at last turns motion picture actor himself to appear in the leading role of "The Scoundrel", that opens at the Capitol here on Monday.

Coward-actor, playwright, composer and generally conceded the most brilliant figure in the contemporary theatre-plays a literary Casanova in this sharp and satiric tale of decadence in the New York smart set.

He is a hollow, artificial and brilliant publisher, so accustomed to living at love with the unreal people who comprise his society that life fails to comprehend the realness of Julie Haydon, a young author's daughter with her heart's desire.

Coward takes her from the boy who really loves her, breaks her heart and sets her adrift in his cynical circle. He goes on an airplane trip to escape one of his mistresses and meets, and is reported killed. While his former friends are grieving their passing on the demise, he suddenly reappears among them to get fervent aid in Julie Haydon, the only real person he has ever known.

In a real, gripping climax, she learns at last it is not the real Coward who has returned, but his ghost, and realizes that he is dead until he had found someone to mourn him.

Besides Miss Haydon, three other women, who are featured cast in this engrossing screen story, Hope Williams, a Park Avenue socialite who specializes in sophisticated parties in musical comedy, Ernest Cossart of the speaking stage and Dorothy Tree, the deep-throated voice of the Fred Allen Radio broadcasts.

To thoroughly appreciate "The Scoundrel," it is essential that Capitol patrons see the picture from the very start. Time schedules of this feature will be found in the daily paper.

As an added attraction to this unusual cinema offering, the Ontario presents Al Mack and Dixie's gay and tuneful musical comedy, "Dixie Memories Reddy Rogers, will also be presented.

"Old Man Rhythm", is a campus musical comedy, with the usual varieties in plot and melody. Its keynote is the sparkling spontaneity of youth in the sparkling spontaneity of youth in the sparkling spontaneity of youth and the humorous relaxation of an old-timer who remembers nostalgically the atmosphere which tempts and inspires youth.

A clever cast and an ambitious production have been given this show with Buddy Rogers as the male lead and Nancy Carroll as the little role and such clever eye-fun makers as Edward Everett Horton, Grace Bradley, Joy Hodges and Frank Jenks.

There are six tuneful melodies written especially for the production and the supporting cast includes Lucien Hoen, Joe Jacobs and Donald Meek.

The attractive DuBarry silhouette will be given to every lady patron attending the Monday and Tuesday performances.

HEALTH INSTITUTE MEETING

The regular monthly meeting of the Stirling W.I. was held at the home of Mrs. John Wallace on Tuesday, August 13th. The meeting opened with singing of the National Anthem followed by the Lord's Prayer in unison. While in charge of the meeting "Institutes" and was read responsively.

The roll call was answered by a verse of Scripture containing the word "children."

Minutes of last meeting were read and adopted and a short discussion took place.

The devotional leaflet on "Circle Praying and Joyous Friends" was given by Mrs. Stanley Hagerman.

Hymn 21, "The Whole World was in His Hands" and scripture lesson by Mrs. Arthur Hall led in prayer and hymn No. 79 was sung.

Mrs. Campbell group leader No. 2 then took charge and gave the introductory leaflet on "Women's Work in Trinidad", several members assisting.

The rest of the meeting was given to the children as it was the Baby Band meeting.

Solos by little Mary Emmerson and Nina Dunning. Recitation by Franklin Hazard. Mrs. Arthur Hall read the children a very interesting story of the "Homes in China."

Collection $1.54.

The meeting closed with the Mizpah Benediction. Refreshments were served and a social time enjoyed after the meeting.

PLAINFIELD W.M.S.

The regular meeting of the Plainfield W.M.S. was held at the home of Mrs. C. Marshall with 13 children and 21 adults present. The meeting opened by all singing "How Mothers of Europe" followed by the Lord's prayer in unison. While in charge of the meeting "Institutes" and was read responsively.

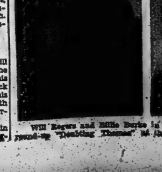
Mrs. Lindsay, Missionary Addresses Societies



Victoria—The Centre and Victoria W. M. S. held an open meeting on Thursday afternoon, Aug. 15 at Centre church with Ameliasburg and Massassaga Societies as visitors and several other ladies from the adjoining societies present. They were delightfully honored by having as their guest speaker Mrs. Gr. Lindsay, a returned missionary from Chentu China. Mrs. Lindsay is the daughter of the late Dr. Taylor of Wellington.

Mrs. Lindsay gave an outline of the life work that she and Dr. Lindsay have been doing in their twenty-eight years of service in China. She also exhibited photographs of their school, students and all different graduating classes in dentistry and nursing. Also beautiful pieces of satin embroideries which have been presented Dr. and Mrs. Lindsay personally by the students. Mrs. Lindsay's address is one that will long be remembered by all who were present and will create in each person a life of greater service to W.M.S. work.

Mrs. Darling of Ameliasburg, gave a short talk and Mrs. Gregg Tims gave an excellent paper on Temperance following by a duet by little Miss Winnifred and June Dehaney. The ladies of Centre and Victoria served refreshments. Collection amounted to $8.65.

Will Rogers and Billie Burke in a scene from his latest laugh riot comedy "Doubting Thomas" at the Belle today and Monday.

NEW YORK CLOSE

New York, Aug. 17 (AP)—Bullish forces continued in control of today's brief stock market.
The rails and utilities were again in the forefront of the upward push, although specialties and other groups participated. Profit taking here and there failed to do more than hold advances down to moderate proportions. The close was firm. Transfers approximated 1,100,000 shares.

TORONTO MINES, CLOSE

Toronto, Aug. 17 (CP)—Selling of Teck Hughes continued in heavy volume today with the price dropping to 3.85. About 13,000 shares were sold in the first hour of today's Toronto mining market.
The selling was reported to be coming mainly from New York.
Bralorne was off 10 cents, Wright Hargreaves 5 and Lake Shore half to 50. Moderate gains were registered by Sylvanite, Pickle Crow, God's Lake and Cariboo.
Bear Exploration continued to star with a gain of 3 cents, the price rising around 62 for a half-point gain. Granada and Kirkland held within a cent or two of the previous close and Premier at 1.44 was slightly stronger.
Base issues were steady but not for a loss of a couple of cents for Big Missouri and ¼ cent for Nevada.

TORONTO STOCKS — Close

Toronto, Aug. 17—The buying demand today was thin on Toronto Industrial share market in the closing session of the week due partly to Canada Day holiday, to cooler places than Toronto for the week-end.
Distillers-Seagrams and Walker's common held gains of about the previous close.
Recessions of ½ to ¾ were board-ed for International Petroleum, Imperial Oil and British American Oil. Brewery stocks were almost dormant and pipe utilities, a high-er price for United Fuel pfd. offset by a loss of ¼ point for Bell Telephone. Nickel was slightly heavy and Brazilian easy.
Loblaw B. sold off a fraction but recovered, Fanny Farmer also closed off, against the week, when it was unchanged. The Canada Packers issue did have a lack of preferred gaining 1¼ and the common ¼ on small trade.
Higher prices ruled for Gypsum, General Electric pfd. and Hamilton Bridge, Canada Cement issues for Canada Dredge, Dominion Coal pfd. and National Steel Car.

"TRUCE OF GOD" IS SUGGESTED

Labor Leader Says Another War Would Wreck Civilization

LONDON, Aug. 17.—(AP)—George Lansbury, leader of the Labor Opposition in the House of Commons viewed the danger of war as increasingly great because of impending arms race today and suggested religious leaders call a world conference for a "truce of God."
"Another great war would wreck civilization altogether," he said, "and religious heads should meet and call their governments to task for the blasphemy against the Creator and beings.
"There is no use talking disarmament or peace; they must get together and agree to bow to reason."

Produce Prices on Montreal Market

Montreal, Aug. 17—Butter and cheese markets were again a little easier yesterday. Eggs, potatoes and poultry showed little change from Thursday's prices. Demand was poor for butter and cheese causing the slightly easier tone. Egg receipts continued light, and a firm undertone was apparent. Potatoes remained at the week's low level.
The butter market was generally 30 1-4c to 30 3-4c for lb. for No. 1 in cariots or L.C.L. lots. Receipts, 132 boxes. Small lots to the retail trade were quoted at 31c to 31 1-2c for lb. for solids and 32-32 1-2c for prints.
The cheese market was 19 1-4c to 19 1-4c for No. 1 Quebecs and 19 1-2c for No. 1 Quebecs. Receipts, 4,811 boxes.
On the egg market graded shipments arriving in Ontario on L.C.L. lots were generally 27c for A-large, 26c for A-medium, 24c for B, and 18c for C. Receipts 236 cases. Small lots to the retail trade were quoted by wholesale jobbing houses as follows:

| | Cartons | Loose |
|---|---|---|
| A-large | 36c | 30c |
| A-1 medium | 35c | 29c |
| A-large | 31c | 27c |
| A-medium | 30c | 26c |
| B | 25c | 23c |
| C | 22c | 21c |

The cheese market ranged from 25c to 30 c per 40-lb bags for new Quebec stock.
Seasonal poultry is quoted by jobbers to the retail trade as follows: Fowl, A grade, 24c; B grade being 3c per lb.

| | Per lb. |

Errors by Radios Assist Ponies In Winning Last Scheduled Game in City by 2-0 Count

Wilkins Hurled Best Game Since Joining Local Club

JAMIESON A 'JINX'

Infield For Kingston Plays Fine Ball in The Pinches

In one of the nicest pitchers' battles of the season the Belleville Stewart-Warners concluded their final game of the league's 1935 Central Ontario Baseball League schedule with a toss at the heads of the Kingston Ponies by the score of 2 to 0 with "Tommy" Jamieson, Kingston's veteran hurler, throwing a two-bit ball, and applying the whitewash brush. Inability to hit was the cause of the downfall of the locals, and error on their part entered right into the picture. "Bud" Wilkins, diminutive moundsman, yielded seven safe blows and only one earned run was chalked up against him.

For six innings the two clubs battled without a sign of a run but in the seventh, eighth and ninth Kingston got a run each, their 9th inning counter being the only earned run. With the exception of a brace of errors into the path of Belleville, the teams played a fine brand of ball after the Ponies had standout, accepting seven chances in centre field without a bobble. Sandwiched in between the latter frames Wilkins also assisted his own cause with seven fielding chances. Ford was credited with two errors and handled six chances behind the slabsmoke charmer; one of his errors being when the sun bothered Smith's view of a pop-fly which fell in the field.

The Kingston infield played stellar ball; Jamieson had in eight put-five nice assists and a putout, and starter Ford handled six chances and handled six chances perfectly. The outfield covered acres of ground to gather in eight fly outs. Centre fielder Grey with a double and Kerr with a single were the only Bellevillebatters to connect safely. Hewitt Smith, Kingston third baseman let the hitters with a triple and single in three at-bats. Joyce followed with a double and a single. The Radios failed the pitcher miserably, and had only base runners left on three of the nine innings, Grey in the first, being the only Belleville runner to reach third base.

Scoring opened in the seventh, Clancy who had singled, moving to Quinn and went to third on a fielder's choice and scored on Ford's error. Compeau opened the eighth with his lone hit, was sacrificed by H. Smith and scored on Clancy's single near second. In the ninth Joyce opened with a double and with two out went to third as Arniel hit to short and the ball was fast in the sun on his perfect peg to first. Smith being blinded and the ball rolled far into foul territory. Joyce pitched great ball in the fifth when he had runners on third and second with one out, forcing Quinn to roll to Ford and striking out Arniel.

The win elevates Kingston to just one game behind Peterboro; these clubs having two postponed games to play in which to decide who will meet Belleville in the semi-finals.

SEMI - FINALS KNOTTED UP

Out-Intell. And London Lunch Win in Mercantile Loop

The semi-final play-offs in the local Mercantile baseball league were all knotted up even-stephen last night, when the London Lunch nine defeated Recreations 10 to 6, while the Ontario Intelligencer trimmed the Simpsons by a 13 to 9 margin. The losers in last night's contests had previously won a pair of games in the mercantile play-downs but last night's reverses forces the issue to a third and final game to determine which of the remaining clubs shall continue into the Mercantile finals.

At the Alemite Field the London Lunch gained revenge over the Recreations as Art Cole pitched five hit ball to win the honors of the night. Besides hurling a good brand of ball Cole netted his mates aid for a circuit blow, two doubles and a single out of five official ries. Semark also had his fair the winning with Cornell hitting a homer for the losers. The London Lunch nine garnered seven runs in the first innings and never were headed. After a fairly initial inning Art Jerry Hurley settled away to pitch an excellent brand of ball for the Recreations, but the first inning obstacle was too high to overcome.

At the College Field the Ontario Intelligencer nine batted the Simpsons when they kicked in with a fast triple play in the fifth and a heavy hitting in the ninth to slap relief by the Simpson squad, Clean, hard hitting won the game for the "printers" as they cuffed the Simpson hurler's delineries profusely. The final games in the Mercantile semi-final play-downs will continue on Monday night between the same four clubs, the eventual winners entering into the league finals later. Harris pitched a fine brand of ball for the winners.

Dizzy Dean First Hurler to Win 20 Games This Season Defeats Giants With 3 Hits

Men of Terry Shut-out Dean Mows Them Down in Order

CRUCIAL SERIES

Detroit And Yankees Open Important Series in Detroit

By HUGH S. FULLERTON, Jr.
Associated Press Sports Writer.

While the Giants and Cardinals battled up their still highly important series today a new "crucial" battle was under way, involving Detroit Tigers, American League leaders, and their leading challengers, New York Yankees.

The clash in the big junior circuit, where the Tigers hold a six game lead, can hardly compare with the National League battle in which the Cards scored a stirring 1-0 triumph behind the remarkable Dizzy Dean yesterday to keep the excitement at a high pitch, but should either Detroit or the Yanks take the series decisively it may prove to be the turning point in the pennant race.

The Cardinal triumph not only evened up the series in the prospection for today's final struggle but it again reduced New York's lead to two games and gave St. Louis a more definite hold on second place as Chicago dropped a 2-1 decision to Brooklyn in a battle of hurling and fielding.

For the elder Dean, it was a highly gratifying personal triumph. Not only did he beat the Giants for the first time this season, but he gave them out with three puny hits and became the first pitcher of the year in either league to win 20 victories.

The Cubs, returning to their place a half game behind St. Louis, lost an odd mound duel between George Barnhart and Charley Root when Jimmy Bucher opened the home half of the ninth with a homer. Both the other runs came through boundary belts hit by Stan Hack and Woody Cousinau.

American League

Both the Tigers and Yankees took lickings in preparation for their important meetings. Detroit went down 8-1 before Washington, when Bump Hadley held the league leaders to four blows. The Yanks loosed away two chances to win from Cleveland and finally came out on the short end of an 8-5 score.

Chicago White Sox finally ended their seven-game losing streak when young Vernon Kennedy outlasted Wes Ferrell, who was gunning for his 20th victory, to win a 14-inning struggle with Boston Red Sox 4-3. With Sugar Cain whiffing 13 of his former teammates, the Browns broke a string of eight of losses by trimming the Athletics 5-2. It was the first shutout for Cain in the American League this season.

After winning three straight games, the Senators dropped a double header to Cincinnati, 3-1 and 4-2, but Pittsburgh-Philadelphia game was rained out.

AAJMAAS WIN SENIOR TITLE

Defeat Young Canadas in Fifth And Deciding Game 10-6

Pitching seven bit ball, Johnnie Bawden hurled the local Aajmaa A.C. into the Senior City softball championship, when his teammates pounded out a ten to six victory over the Young Canadas in the fifth and final play-off game for the community softball honors. Eddie Schreiber, who had twice prior humbled the Aajmaas in the play-offs, was Manager Bartiga's pitching choice, but he was pounded from the hilltop in the third frame as the Bowler-Bawden-leg aggregation slapped heavy knocks and scored six runs in the first three frames. The Aajmaas victory not only gives the Aajmaas the city softball championship, but also the right to represent Belleville in the intermediate "A" class O.A.S.A. play-downs, if certain difficulties can be clarified amicably.

Extra base hits by the Aajmaas entered profusely into the Aajmaa victory, Kerr and Bawden pounding out home runs as H. Bawden clouted two doubles as did Crisfield while Andy Gray helped himself to a double and a single. T. Miller, Tennis and Barriga were the extra hitters for the losing Young Canadas' lineup. Tennis was the big swatsmith of the night with a homer and two doubles to his credit.

The winners gave their pitcher air-tight support in victory and well deserved honors they lodged on Johnny. The Aajmaas are to now enter the O.A.S.A. play-downs and are scheduled to meet the Trenton shinneys in Trenton on Monday night with the return game being played in Belleville next Wednesday night. The line-ups:—Aajmaas—Bawden 2b; Tuttle cf; Henri 3b; Cook ss; Murray c; Palmer rf; H. Bawden lf; Alexander 1b; Robinson. Browne lb; Schrieder and Brant p.

FOXBORO EVENS SERIES AT LATTA

Visitors Score 3-1 Win to Put Selves Back in The Running

Playing sterling ball behind the pitching of Ed. Pothier, Foxboro defeated Latta at Latta by the score of 3-1. The game was a pitchers' battle between Callaghan of Latta and Ashley of Foxboro, Callaghan doubled his five by allowing but three strikeouts as against five for Ashley, but better support in the field won for Foxboro. No score was registered until the fourth innings, when Foxboro pushed across a counting in; Latta evened up in the fifth when Callaghan scored after the Latta fielder lost the ball in the sun.

This evens up the series one each. The next game will be at Foxboro on Labor Day afternoon.

Umpires — Plate, J. Maracle; Bases, D. Thomas.

Lineup:

Latta—C. Hall, J. Gowe, A. Hall, T. Young, J. Marsh, S. Vance, O. Parks, L. Shannon, K. Callaghan.

Foxboro—E. Ashley, A. Seeley, A. Gay, K. Ketcheson, B. Johnson, M. Longwell, G. Wall, H. Ketcheson, I. Guay.

CURRENT SPORT

DAY BY DAY

We are in receipt of a letter from Newton Thompson, secretary and treasurer of the C.O.B.L., in which he suggests the return of the "all-star" game to the Central League this year. Mr. Thompson points out that a special reason for this suggestion, naturally—the Toronto Amateur Baseball Association has definitely intimated they do not intend sending out a league winner into the provincial play-downs this year, therefore an "all star" game played at the conclusion of the C.O.B.L. season would not only materially assist the league winners, but add a colorful atmosphere to the entire loop. Mr. Thompson has suggested that the game be played in the city that wins the 1935 C.O.B.L. championship or in Belleville in the event of this city being practically the hub of the loop, insofar as travelling is concerned.

Back in the palmy days of the Central League, over a decade ago, the league moguls always staged such a game at the close of the season of the regular league play-offs or when the carnival spirit was running high. Players were declared. Secretary Thompson only passed the suggestion along after talking it over with President Max Swanston recently, but it is the opinion expressed that an "all-star" game would materially assist the players, clubs and league, especially the latter as a general. As Peterboro, Kingston and Belleville are still very much in the running for the league beating three "all-star" teams would be quite a feat, to say the least. Peterboro won the honors, then the picked nine of Belleville, Cobourg and Kingston, while if Bowmanville could be induced to send a representative from the remaining three clubs. We would appreciate the views of our readers regarding the fans relative to these three proposed "all-star" games. In the meantime, Secretary Thompson and President Swanston are going ahead with their plans for their all-star game. May they live to see realization, as we believe the proposal is not merely their suggestions, that's all.

When the Aajmaa A.C. won the Senior City Softball championship last night they also annexed 500 cigarettes that were donated by the proprietors of the National Billiard parlor to the league winners.

Peterboro's sport scrivener is bewailing the fact that box lacrosse has gone to the bow-wows in Lindsay and has folded up like the proverbial tent. With down against the Littlock pen-pusher expect, didn't the Peterboro and Lindsay lacrosse moguls make a deal ear to a Belleville entry in their loop and then refuse to grant the same favor to the fans' wind-pipe game after game? Had the Peterboro lacrosse enthusiasts been a little far seeing they might have done considerable negotiating with the moguls over the Bay of Quinte sector, where there is always room in and around Roly Glover's stamping ground. With box lacrosse on its last municipal-ity and also north of Peterboro it looks as though they killed the bird that laid the golden egg themselves and have no person to blame but a few in their own midst.

When Red Williams was forced to be credited with last night's C. O. B. L. pitching honors he was scoring the first Yankee run in the third inning, starting a rally that won the game. Ryan wrote the famous "they-can't-beat-us" telegram to Bill Terry that

BLONDY-RYAN, AS YANKEE, UP TO HIS OLD TRICKS

Bravo, Blondy! It's Blondy Ryan the old Giant sparkplug, up to his old tricks, as we see him here making his first appearance in a New York Yankee uniform against Philadelphia Athletics at the Yankee stadium. He is shown scoring the first Yankee run in the third inning, starting a rally that won the game. Ryan wrote the famous "they-can't-beat-us" telegram to Bill Terry that checked a Giant collapse in 1933, and started a spurt that clinched the pennant. The Yankees beat the A's 3 to 2 in this game on the inspiration of Ryan's rally.

BEAT STELLA'S MARK

BUFFALO BISONS COME TO FRONT

Only One Game Behind Syracuse And Three Back of Royals

By The Associated Press

Buffalo Bisons, apparently taking their measure of the pitchers off, are making things uncomfortable for the pace-setting Montreal Royals.

Bisons have won their last nine out of 12 games and are only one game behind Syracuse and three behind the Royals. The Shawkeys-men, however, have won two less games than Buffalo and if they bowl them over today will move up ahead of them in the standing.

The second place Syracuse last night 9-1 as Ken Ash notched his 15th victory of the season. He fanned 10 Cana and Wright going the route for the losers on six strikes. It was the third straight defeat for the Chiefs.

Buffalo staged one big inning, scoring all their runs in the fifth with Ed Brandt, Bears, the big freak home run by Fresco Thompson with the bases loaded featured the rally.

Manager Ike Boone needed a good pitcher, and he got one Monday night when he sent Al Lyons to the mound for the Bisons. Lyons was master of the situation as he checked the Leafs with a 5-4 over Albany Senators in 10 innings.

Boone went in for Frank Nekola in the eighth with the bases jammed. He walked, forcing in a run. In the 10th he smashed a double against the right field wall to score Bill Brandt with the run with the winning run.

Rochester and Rochester split a doubleheader, with the Wings taking the first game 5-3 and the Orioles the nightcap 2-0.

WITH THE LAWN BOWLERS

by McElheran & Watkin

In a game of doubles on Thursday evening Mrs. D. McBride and C. Bateman played C. McBride and C. Dolan, the game finished 6 up 20-26.

In a game of singles Newt. Wilbur beat C. J. McIntosh 18-18.

The winners of the ladies' games Thursday were Mrs. O. J. McIntosh, Mrs. Watkin, Mrs. Rutherford and Mrs. McBride skip.

Slitting and Decorcio will be our guests on Monday night. The greens will all be in operation and about 30 of our members will be unable to play.

Our team that journeyed to Kingston on Wednesday won first game and have packed the game said it was hard to get going but when they did get started the Tipping of that fair village for a ride 14-1 and that is something. The team was Mayor, F. Hawley, Rod Mitchell and C. Salman skip.

Labour Day is only two weeks away, get patted up next week's figure and phone your president so he knows who are playing.

In the men's doubles last night Dolan took both, Jas. Bland and E. Thompson won 2 games, high Jas. skiping and A. Wannamaker and H. Hales won one game, high Ab. skiping.

'YESTERDAY'S STARS'

(By the Associated Press)

Dizzy Dean, Cardinal Shut out Giants with three hits and fanned five for season's 20th victory.

Ash, Syracuse Ace—Hits single in 14th drove in Luke Sewell with run that beat Red Sox.

George Earnshaw and Jim Rucker, Dodgers—Earnshaw held Cubs to five hits, Rucker won game with ninth inning homer.

Merritt Cain, Browns—Struck out 13 for season's American League record in beating Athletics.

Alex Kampouris and Ernie Lombardi, Reds—Kampouris hit homer in first game against Braves; Lombardi made three hits and knocked in winning run in second.

Buzz Arlett, Senators—Limited Tigers to four hits.

Earl Averill, Indians—Drove in four runs against Yankees with homer and single.

Coach Allen Meagher is taking his Kiwanis junior ball team to Picton today for an exhibition ball game versus the Picton interme-diates. The local juniors were to have launched on their O.B.A.A. play-down series today, but owing to the fact that Oshawa, the Peterboro tied, the provincial play-downs have been postponed for a few days.

SINISTER SHADOW

by JOHN GOODWIN

"You lied for me, Sonia!" he said and it was with an effort that he kept his voice steady.

"What else could I do? Sit there and give you away to that man? There'd have been only one thing for him to do, if I had. Listen, while I tell you what's happened since then!"

She told him, as briefly as she could and omitting nothing vital, all that had passed between Sir and Sergeant Moss, both at the inn and at Elsa's Hill House. He listened to the end.

"Only skill missing! And they're looking for dam Barber?" he said, briefly in my favour."

He drew a deep breath.

"The police—they're a tough nut to crack when it comes to that. At the end of it, there's only one answer, Sonia. You've saved my life."

"Brian, how did you get left in for this deadly business? Frankly, look-ing after me—you took too much care of me and too little of your-self. But you went last night, and left me in the dark, you said me I was to know nothing! But how was impossible. How could I know noth-ing? I had to answer questions. You weren't there to speak for your self . . . I did the best I could . . ."

"Better to tell them the whole truth—but how could I judge what the truth was? I was playing for time—I saw the alibi standing out, as plain as daylight. Playing for safety . . . safety for you. Brian He's left the room open. You can safely go back on all that, if you want to. For you to say if you'll accept it or not. Don't unless you have to! It's up to you."

He nodded.

"It's up to me, Sonia, there's no other way for me. I stand by it. And Sonia, I'm just thanking my stars . . . that you should care for such a fellow as me. You only back I ever had in my life. I'll tell you later, what I think of you." he re-reached for the starter. "And now I've got to get along and face this out—see it through."

"Wait!" she said. "Brian, you have to put your cards on the table and see what happened at the mine. . . ."

"How?"

"Before we move from here, won't go into this thing blindfold. I want the facts, the truth!"

Per Brian Barton hesitated.

He told her, briefly, of his en-counter with Cooke above the mine way cutting.

"Bannister . . . I ran into him, he was on his way back from the mine, and he was alone. I met Bannister and we were both pretty well wrought up . . . I was the last person he expected to see out there. When I stepped him, he cursed me . . . swore I was spying in him. The most scathing half hour he went for me with the butt of his whip. . . .

"I was seeing red, too; I'd had all I could stand. Almost. Of course I'd no idea of killing him; that wasn't the sort of settlement I wanted with Bannister. When he lighted me up he took my hand to him, pulled him out of the sad-die. He hit the wire fence and crashed down. Fell on to the line . . . that's what I did to Ban-nister.

"I know," said Sonia under her breath. "I saw you."

Brian gasped.

"How me? What do you mean? How could you?

"I wasn't fifty yards away—on the far side of the line. . . ."

She told him what she had seen in the glimmer of the lightning; that black nightmare scene that had been with her ever since. He caught his breath and stiffened in his seat.

"It's worse than I thought, then. You—why you're an eye-witness!" he said.

"Yes. The only one. If they call that to account . . . Brian, what do you say? . . . But no can! I knew all about that—I want to hear what happened afterwards."

"I'm coming to it. Only one thing for me to do—carry on for Ban-nister. Do what I could for him. . . . Then—didn't seem a chance . . . I wasn't killed . . . a fall like that, and the screen shook me. I'd made a decided fault just afterwards. There was no getting over into the cutting. Had to face to the line round. I ran for it, till I made the gully where the old mine is. . . ."

He stopped short.

"Oh, I see!" said Sonia. "You got to the mine, what did you find there—who did you see?"

It seemed to her that he was hes-itating again.

"No one. Whom should I see? Wasn't anybody there."

"What? Brian, look at him. You're sure of that Brian? Don't tell me how much hangs on it, be sure!"

"I'm telling you Sonia," he an-swered deliberately, "I saw no one whatever from the time I left Ban-nister over the bluff until you found me. Now, that I've made sound the difference if I had; except that there'd be another witness against me."

"I was in such a state, with the shock and everything, that I blun-dered—missed the gully just beyond the mine with beads down on the rails—somehow I got right on past it. I started to come back but took for it—but I didn't. I thought better of that."

"Most I confess to you Sonia—it occurred to me to make a bolt for the ground that mine . . . even if I didn't see him. And naturally the only thing to do was to go back for help. An hour earlier, I was all for a settlement with Barber. But just imagine having it out with that fellow as such a time—with a man's death on my hands as I believed it and as I knew myself. That thought . . .

"I had to face this thing by my-self . . . and for myself—and you. There wasn't much time to think. I just shoved straight along, mean-ing to get down on to the track at the end of the cutting where it's easy.

"But when I'd covered a hundred yards or so I thought—and if Bannister's crippled but not killed . . . though it didn't seem possible—I've no right to deprive him of a chance of getting to him—no time for going all that way round. I went to it, and then, the cutting was a good bit lower and not so deep. A gleam of the lightning showed it to me; it was quite climbable—the short cut down would save time. I swung myself over the fence and tackled it.

"It daylight I could have done it easily. In the dark, excited as I was, and dead tired, I made a mess of it. Missed my footing halfway down, and slithered down, hung on again, grabbed with my hands—and I must have dislodged a chunk of rock that struck me, for I slumped down on my head; I've a thicklish skull or I would have been my finish. It knocked me out, anyway.

"I landed in a heap at the bot-tom. . . . And that's all I knew, till I found myself lying in the mud with my head in your lap. . . ."

Sonia! Only—I'd have given my head with the back thrown in, if you hadn't been there—"

Her hand tightened on his.

"Now Sonia, let's have your end of it—quick! I want to know how long it was before you reached me! It must have been sheer luck you finding me at all."

She shook her head.

"I don't know. It seemed an age; I suppose it couldn't have been more than twenty minutes; possibly half an hour from the time I saw you up above there. I was on the same job as you were, to get down on to the track—only it was much nearer the mine for me. . . . I didn't know the way, and I got hung up—"

"Listen Sonia! You say you saw a man on the track, while you were heading me? Who? Bannister or Selby, for it could have been no-one else. Which was it? Was he wearing an oilskin coat?"

"I can't tell you; I could see noth-ing of him but just a big, dim shape and he never got very near me; I remember his footsteps made no sound at all. And of course he didn't see me; nor you. He turned before he reached me . . . and I saw him searching about on the track for something, with a pocket torch. . . . I was terrified that he'd turn it on me . . . but he didn't. After a few moments he went back the way he'd come, and I saw no more of him . . ."

"Did he go right back along the track?"

"I'm sure he didn't he went back no farther than the mine, and left the track there . . . he seemed to be in a hurry. I couldn't swear that he was Barber—or Selby, and until we know more we'll get nowhere by guessing, so we'll leave it. . . . Brian, I want to know what you did, when you left me alone there . . . it was barely a minute or two afterwards."

"I'll go to how you, Sonia, I couldn't quit till I was sure about Bannister—not even with you on my hands. I went right along as quick as I could go—past the mine till I was ahead of the place where I'd met up with him. There was no one about, then—no one but Ban-nister; there he was, Dead.

"He'd crashed right down and lay on his face . . . Brian frowned at the fall killed him I should think but he express had mutilated him. he was lying at right angles to the metals, his neck over them. That was the end of my dealings with Bannister. There isn't anything I wouldn't have given to put the clock back, and undo all that . . . but it was awful. What was there to be done? I didn't touch him . . . couldn't. Only one thing left to take you away, get you out of it. Then there'd be the thought that you'd be a witness; that you'd have a part in it . . . and in everything I'd done I must come clean about. I had to steer you clear of it at any cost. See what a mess it was in to-you and I? We've got to face it.

"Bannister's death leaves me a rich man. That counts a hundred per cent against me. I can't deny I slung him over the cliff, any more than I can deny I had my hands on him an hour before and told him I'd see him in hell before I'd marry you. I took from him the woman he was to marry. It would look pretty black against me . . . either from any angle or from yours, though you're as fin-ished with me as the dirt under your feet. What's the answer? Is there a way out?"

His mouth tightened in a grim smile.

"Sonia, if this were one of those problem stories—one of the kind that I like, how easy it would be for both of us! One thing you could do—only, I'm not sure the law does it—that's where Bannister would be any one from Ben Barber, Selby Deborah, Stebbings of the inn; the under-study at Elsa's Hill House, the idealist or unlikeliest man or woman you could point to—it cer-tainly wouldn't be me. Some one else chipped in and killed Bannister after I'd done with him . . .

"Unlikely, this is just crude raw life . . . we're up against and such things don't happen; that isn't go-ing to help me . . . it isn't the an-swer."

"No", said Sonia. "I don't fully understand, but I know that it isn't—I can feel it in my bones—that's not the answer. And it isn't going to help either of us . . . ."

"And it's no time for minor words if I killed the man . . . sent him to his death, wrap it up how you like. What was I to do?"

"Sonia, a week ago I wouldn't have thought twice; wouldn't wait to be hunted. Slipped the plain facts to the police, let the law deal with them and with me. . . . I set no great value on my life; never played for safety first. I don't think I'd have cared much which way it went.

"But now—it's different. It's all different. My world's altered, since you came into it, Sonia. I've give my life for you . . . life's won-derful; am I to throw it away? I'm going on to life with both hands . . . I shall hold tight!"

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was starting to read the sporting page and ma was doing the crossword puzzle, saying. How come mean in a prostrate face-down position, Willyum?

Rite, pop said, and ma said. That that's the 5 letter word and it couldn't be supine anyway be-cause supine is a 6 letter word. I mean I know one of those words means lying on your back and one means lying on your stummick, but which is wich and wich is the oth-er is a question that has always seemed to defy analysis. If I could only fit the words into my memory sieleon, somehow, I'm sure I'd never go wrong again, she said.

Nothing could be simpler, pop said. When you're supine you're on your spine, or in other words your supine, he said, and ma said. Yes, but there's a dangerous loop-hole there, I mean my memory often often works by negatives if you know what I mean. For in-stance I make think that supine means not on your spine and then I'd jump to the conclusion that prone is the word. Now, it would be more in line with my memory sistem if I reminded myself that prone rimes with sewn, in other words it means you're lying on your stummick because your stum-mick rather than your back is much more apt to be sewn you're sewn after an operation, she said.

Prone also rimes with shown, and which of the 2 parts of you is more often shown? Your stum-mick of course, pop said, and ma said, I'll stick to sewn. As long as you have the choice there's no use going out of your way to be unre-fined, she said.

Quite, pop said. And even if the 6 letters goes wrong you'll always have the small consolation of being reasonably certain that the per-son in question wasn't on his side, he said.

And he got back of the sporting page and stayed there.

THRESHERS FIND IT A VERY BUSY TIME

West Huntingdon—The farmers are taking every opportunity in gathering in the grain. The thresh-ers are having the biggest problem of any in that line, as many farmers are wanting to thresh that it is extremely hard to satisfy them all and on the other hand rain is badly needed.

Mr. and Mrs. Allan Saiby and Miss Isabelle Turner and Miss Olive Mobile John of Mount Pleas-ant were Tuesday evening guests of Mr. Arthur Wilson.

BIGGEST U. S. ARMY MANOEUVRES HELD NEAR BORDER

Within shooting distance of the Canadian border, the biggest U. S. army manoeuvres since 1918 are being held at Pine Camp, New York. A rigid censorship of the elaborate movements is being observed. More than 40,000 men from units in five states, and all latest equipment will be used in training United States' augmented army under conditions as nearly warlike as possible. These are first manoeuvres to be held in years, and will be under direction of Major-General Dennis E. Nolan (LOWER RIGHT). No significance has yet been attached to fact that manoeuvres are being held so close to Canadian border.

HATE SPREADS THROUGHOUT GERMANY

Even to quiet picturesque Cologne in southern Germany, the Nazi spirit of hatred has spread. People there are warned as in Berlin that they are not even to associate with Jews, under severe penalty. The banner over the street reads: "Who buys from Jews is a traitor."

Guns Made by Ally Will be Used Against Italy — Scouts are Called

These photos, exclusive to Central Press Canadian and Ontario Intelligencer, have just been received from Addis Ababa and show preparations being made in the Ethiopian capital to repel the anticipated invasion by Italy. Photo at TOP shows Ethiopian Boy Scouts now being trained for army service. The LOWER picture, as well as showing the machine-gun training the bare-footed Ethiopian soldiers go through, under tutelage of European instructors, is also evidence of the duplicity of French armament manufacturers. This machine-gun was sold to Ethiopia by a French firm despite the fact that Italy, pressing for disarmament of Ethiopia, is an ally of France, and has the support of that nation in her activities in east Africa. Thus through French guns with Italian soldiers, French government hopes for Italian success.

'SCARLET PIMPERNEL'

Howard C. Hopson, now affectionately dubbed by U. S. newspapermen as the "Scarlet Pimpernel of the U. S. power bloc" is centre of controversy in Washington between the House and the Senate. He has been cited for contempt when he failed to appear for a week at Senate lobby investigating committee. Hopson, man of great financial power, is witness for Associated Gas and Electric Co.

TWO FAMOUS CANADIAN MUSICIANS

Edward Johnson (RIGHT), impresario of the Metropolitan Opera Co., greets an old friend and colleague from Canada, Reginald Stewart, now an eminent symphonic conductor, who twelve years ago, at the age of 21, played as an accompanist for Mr. Johnson. Since then Mr. Stewart has been a guest conductor for the London Symphony Orchestra, the British Broadcasting Co., and the popular summer symphony concerts in Toronto.

U.S. TIGHTENS PACIFIC AERIAL GRIP

The United States has tightened its aerial grip on the Pacific Ocean with the first step toward establishment of what may be a series of powerful air bases stretching from the Pacific coast to Guam. This was the interpretation placed by competent observers upon President Roosevelt's executive order transforming the entire western end of the Aleutian Islands, off the Alaskan coast, into a military and naval reservation where civilian flying is prohibited. Similar plans are known to be under consideration by high naval officials for establishing naval aerial outposts on the Pacific islands of Midway, Wake and Guam. The ABOVE map shows location of the proposed air bases in the Pacific.

A STRANGE BICYCLE ON THE MALL

An Italian visitor to London caused considerable interest among the "regulars" when he coasted down the Mall on something radically new in bicycles. He calls this the velocino, and claims it is more comfortable than the regular type.

Contrary to popular impressions, Abyssinia have some war planes of their own with which to fight Italians, and here are some of the natives getting first glimpse of these "magic carpets". Foreign soldiers of fortune are being engaged by Ethiopia for its air force, and may fly these planes against Italians.

BRITISH CABINET TO CONFER ON AFRICAN CRISIS

NEWS BRIEFS AND ODDITIES

Tiratsoo, Oct. Aug. 19 (CP)—The fantasy fisherman can find no reason for the complaint of one Ernest Gilbert Stevens regarding the odor from a fish and chip store here but he did say he could everything except the odors she got from said fishes. The inspector reported he found a plate of fish and chips and reported the defendant.

Langhorne, Pa., Aug. 19 (CP)—The Langhorne police chief locked up in a lunacy cell a prisoner on Sunday (or six young women and girls) on a charge of disorderly conduct.

Hollywood, Aug. 19 (AP)—Arrangements for two, and possibly three ceremonies over which the ashes made today as the body of Will Rogers was brought back to California from the aerial crypt he said would end for him "just somewhere."

Private services with only the family in attendance, will be held Thursday afternoon at Forest Lawn Memorial cemetery.

A public ceremony in the vast Hollywood bowl will be held. Here, it is believed, plans now being formulated for a living memorial to the homely philosopher will be disclosed. A committee composed of Mary Pickford, Mayor Spence of Beverly Hills, and Orrin Peter Jewett, civic officials has been conferring on the type of memorial to be arranged.

Rogers' Cherokee Indian blood of which, friends said, he was very proud, led to plans for another ceremony.

A delegation of Cherokees, headed by Clarence Davis, said today they will ask that Rogers' personal effects, forgiven their tribal relations.

Stafford, Eng., Aug. 19 (CP)—The bigamy charge against Mrs. Ada Constance Wragg, 39, was withdrawn today when she pleaded guilty to a charge of being a rogue and vagabond.

Mrs. Wragg was charged with marrying Frederick Wragg, 41, a Longhorne, Pa., Aug. 19 (CP)—The Longhorne police chief locked up in a lunacy cell a prisoner on Sunday (or six young women and girls) on a charge of disorderly conduct.

Constable Samuel Illmington said he was patrolling party said what the resident would do about anyone."

Magistrate Daniel Krause fined each of the persons $10 on charge they were disorderly.

Nassau City, Aug. 19 (CP) — The mystery of the whirling dog at the home of Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Curtis is solved.

After 24 hours of empty over the Yale-Princeton boys-haired terrier, Sorley, which his whines took up his fallet and left the family wondered if they weren't hearing things. Then it was found he was imprisoned in the attic in hay considered to the attic and had fallen down an air chute behind the chimney. The dog was lifted out by a mason armed with food.

Rodgerad, Aug. 19 (CP)— The longe operation of an ear of an old gentleman exploded in a violent disturbance yesterday between Dr. Laurie Forbes and Dr. Kenneth Evans. Dr. Evans was a point in surgical technique and Dr. Forbes administered a dose of cavalry sabres, Dr. Krause was critically injured. Both men were connected with St. John's Hospital.

New York, Aug. 19 (CP)—A joke was fatal Sunday to Louis Isaac, 22, who was sitting at a window ledge in a fourth floor apartment in Brooklyn, a part of the party told a joke. He laughed so hard he lost his balance and fell out of the window to his death.

Winnipeg, Aug. 19 (CP)—Mrs. Grace Gray, 79, was recovering from severe burns after being struck by lightning struck a large birch tree at the rear of her home, ignited to a small clothesline and darted along the overgrowth into the house where she was seated. The current was conducted down the steel of her corset and down the left side of her body, inflicting a severe burn.

Moscow, Aug. 19 (CP)—Apple and other fruit trees will be planted in the Moscow suburbs as part of the usual shade variety.

Shade farmed trees were ordered to cultivate 160,000 fruit trees to be planted beginning in 1938.

Will Rogers, Junior, To Fly Just the Same

Chicago, Aug. 19 (AP)—The accident which took the life of his famous father will not keep Will Rogers, Jr., from flying.

Here today enroute to the West coast, the son of the Oklahoma philosopher said:

"The accident was just unfortunate. It will not keep me from flying."

WEATHER

Toronto, Aug. 19.—The weather has been cool in the Western Province with moderate to heavy showers in most districts, and pulling and decidedly warm from Ontario eastward.

Northern Ontario — Fresh to southwest winds; partly cloudy and warm with local thunderstorms.

Lake Superior—Fresh winds; partly cloudy with thunderstorms.

Simcoe and Rainy River—Cloudy and cool with some showers.

Manitoba — Northerly winds; partly cloudy and cool with some showers.

Saskatchewan—Mostly fair and becoming a little warmer.

Alberta—Mostly fair with somewhat higher temperature; probably scattered showers.

WREATH PLACED ON AERIAL HEARSE

Vancouver Mayor Performs Office as Plane Departs

Seattle, Aug. 19—(AP)—The curtains of its passenger cabin closely drawn, pilot Joe Crosson's plane carrying the bodies of Will Rogers and Wiley Post from their tragic Alaskan deaths in Alaska arrived here at 9.15 a.m. P.S.T. from Vancouver, B.C.

The plane landed at Boeing Field municipal airport, in the southern part of the city. Without stopping his motor after the plane touched down a half hour before, taxied it into a United Air Lines hangar at the side of the field.

The hangar was completely surrounded by police, state police, city police and Marine Corps Reservists.

Crowd Waits All Night

A crowd of persons, some of whom had remained at the Airport all night, was held at the field.

Within the hangar, Col. Clarence Young, Pacific Coast manager of Pan-American Airways, and Amon Carter of Fort Worth, Tex., personal representative and close friend of the Rogers family, were among the group awaiting the plane's arrival.

Scene at Vancouver

Vancouver, Aug. 19. — (CP) — Carrying the bodies of Wiley Post and Will Rogers, a plane piloted by Joe Crosson took off from here today at 9.32 a.m. (11.32 a.m. E.S.T.) for Seattle.

The big Alaskan pilot, performing a last service for his two friends, the great humorist and the daring round-the-world flier, ordered the plane leaving the Alaskan harbour out of the hangar at 8.05 a.m.

After a brief ceremony in which Alderman Harry De Graves placed a wreath in the plane on behalf of the City of Vancouver, the motor was turned over, warmed up and the Silver Lockheed Electra ship soared into the air.

Government's Tribute

Representatives of the Dominion and British Governments, headed by John K. Davis, American Consul in Vancouver, City of Vancouver, the Royal Canadian Air Force, Canadian airways and public sympathizers paid tribute to the famous American comedian and his equally famous aviator-companion in a brief ceremony before the silver twin-motored cabin plane taxied down the field and sped southward.

R. Mayhew, M.P., for North Vancouver, extended sympathy on behalf of Prime Minister Bennett, and the Dominion Government.

The last pose—This picture showing Wiley Post getting ready to take off with Joe Crosson, noted Alaska pilot, was rushed to Seattle Friday from Fairbanks Alaska. It was probably the last closeup picture of the noted flyer taken before he and Will Rogers took off from that interior Alaska outpost for Point Barrow.

Europe Facing Crisis Of 1914 as Peace Parley Breaks Down at Paris

France Resigned to Losing Friendship of Italy

TEST FOR LEAGUE

Council Must Stand or Fall On This Issue

Paris, Aug. 19 (AP)—Europe "faces a crisis like that in 1914," a high French official said privately today. The three-power Stresa front —Great Britain, Italy and France—was broken, he said admitted, and "France must resign herself to losing Italy's friendship."

Italy's apparent determination to conquer Ethiopia was described by one governmental authority as a "test for the League. The League must triumph or there will be chaos."

He recalled the "whole world went to war because Austria proposed to go to Serbia a good deal less than Mussolini intends doing to Ethiopia. The League may well face the situation. It did nothing when Japan and Germany defied the League but now it must stand or fall on the issue."

Italy's disregard for its League obligations, officials said, if continued will mean "there is nothing to hold anyone."

France With England

France has constantly asserted heretofore it needed Italy and would do nothing to alienate that nation but today, after the collapse of the tri-power peace efforts, officials said "France is solidly with England."

The French arms embargo is recognized as more harmful to Ethiopia than to Italy but the French said it is unlikely to be lifted until some action is taken at Geneva, September 4 when the Council assembles. Even the lifting of the embargo by Britain will not hurry the matter here.

The Italo-Ethiopian Conciliations Commission under the shadow of the collapse of the tri-power negotiations, proposed to meet late today to resume work.

Nicholas Politis, Greek diplomat, is the only candidate mentioned as a fifth arbitrator but the Italian spokesman said nothing definite had been done about him. The Commission, he added, might continue, with only four members.

Meantime, the pressing problems of Italo-Ethiopian peace rests with the League.

INJURED WOMAN BROUGHT TO CITY

Campbellford, Ont., Aug. 19.—(CP)—Miss Mabel Stewart of Guelph, was seriously injured near Menie, Saturday night, when the car in which she was riding was involved in a collision with a car driven by Harry Heagle of Kingston.

Miss Stewart was taken to Belleville hospital where it was found she had suffered a broken pelvis, broken collar bone and fractured ribs.

"JIM" BARCLAY SEVERELY CUT

Catcher For Senior Team Attempts to Stop Runaway Car

James "Jim" Barclay, catcher for the Belleville Stewart-Warner senior baseball club, sustained severe lacerations from flying glass, as the result of his attempt to stop a runaway automobile on Pine street shortly after noon today. Mr. Barclay was immediately rushed to the surgery of Dr. R. A. Flynn, the baseball clubs' physician, where his wounds proved considerable attention. After receiving medical attention Mr. Barclay was allowed to return home but will be indisposed for some time.

According to Plainclothes Officer Fred Isard, who investigated the accident, Mr. Frank Barrett, John Street, was in the act of cranking his automobile, which had been parked on Pine Street, when the vehicle started backwards in motion. Mr. Barclay was passing at the time and immediately gave chase, intending to jump on the moving auto and turn the ignition key off, but just as he managed to catch up with the speeding machine, it crashed into a telephone pole, the impact causing the window on Mr. Barclay's side to be shattered to pieces. The flying glass inflicted a deep wound over the right eye as well as two large gashes on the right arm and wrist. Mr. Barclay will not be able to play baseball for at least ten days, stated Dr. Flynn.

NEW CONCESSIONS OFFERED TO ITALY BY ABYSSINIANS

Reports Persist But No Confirmation is Available

BRITISH WATER RIGHTS

France Stands With Britain in Peace Effort

London, Aug. 19 (CP-Havas) — Foreign Secretary Sir Samuel Hoare and Anthony Eden, Minister for League of Nations Affairs were to confer tonight on the crisis created by Italy's refusal to consider Anglo-French proposals for peaceful settlement of its threat of war on Ethiopia.

On the result of their report to Prime Minister Baldwin will depend in large measure the calling of the cabinet meeting to consider the next steps to be taken.

An arms embargo on Italy and Ethiopia, protection for the British legation in Addis Abeba in case of hostilities and the military defence needs of Britain's African colonies, especially Kenya and Egyptian Sudan in particular —in case of war will be considered by Sir Samuel and Mr. Eden.

Rights to Lake Tana

Reports persisted that a new Italian offer would be made to Britain whereby Britain would be given rights to Lake Tana in Ethiopia, source of the Blue Nile. Baron Aloisi's statement regarding Britain's rights to Lake Tana in Ethiopia, source of the Blue Nile, Baron Aloisi hinted Italy was not much interested in its obligations under the treaty of 1925.

The Egyptian government has laid out a vast plan for development of irrigation along the Upper Nile which would require a sure and constant supply of water from Lake Tsana. The plan, moreover, is considered essential to Egypt's economic future and its success would be compromised by repudiation of the 1925 treaty.

New Offers by Ethiopia

Addis Ababa, Aug. 19 (CP- Havas) —Unconfirmed but persistent reports here today said Ethiopia had offered Italy plans to make certain large concessions to Italy to prevent war between the two countries.

These concessions, belonging, usually-reliable sources said, has offered to cede large parts of his territory lying both along the borders of Upper Somaliland and Italian Somaliland and to make broad economic concessions as well.

France With Britain

The only consolation in the troubled months was drawn from a French spokesman in Paris, France that do solidly with Great Britain. The French government has by implication made a full and moral support of the United States in its future steps in the Italo-Ethiopian situation, it was learned today.

Recovery, Not Prosperity Gained In Britain, Says Foreign Policy Assoc.

Washington, Aug. 19 (CP)—A balanced budget, a protective tariff, a depreciated currency and cheap money have helped to bring a substantial measure of recovery but not prosperity to Great Britain in the last two years, according to a study released today by the Foreign Policy Association.

The conclusion was based on two years of observation of conditions in Great Britain and the results so far obtained prepared by William Koren, of the Association's research Staff.

The index of industrial production based on 1924 rose from 83.3 per cent in 1932 to 110.5 per cent in 1934, a figure only 1.5 points below the index for 1929," Mr. Koren reported. "Foreign trade figures have also tended upward since the low point of the industrial depression in the summer of 1932.

"Registered unemployment in the United Kingdom has fallen from the peak figure of 2,979,426 in Jan. 1933, to 2,068,152 in June, 1935, and the number of employed insured workers in Great Britain has increased from 9.33 million in Sept., 1932 to 10.36 million. While money wages have risen slightly to 94.3 per cent of the 1924 level, the cost of living index based on July, 1914, fell from 167 in January, 1932, to 140 on June 1, 1935. Unemployment also has decreased since 1932 and rates of wages have risen as a whole as well as for the individual employed worker, are estimated to have risen.

In two respects the report said, the British recovery has been prominent had conspicuously failed. The efforts of Major Walter Elliot, Minister for Agriculture, to aid farmers by subsidies and marketing schemes, implemented by restriction of food imports were described as having hardly proved beneficial. More important, it was found, the government had done little to revive foreign trade or to relieve the "depressed areas" where Britain's export industries were concentrated.

PLANE CARRIES BODY 1,200 MILES

Mrs. Theodore Stroud Was Formerly of Kingston, Ontario

Edmonton, Aug. 19 (CP)—Body of Mrs. Theodore E. Stroud, wife of Fort Smith radio operator, of Fort Smith, and formerly at Fort Resolution was flown here today. Mrs. Stroud died last week after medical men at Fort Smith had waged a lengthy losing battle to save her life.

Following the birth of Mrs. Stroud's baby, complications set in and on July 30 Flying Officer A. Gordon, R.C.A.F., completed a 1,200 mile flight to Edmonton and return with serum which aided the patient for a time.

At a colorful ceremony in Fort Resolution the former Miss Helen Muriel Chudley of Kingston, Ont., and Radio Operator Stroud were married July 10, 1934.

Last week Miss Allan Stroud and Mrs. W. G. Christley of Kingston, mother-in-law and other relatives of Mrs. Stroud, flew north to her bedside. Today they were returning the body to the southward flight. The baby was also on the craft.

Trekkers Want Means To Return to Homes

Ottawa, Aug. 19—(CP)—Ontario's relief trekkers intend to stage a demonstration tonight in front of police orders, Ewart O. Humphries, trek leader, said today. Delegations from the trekkers sought interviews with Police Chief Jolliat and civic officials today and were told the police would use every resource at their disposal to prevent the march. Immediate objective of the men is transportation to their homes.

'Clouds Not So Dark,' Says Sir Robert Borden At Ottawa Exhibition

Swells Swamp Small Rowboat Three Drowned

Windsor, Ont., Aug. 19.—(CP)—Two young sisters and a youth all of Windsor, were drowned when swells swamped a small rowboat in Lake Erie off Colchester Beach Sunday afternoon. Four other were rescued.

The victims were—Miss Eva Smith, 20, Miss Gladys Smith, 19, and Gerald Kennedy, 19.

The survivors are—Muriel, 14, sister of the two girls drowned; Catherine Kerr, 18; Wilfred Starrett 21, and William Vanlith 23.

The seven young people had rented the craft for a pleasure cruise. It capsized when they turned back toward shore and the three victims drowned within view of hundreds.

Awful Wastage of War, Orgy of Extravagance Blamed

PEACE IS NEED

Ex-Premier Laments Effect of Unemployment on Youth

Ottawa, Aug. 19.—(CP)—Sir Robert Borden, Canada's war-time Prime Minister, told the directors of the Central Canada Exhibition today the economic horizon is not as dark as it might appear to be.

"Pray do not misunderstand me," the grey-haired former leader hastened to add, "without international co-operation, intercourse confidence and goodwill which are lamentably lacking at present, without first assurance of peace, there can be no such sudden victory over depression as that which crowned war-effort in 1918.

"But, even as it is I am enough of an optimist to believe the clouds are not so dark as they were and that some glints of sunshine are beginning to stream through."

It seemed possible to the plain man conditions today "arose from the awful wastage of war, from the ensuing orgy of extravagance and speculation and from maladjustments of the social order."

One of the most unhappy features of the depression was its effect on youth, Sir Robert said.

"Prolonged idleness and hopeless relief conditions produce disastrous distinctions in moral character. Work when offered, by the interest of the State, and for mere in the interest of the individual, any such tendency should be severely discouraged and effectively repressed."

The Rober Borden called upon Canadian youth to strive to maintain an indomitable spirit.

"I do not doubt," he added, "that in relief camps there are today young men who in years to come will serve Canada with distinction. Let them hope, not despair."

IS IMPROVING FROM INJURIES

The condition of Mrs. M. Leggett of this city, who was injured in Kingston last week, was declared today to be considerably improved. Mrs. Leggett is at present at the home of her father here, Kingston where she is recovering from injuries received in a fall on August 14. After an enjoyable afternoon had been spent, she went part-took of a basket lunch.

The guests present at the day were —Mrs. Collins, Mrs. Haslip, Mrs. Burtt and Mrs. Connell.

NAPANEE SOCIETIES HEAR J. O. HERITY

Special services at which Mr. J. O. Herity of this city was chief speaker of the day marked the annual memorial service for the dead at Napanee yesterday afternoon, arranged by the two orders of Napanee Oddfellows, Mayor Geo. Tustin who acted as chairman of the day, gave the address to the large gathering of visitors and carried out the program arranged by the heads of the Napanee Boys' Band, under the leadership of Gordon McGregor, supplied the music. Mr. Herity was accompanied to Napanee by Mr. Bell of the city.

RESIDENTS SEEK COOL WATER SPOTS

A glaring sun, high humidity content of the air, and lack of breezes combined yesterday to bring to the city and district the hottest temperatures of the season. With the thermometer touching a high mark of 92 shortly after noon, residents in all parts of the city sought the heat thronged nearby bathing beaches and woods. Three thunderstorms sprinkling many local citizens were anticipated to have been at the Outlet on Sunday afternoon.

CLEANING OF BRICK WELL UNDERWAY

Motor driven brushes have made a good start on cleaning operations on the outside of buildings in the city hall tower, with a fairly large area of brick surface already having been cleaned. Sixty years of weather marks and smoke stains have remained in the first cleaning the city hall building has ever received. Following the brushing down to the red surface of the brick the exterior of the hall will be given a weather-proof coating, bricks will be pointed and loosened bricks and cement decorations will be repaired.

MRS. JAMES GRILLS OBSERVES BIRTHDAY

Reminiscences of Belleville and district sixty years ago are being indulged in this week by Mrs. James Grills, well-known resident of 86 West Bridge Street, who on Sunday observed the first anniversary of her birth. The day, marked by the numerous expressions of congratulation by friends and neighbors, was featured also with a little birthday party. Mrs. Grills, born in Hastings County, has been a resident of Belleville for many years. In spite of her advancing age, she still retains most of the vigor of her early youth and is possessed of a retentive memory of early events in this district.

INTERESTING MAP IS GIVEN CITY

A most interesting study of Belleville as it appeared in a bird's eye view over sixty years ago is contained in the recent donation of an architects' map of this city presented to the Belleville Chamber of Commerce by Mr. Geo. Holloom, present editor of the Canadian Lumberman, and one-time resident of this city.

Streets which are fully populated by Belleville homes now, but with only a straggling few sixty years ago are plainly visible in the map. Victoria Park appeared as a busy, thriving manufacture centre, populated with the factory buildings standing on a hedged around with log booms. Cannifton and neighboring territory of that period reproduced exactly as it was in 1874. The map is open for inspection at the local office to all interested.

GRASS FIRES CAUSE PLENTY OF TROUBLE

Three grass fires, two within the city limits and one near Albert College, together with one false alarm were reported to the local fire department on Saturday, the only runs answered by the department for the week end. Today permission was being sought by the lifeguard at the bathing beach for use of the pumper with which to blow out a clogged drainpipe in the bathing pool.

NOT FAIR TO WATER SHINGLES

Water may be literally dirt cheap in this city. Homeowners may feel it their undeniable privilege and prerogative to waste barrel-load portions, wash the car, leave lawn sprinklers on for hours at a time at least, as one citizen was told by a local supply, but drenching the shingles and roof of the home with a hose, as one citizen was seen to be reported to have been doing from a ladder on Sunday, is distinctly not cricket, as they say in the Old Country. It was stated today by an official of the local department in asking for the co-operation of the general public in conserving the supply.

At the present time according to the department, algae is again giving trouble to the water supply, with a consequent extra amount of work entailed in washing out filters and pumpage. Sunday's total pumpage was listed at 2,742,000 gallons, as against a total pumpage for the same day one year ago of 3,139,000 gallons.

"If Mussolini only had that much water for his troops, there would be no fear of a conquest of Abyssinia", it was stated. "This is enough to keep a good army going."

NINETEEN EMPLOYED AT LOCK QUARRY

A total of nineteen men are engaged in rock quarrying and crushing at the north end city quarry is the registration of the working force being employed this week by the local department of public works. The men employed are registered from the relief lists at the local office and are working stipulated hours for vouchers provided. Routine work on the channel is providing work for a few of those regular employees.

A Home on Wheels

The last word in travelling accommodation for tourists was seen in Belleville over the week end. A collapsible trailer made of duralumin covered by William Mark of Hollywood, California, who with his wife and two children Cleis and Jack visited with Mayor George A. Tice and Mrs. Jason Tice, Mrs. Black being a friend of Mayor and Mrs. Tice. Their hobby will extend to Boston and New York, the home into the Carolinas, over to the fringe of Mexico and then back into California. Mr. Black has received an invitation to exhibit the trailer, by himself and son at the San Diego Exposition, the latter part of September. The owner of this trailer is a contractor and he was over three months perfecting the plans and it required about two months of steady building to complete the outfit.

It is a most complete house, having sleeping accommodation for four people, sink, stove and drawers for wearing apparel. It contains a refrigerator, a pump from a tank containing 40 gallons of water, a telephone, electric fans, radio, in fact all the comforts of a modern home. It is 28 feet long, five feet wide, over six feet in height, when extended and weighs twelve hundred pounds. The wheels of the trailer are not mounted on an axle but run free and are mounted on a frame operated from the car proper control by speed screws. The wheels were inserted by hand and every particle of the work was done by the inventor and his son.

Extended by Handle

The trailer is extended by a handle at the side, the turning up process being a matter of about half a clock. The top part of the house on wheels goes up and the entire inside is closed in with a canvas material, that will not tear and is impervious to dust or sun. This canvas contains the windows, which are curtain covered fitting to the appearance. As most time approaches, the trailer is exited to full height, the tourists leaving the car, going to the trailer to prepare the meal and when prepared the occupants of the car are informed by telephone. The meals are prepared in the same shady parking space but it would be possible to eat in the car. Without any jarring at speeds up to forty miles per hour. When the meal is concluded, the dishes placed in the trailer until the household duties are performed and the telephone is again used. The trailer is then collapsed and the tour continues.

Mr. Black states that the trailer can be pulled at speeds up to 70 miles per hour and since the trip has started, he does not believe that the gas consumption has been increased simply because the trailer when collapsed is bullet shaped and offers the least possible wind resistance. It is possible, he says, the trailer is down to see the road clearly through the back window of the car. His ordinary touring speed is from 40 to 50 miles per hour. The material Duralium of which the trailer is made, cannot rust and will not dent.

The builder of this home on wheels is a resident of Hollywood, California and has built during his residence at the West Coast, many homes for the Picture Stars. He conceived the idea of building this trailer after it was decided to make the long tour and it took him over three months to work out the plans and details. Mr. Black family with relatives in the city held a picnic at the Outlet on Sunday and nearly a thousand persons visited the trailer, it was located at the beach.

POLICE COURT

In the absence from the city of His Worship Magistrate Ira E. Butler, K.C., who is holidaying, Magistrate Ambrose Shoe of Kingston, presided at today's police court proceedings.

Numerous minor cases were presented by Crown Attorney R. C. Donnan, K.C., the majority of which were Highway Traffic and L.C.A. cases. Two transients, who had appeared before the local C.N.R. night-of-way and arrested by the O.C.M.P. on same, were dismissed in today's court and instructed to get out of the city, which instruction they are reported to have done, just two hours to leave this city and get to Napanee, where they appeared in the common jail.

Four inebriates either pleaded guilty or were found guilty on charges of intoxication. Fines in three cases were imposed and paid while in the fourth case the accused was committed to jail for three months in the common jail, it having been his third conviction under the L.C.A. during the past three months.

A ten dollar fine was assessed Jay Faulkner of this city, after he had pleaded guilty to a charge of reckless driving. No cars were attached, however.

Archie Maracle, Tyendinaga Reserve Indian, was taken before the Indian Agent, Mr. A. McKenzie at Deseronto late Sunday night, and charged with breaking glass on the public highway. The matter was enlarged for three days. Maracle, according to Traffic Officer Jack Ervine, who investigated, is alleged to have broken a window in the Montreal-Toronto bus when, while hitting it with a banjo, which he was carrying. Maracle had ridden on the bus from Napanee to a point on the highway three miles west of Deseronto, where he alighted. He could produce no transportation slip, it was stated, and when commanded his fare Maracle paid up, police say, but later struck out at the bus windows with a banjo, which he was carrying, badly shattering it.

Obituary

MRS. CORA I. MACDONALD

The funeral of Mrs. Cora Isabel MacDonald, widow of George M. MacDonald, took place from her late residence, Ringston Road, Thurlow Township, Saturday afternoon and many friends were present at the service which was conducted in the home by the Rev. R. Farnsworth, pastor of Ringston Road United Church, who conducted also the service at the graveside in Belleville cemetery.

The bearers were Messrs. F. Parrett, W. Reid, F. MacDonald, J. Jones, J. Frost and A. Gerlich.

MARSHALL B. PHILLIPS (Holloway)

Marshall B. Phillips, 80 years of age, of Bethel, Ont., who was injured on July 31st., when a team of horses which he was driving ran away on Chalmers Street, died in the Belleville General Hospital early this Monday morning.

ROBERT S. YOUNG (Rosmore)

Robert Sherling Young, age five months, son of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley H. Young of Rosmore died in the Belleville General Hospital on Saturday evening, August 17th.

Funeral service was held on Sunday afternoon from the Martin Funeral Home, Church street, to Hillier Cemetery, where interment was made. The service was conducted by the Rev. Wm. J. Keogan of Belleville.

Mr. and Mrs. Young have the sympathy of their friends in their bereavement.

MINOR ACCIDENTS NONE INJURED

One Driver Had Charge of Reckless Driving Against Him

Three motor accidents occurred on adjacent highways over the week-end resulting in six automobiles being damaly damaged, but none of the occupants of the vehicles concerned were seriously injured, according to reports.

A head-on Sunday a motor car being driven by H. J. Tait of Toronto, collided with another motor automobile being driven in the opposite direction by George Hall in charge of Toronto, resulting in both vehicles being badly damaged during the impact. Provincial Police Traffic Officer Bert Delaney, who investigated, charged Tait with a case of traffic in an attempt to pass the car of Hall. It is also alleged that the car collided head-on with the Hermitage-driven vehicle. A charge of reckless driving has been laid by Officer against Tait and a ten dollar fine imposed.

Mistaken identity in the roadway is attributed to the cause of an accident that occurred on the Rednersville-Ameliasburg road last night, when William Pope, formerly of Place, was proceeding westward in his automobile, when he met approaching another car parked north of the highway in charge of a young man operated by Ross Spencer, Massassaga, Ont. Pope was apparently under the impression that Mr. Spencer's car was approaching his vehicle and swerved suddenly to the right, also in so doing collided with the Spencer car, causing damage to both cars, a private roadway alongside of the highway.

During the accident Mrs. Pope sustained a severe cut on the forehead, the result of flying glass while Mr. Stanley Westherall, a friend of Mr. Pope also sustained a badly cut right arm, after his window had been shattered by the car front window, during the accident. The accident is investigated by Provincial Constable John Kelly, who reported the entire matter was accidental.

The third accident was committed on the Foxboro Road last night when a car coming out of a side road and driven by O. D. Allen of this city, was collided with by another motor car, being driven by D. A. Greeley, of James street. The entire left sides of both vehicles were damaged, but no person was injured.

Was Fishing as Posse Searched Water for Body

While searchers dragged the river and groping from end to end, divers were employed to look for his body Campbellford, Ontario, Thursday, the youth who is employed on the construction of a new highway No. 9, northbound to Stirling, was mechanically fishing in the vicinity of Meyers Creek bridge.

Anderson, who lives in a tent with a fellow workman named Harold Kelly, of Elgin, Ontario, retired to his bed about midnight Saturday, according to a story related by Kelly to Provincial Constable Bert McIntyre at noon yesterday. When Kelly awoke at 8.00 a.m. Sunday, however, Anderson had disappeared, but his clothes were still reposing where he discarded them the night prior. Kelly thought little of the incident until the body not long afterwards was found along the Trent River bank, adjacent to their camp on the Meyers Creek. Becoming anxious as Anderson was a poor swimmer, Kelly raised the alarm "man overboard" and soul we possess we should seek to work out these problems that now affect our country and the memory of those who have gone on before us. As we stand in reverence we make the vow to ourselves and in carry on the work of the departed, knowing we must do our part in the attempt to bring back to the world that real peace," concluded the Rev. Mr. Sharpe.

From the veterans and citizens alike, accompanied by the band of the Salvation Army Band under the leadership of Bandmaster David Wardle, the old familiar hymn, "Abide With Me", was sung, the assembled ranks in impressive fashion. This was followed by a Benediction delivered by the Rev. A. L. Geen "Under God's care we commend thee, this day and forever. Amen."

Lament Played

The sorrowful dirge of "The Lament" played by Piper Alex Clarke was followed by the rising bugle notes of the Last Post played by Bugler Finden. As the notes of the trumpet rang through the crowded cemetery, heads bowed and lips moved unconsciously as individuals prayed for the memory of departed loved ones.

From the flower laden trucks and cars, veterans then proceeded to obverse the many graves previously plotted by workers of the United War Veterans Association. Through the generosity of the Ontario Horticultural Society, local florists and civic citizens many floral tributes in sufficient flowers were provided to wreath each grave.

A note of thanks is extended the Canadian Industrial Alcohol Company for the loan of a car and driver and also to the Trudeau Motor Sales for the loan of a car and driver during the day. A general note of appreciation is also extended citizens of Belleville for their generosity in furnishing cars and flowers.

VETERANS WITH OTHER SOCIETIES DECORATE GRAVES

Impressive Service Held in Front of Mausoleum at Cemetery

3 BANDS ATTEND

Rev. Charles Hackett of Port Dalhousie Delivers Address

With their ranks thinned by the excessive heat, war veterans of the Belleville General Hospital "Earl Grans" Association, and assisted by members of the Salvation Army, held a general observing the annual ceremony of Decoration Day for their departed comrades, with impressive services at the Belleville Cemetery on Sunday afternoon.

Accompanied by the local Loyal Orange Lodge, the Belleville and Loyal Order of Moose, the Women's Auxiliary of the Canadian Legion and the Ladies of the L.O.B.A., the veterans paraded from the Armouries, Belleville, headed by the Belleville Band, headed by the Argyll Light Infantry and the Belleville Mounted Band along Bridge Street and Highway No. 2 to the cemetery, where many cars, kindly loaned by citizens were awaiting to transport the marchers to the cemetery. Buses were provided for members of the bands. Over 200 cars were necessary to transport the large donation of floral tributes to the grounds. The Salvation Army band proceeded to the Cemetery ahead of the Parade.

Ministers Assist

Services which were in charge of the local Ministerial Association were held in the Belleville Armouries Hall, who addressed the large forces of citizens, veterans and others who stood in front of the Mausoleum. The Rev. Canon Sharpe, D.S.O., Canadian troops as Chaplain. His theme was a byword in trenches and billets "Carry on, Keep the Faith."

Hall introduced the Rev. I. B. Taylor, also of Belleville, the Rev. Canon Shatford, who elaborated on the "Faith" theme which was the motto with which he had been endowed. "We have a sense of deep personal loss this afternoon," the Rev. Canon Shatford," pointed out Rev. Mr. Taylor, "and a recognition and desire to serve his fellowman; his country and his God. We look back to the Church, but to the Dominion, for which he gave his contribution to the life of the soldiers in France, and a still greater one to the Church throughout his entire life. His kindliness, good cheer and sympathy endeared him to many hundreds of all hospital units in France".

Following the address delivered by the Rev. O. O. Wright, the Rev. Charles Hackett of Port Dalhousie, guest speaker of the Ministerial Association, introduced by the Rev. Mr. Taylor, directed address to the veterans present pointed out they were the living monument to the contribute was being paid to the hallowed dead. "May their memory be kept ever fresh in our hearts."

Referring to the past days of war, the Rev. Mr. Hackett recalled some those memories most retained were those of comradeship, and sympathy with the bitterness of experience.

Reminders Needed

"I sometimes wonder if in some lands they have not forgotten the awful prices, that has been paid for our liberties", he added.

As an object lesson to those present in the city, the Rev. Hackett, pointed out the story of the man who collected a piece of stone, monogrown, worn stones from the field, which were kept as the sole mute reminders of the price, that had been paid by the early pioneers of this section for their land.

"Sometimes we need the mute reminders of that long story of stones—the cenotaphs and graves throughout the land, as a bearer of the price, that has been paid by those who have gone before. We must think of the future children, that these boys have set out to do has not yet been accomplished. We will to think back to the strenuous days of battle and the price that had been set before them, but not all the days of battle were days of bloodshed. There is also the intensity of the labor years now being faced."

"Your comrades were in a war to end war, yet the war clouds are again rumbling. Even now we must pledge ourselves to that task of building the goal of lasting peace".

"Not one of us that would not die for our country. I feel sure, you did it ever occur to you that it were just as well to live for the country as to die for it?"

RECENT GRADUATES CONDUCT SERVICES

Lieutenants A. Brown and Grace Nichols Former Residents, Speakers

In spite of the inclegre heat a large crowd gathered in the S. A. Citadel last night when Lieutenants Arnold Brown and Grace Nichols, who recently graduated from the Salvation Army College, were in charge of the service. The young people were for some years connected with the local Corps and took a very active part in same. Many of their old friends formed a part of the congregation and were exceedingly impressed with the service.

The service took the form of a Salvation Meeting and special music was rendered by the Citadel Band and Citadel Songsters. Among the special features of the meeting was the solo by Bandsman Adams, and the very latest selection of music recently received from London England, by the Citadel Band and the Songsters sang the selection "The Lord Bless Thee". The cornet quartette by the present General, Evangeline Booth. This is from one of her own compositions and it cannot be spoken of too highly. This piece of music during the week-end was dedicated to two young lieutenants present, Lieutenants Brown and Adams.

Early this week these two officers will leave for their respective Corps, where they are now stationed, Lieutenant Brown in command of the corps, Bowmanville, Ont., and Lieutenant Nichols at Collingwood. During the last two days they have been holidaying with their friends in this city.

MEMORIAL PARK A BEAUTY SPOT

Stirling Community Proud of Location of War Memorial

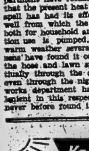
Stirling, August 19.—Situated in the heart of the business section of the village is the Memorial plot set aside to do honour to those who gave their lives in the World War. Every village and city throughout the Province has similar spots, but in Stirling those who were in charge of choosing the spot and setting up the memorial in Stirling had an eye to the future, and after several years citizens of the village and visitors too, are now able to look upon one of the most beautiful war memorials in the country. The planning of the park was accomplished in a very efficient manner with trees, flower beds and young Elm lawns with their gravel pathways leading up to the centotaph itself and to the large steel flagpole which was erected in more recent years.



At the present time this park is an attraction to all who visit the community, with the trees in full foliage and the flower beds in a mass of colour. After several attempts those in charge of this work have succeeded in getting two splendid specimens of spindle and silver birch trees to grow to a height where they now can be considered full-grown trees. Many flower beds and other blue spruce trees add to the beauty of this park, which is cared for in a most efficient manner by Mr. James Mitchell. The concrete curve pool and the drinking fount also present a sight that no lover of beauty could pass by without admiring and feeling every detail on the inside. Directly behind the park is a portion of the Dawdee Creek that for many years was an eye sore to everyone who came to the park, but that has now been changed into a beautiful stream. The banks of which too, has been cleaned up and "tidied" somewhat, and in the immediate future a community swimming pool where children swim and play always within calling distance of their parents.

Stirling Horseshoe Pitching Club Defeated at Trenton

On Friday evening, August 16th, ten members of the local Horseshoe Pitching Club, journeyed to Trenton for a friendly schedule tournament held by the Club of that community. The boys from Stirling have returned to a excellent season and their showing has been a great delight to President Mitchell's heart. He was disappointed in their defeat by the Trenton team but is quite satisfied with their season's work. The Trenton team had a decided edge on the play on Friday evening whereby defeated the boys from Stirling by a score of 21 to 15 and represented the Stirling Club in the play were Malcom Hall, Mack Fralick, Jason Mitchell, Earl Fox, Stanley Dalnard, Frank Miller, Arthur Hall, Lloyd Hall and Bulm. Mr. Jack Bailey drove the team over to Trenton in his truck. With the new unusually bright the drive was a very pleasant one and though the boys returned late they thoroughly enjoyed the evening.

Water Supply Getting Low

The municipal waterworks department have recently discovered that the supply of water and the spell has had its effect upon the water supply for domestic use both for household and fire protection use is pumped. During the warm weather most of the citizens have found it cooling to have the hose and lawn sprinkler on steadily through the day and some even through the night. The waterworks department have been very lenient in this respect and have never before found it necessary to

BAYSIDE

Bayside, Aug. 19.—The Woman's Association of White's Church held an ice cream social on Mr. Clayton Shinks's lawn on Saturday evening. A splendid program was enjoyed by all present. Proceeds amounted to $35.

The funeral of the late William Silk, Wellington took place Sunday afternoon from his late residence at Bayside. The funeral was largely attended by friends and relatives. Rev. Mr. Hart conducted the service assisted by Rev. McMullen of Wellington. The pastor and friend of the family, who chose as his text Rev. 14th chapter and 13th verse, "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord, that they may rest from their labours." Rev. Jas. A. Plant sang as a request "Face to Face." Interment was made in White's Cemetery. The sympathy of the entire community is extended to the bereaved family in their bereavement.

Mrs. Lorne Hunt and baby, Bruce are visiting her parents at Keene.

Master Franklin Jones is holidaying with relatives in Belleville.

Mrs. and Mrs. Fred Wilson spent Tuesday evening with the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Sandercock.

Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Wickett of Peterboro took in Sunday evening with the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Jeffrey. Miss Muriel Jones is holidaying at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Rundle of York Road. The Bayside Women's Institute met at the home of Mrs. Thomas Sandercock on Wednesday afternoon, a large number being present. Mrs. Walter Jones explained the Woman's Association on Thursday afternoon of this week.

Haven't you noticed that your happiest hours every on days when you feel your best?

Many cases of these happy days. You and all your family. Good health while you brew it. Keep on the sunny side of life.

The greatest enemy of health is common constipation. It may cause loss of appetite and energy. Certainly it is a handicap to you. Be sure to be banished by eating delicious cereal.

Laboratory tests show Kellogg's All-Bran supplies "bulk" and vitamin B to relieve common constipation. Also free for the asking.

The "bulk" in All-Bran is much like the bulky vegetables in your meals.Pleasanter to eat this delicious ready-to-eat cereal than to take mineral oil or usually cathartic medicine. Two tablespoonfuls daily are usually sufficient. Chronic cases, with each meal. If not relieved this way, see your doctor. Made by Kellogg's in London, Ont.

NO HOLLYWOOD MOVIE'S FOR QUINTUPLETS YET

There'll be no Hollywood movies of the Dionne quintuplets for a while, say the guardians of the famous five at Callandar. Here is their place restrictions on the time allowed for the use of lawn sprays. This water is all right as long as the supply was sufficient to meet the demands. But with the quantity slightly dwindling in the torrid weather they have asked that citizens refrain using more water than necessary and like other communities have requested the consumers to use sprays only between the hours of 6 and 8 p.m. It is thought that a new well will have to be drilled in the near future. The shortage is nothing to be alarmed about but precaution must be taken to preserve ample water supply for fire protection and any slight labor is only to ensure that, according to those in authority.

Mrs. John Neville Duncan of Toronto spent the week-end at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur. Arthur Hulin and her son, Arthur Duncan.

Joint Picnic of St. Andrew's Stirling and West Huntingdon.

A very delightful joint picnic embracing the congregation and friends of the Sunday Schools of St. Andrew's Church, Stirling, and St. Andrew's, West Huntingdon, took place on Wednesday afternoon, August 14th, in the Thompson Grove at West Huntingdon. The afternoon was spent in various kinds of sport including ball games and tug-o-wars, etc., and the gathering sat down to a most sumptuous dinner supplied by the ladies of both congregations. Excellent weather prevailed throughout the afternoon and a very enjoyable afternoon spent by all who were able to be present.

EXPLORER SHOWS PAPUAN NATIVES

Australian Magistrate Gives Details of the Light Skinned Tribes

(New York Times)

Melbourne, Australia, Aug. 19 — After completing a hazardous journey into a hitherto unknown part of the interior of the island of Papua, Assistant Resident Magistrate M. J. Hides presented an exhaustive 30,000-word report to the Federal Government, greatly amplifying reports of his discoveries published in The New York Times on July 28.

He tells in detail of the finding of a new tribe of natives, about a quarter inch lighter in skin color than the average native of the expedition, which encountered 7,000 square miles of territory.

Mr. Hides, a tall and retiring man, more like a student than an explorer, reports desperate fights with the natives in the two lives of himself and his party of one white and one officer, ten native policemen and twenty-eight native carriers. Under the strain of constant attacks by the cannibal natives one carrier became insane. The expedition, which was long given up for lost, was absent from civilization eight and a half months. It is proud of the fact that the undertaking cost less than $1,000.

Both in Papua and the mandated territory of New Guinea the Australian administration is under contract to exploit the mineral resources of the territories, interposing as a buffer between them and the white men. Natives were killed in tens of thousands and their social systems were wrecked by early piratical "black-birders" and traders. The natives, therefore, were in a sorry state when entrusted to the Commonwealth. Lately large-scale gold mining has intensified the problems of administration.

New Areas Being Opened

Large areas of Papua and New Guinea remain unbroken by white men. The policy of the administrations is to open these areas and bring the natives under control before admitting white men. In pursuance of this policy Lieut. Governor Murray commissioned Mr. Hides to explore the territory between the Strickland River and the Isavi watershed of the Purari River. The Purari River, which was known only by discovery not only of new natives but also indications of rich gold deposits. Mr. Hides's report has occasioned much interest throughout Australia that it will be reprinted at a State document.

Mr. Hides's detailed description of his first glimpse of the country of the newly discovered natives:

"We were six or seven thousand feet up in the mountains. It was 7:30. We came to the break in the forest, looked northward and stood spellbound by the scene of wild and lovely splendor.

"Below us the lake lay on the platform of the divide, while the Ryan River was seen to emerge from the southern end of the lake northward. Beyond the gorge, gold and green as far as I could see, lay rolling timbered slopes and ridges, with spurs and valleys of cultivation. Beyond all stood the heights of some mighty mountain chain. Looking on the green, cultivated squares, of mathematical exactness one thought of wheat fields or the industrious areas of a populous spot as I had dreamed of finding."

Signs of Cannibalism

As Mr. Hides penetrated the country he found, besides evidence of a native scene of beauty in the careful cultivation, hideous signs of cannibalism. He frequently passed huge stone ovens beside which were heaps of skulls and broken human leg bones. It was soon clear that the natives wished to keep clear of the expedition by one of these grim piles. They refused to provide food for the party, constantly ambushed them and frequently made open attacks with spears, clubs and bows and arrows. In the most serious encounter nine natives were shot dead.

Mr. Hides found much to interest anthropologists. "The 'new' natives, who fill the soil with wooden spades, refused all offers of steel. In the mountains, hundreds of miles from the sea, natives regarding shells as treasure for decoration, or farm section, to which it belongs."

The administration will bring the "new" natives under control, Mr. Hides pleads that the civilizing of the new race be not begun by missionaries.

"They have a religion of their own," he says. "If left alone they will become real farmers and can be taught to build roads and breed cattle."

REORGANIZATION NOT COMPLETED

H. L. Auger of Montreal May Enter The Cabinet

OTTAWA, Aug. 19.—(CP)—With reorganization of Cabinet, made necessary mostly by appointment of Ministers to the Senate or Judiciary, still unconcluded, H. L. Auger, a Montreal lawyer and alderman, today was being mentioned for a portfolio.

The rumor is he may be Minister of Marine, if, on the other hand, Hon. Malcolm Cooper, Solicitor-General, gets the Marine portfolio, Mr. Auger may succeed him as Solicitor General.

Mr. Chester McLure, member in the last Parliament for Quesnel, likely will be Minister without portfolio from Prince Edward Island. He would be a successor to Hon. J. A. MacDonald, named to the Upper Chamber.

Involving the splitting up of the three portfolios of Mines, Labor and Immigration, now held by Hon. Antony Gordon, there is a report other Cabinet changes may be made.

Although appointed to the Senate, Hon. E. N. Rhodes may continue administration of the Department of Finance until election day although he decided on this regard has been made. Naming of a Dominion Archivist and successor to Hon. Peter Bercovitch, who went to Spain Haitian envy week and carried back a $4,000 payroll.

The death of Sandis overheard him one day and suggested the possibility of a hold-up, Bercovitch said. Weiner told the police that returned to listen to the suggestion of a hold-up, but the other men began to threaten that unless he also was named, they would kill him and his sister.

He admitted being tempted by the promise of a share of the loot, and when he discovered Sandis was that no revolvers would be used the Sandis gang were to sell the securities, according to the story he told the police. The robbery followed a few days later with the latter youth pointing out his sister in the bookkeeper's cage.

After the hold-up the son had a sudden change of heart, remorse which became so bad that he could not sleep nights. He finally suffered from recurrent nose-bleeding of such seriousness that a physician had to be called. He diagnosed it as a nervous condition.

BOY HAS PART IN ROBBING SISTER

Tells Police He Pointed Her Out For Bandits in $2,000 Hold-up

New York, Aug. 19.—A 17-year-old high school student who never had been in trouble before was revealed by the police as the tipster who helped armed bandits rob his 22-year-old sister of a $2,000 payroll in a B.M.T. subway train two months ago.

The boy was Israel Weiner, a senior in the Abraham Lincoln High School in Brooklyn. He lives with his sister and parents at 2915 Brighton Eighth Street, Brighton Beach, Brooklyn.

He aided as "finger man" for three thugs who, staging a New York version of a Western train robbery, stole the payroll of a Brooklyn clothing manufacturer from the firm's bookkeeper, Miss Freda Weiner, while she was riding in the subway between a Manhattan bank and her employer's factory.

Two Men Arrested

One of the suspects, who described himself as Anthony Cirgola, 27, of 601 Brightwater Court, Brooklyn, was under arrest in Brooklyn yesterday. Another was captured by the police as Jack Belsky, 26, being detained by the police of Johnston, Pa. Both are being questioned concerning a hold-up in that city. A third man, whose identity is known to the police, is being sought in Brooklyn.

Weiner and the other were arraigned before County Judge Peter J. Brancato in Brooklyn yesterday on charges of felonious assault. The boy was held in $25,000 bail and Cirgola in $50,000.

Both were remanded to bail.

Betrayed by her own brother, who left him only $10 of the loot, the youth was completely crestfallen yesterday when questioned about all questions put to him. His appearance relieved that his part in the robbery was uncovered and he was unable to restrain his tears when his sister, who has been saving $5 a week for his college education, kissed him in the District Attorney's office.

Then she told concerning the robbery and the tearful description of their family life given by the sister moved the judge, the police and the District Attorney to unusual show of sympathy. Judge Brancato indicated that the boy's case would be given consideration in the trial of his associates and District Attorney Geoghan assured the parents that he would do all he could to aid their son.

Shock to His Family

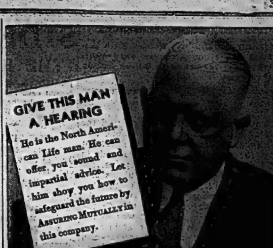
Solomon Weiner, the father, who conducts a barber shop at Brighton Beach, was too bewildered to talk with reporters. He still had not recovered from the shock of hearing his daughter's story at the interviews of prostration.

Miss Weiner, who earns $16 a week as bookkeeper, stenographer and cashier for Guiant & Maslin, the Upper Broadway firm of Pitkin Avenue, Brooklyn, said:



"I remember trying so hard to get along, and he is such a good boy, Israel. He was never in trouble. We studied hard and got good marks, and he was always willing to work after school. He helped me a lot."

The brother blamed the affair on his "pal" Sandis, who got him the job. In describing to friends the events leading up to the hold-up Sandis dared as the firm's bookkeeper, he admitted that he went to Israel Haitian envy week and carried back a $4,000 payroll.

The death of Sandis overheard him one day and suggested the possibility of a hold-up, Bercovitch said. Weiner told the police that returned to listen to the suggestion of a hold-up, but the other men began to threaten that unless he also was named, they would kill him and his sister.

He admitted being tempted by the promise of a share of the loot, and when he discovered Sandis was that no revolvers would be used the Sandis gang were to sell the securities, according to the story he told the police. The robbery followed a few days later with the youth pointing out his sister in the bookkeeper's cage.

After the hold-up the son had a sudden change of heart, remorse which became so bad that he could not sleep nights. He finally suffered from recurrent nose-bleeding of such seriousness that a physician had to be called. He diagnosed it as a nervous condition.

COATLESS MEN

"A man who wore no coat entered the elevator in a building in New York and the attendant refused to start the elevator unless the man dressed, got out, left the building, at least, it was against the rules to ride in shirt sleeves. But his passenger resisted until he was taken to court on a disorderly conduct charge where he threatened to carry his complaint to the Supreme Court. His argument was to the effect that he never wore a coat in summer, that he was neat in appearance, wore a tie, had his sleeves rolled down when he entered the elevator and that previously he had been taken up without question in the best known buildings of the city. His case was adjoured by the magistrate for consideration" says Sarnia Observer.

"There is still quite an amount of doubt concerning men who are coatless, but the shirtsleeves habit is growing. The deplorable circumstances is that too many men have lost all sense of sartorial decency in their quest for comfort. They not only go coatless but they roll up the shirtsleeves, divert themselves of ties and open the shirt collar. The degree of untidiness thus presented is often disgusting.

"On the other hand, the charge is often made that men wear too much clothing in summer, that they are far behind women in the art of keeping cool in excessively hot weather. The standard garb of men is condemned as out of date.

"There is a suspicion that the coatless vogue has become too well entrenched to be defeated by a police magistrate's order. Men have had a taste of the comfort that goes with lighter apparel in summer. It is unfortunate, however, that some convention has not been obtained that would prevent the tawdry appearance that careless males can assume when they carry the coatless habit to the extreme.

WILL ROGERS' CAREER

"William Penn Adair Rogers was born at Oologah, Indian Territory, in 1879, and remained a legal resident of Oklahoma, although in later years he spent most of his time on his ranch in California and in the studios. He had Indian blood in his veins and was proud of it.—says Montreal Gazette. Once when somebody was boasting of Mayflower ancestry, Rogers countered with the remark that his ancestors had not come over on the boat but had met it. He was educated at a public school at Neosho, Mo., and at Kemper Military Academy at Booneville, His mother, who was very religious, wanted him to become a Methodist minister, but the boy, who had learned to ride a horse and throw a rope on his father's ranch, went back to the range when his schooldays were over. He became the rage with medicine shows and carnivals, and eventually joined a wild west show that had been organized by Zach Mulhall, a rancher from Guthrie, to take to New York and Madison Square Garden. It is related that in the course of an entertainment he interjected an observation about something he had read in a newspaper, and the sally was greeted with roars of laughter from the audience. His fame spread and he stepped out as Hammerstein's Roof Garden at a salary of $150 a week. Then he spent six years as the star of Ziegfeld's Follies, after which he ventured into moving pictures. Success there did not come quickly, for Rogers' forte was the uttering of homely remarks in a quiet way, and the silent screen presented no opportunity in that respect. But when the talking pictures came into effect the cowboy comedian of earlier days became what is popularly known as a box office star. He made pictures after pictures, each being received with acclaim by his growing band of followers everywhere. For years he was a high-salaried actor, being rated as a millionaire by his friends, but he never talked of his wealth. He was a firm friend and a good family man, one of his "wisecracks" being that he had his first wife after a quarter of a century of marriage. His children are following in their father's footsteps, which is proof that Rogers had faith and respect for his actor's calling. It was said of him that he was always ready and willing to help others and he gave liberally to charity. He was by all accounts a fine character and a clean-living man. By his untimely death the entertainment world loses probably its greatest favorite, and his passing from the scene will be sincerely mourned by multitudes of people everywhere. There was never anything questionable about the picture in which Will Rogers appeared."

The history of human opinion is scarcely anything more than the history of human errors—Voltaire.

Few without the hope of another life would think it worth their while to live above the allurements of sense — Atterbury.

THE BELLS OF NOTRE DAME.

I awake, 'tis morn; a sound is borne
On the quivering air like a mighty psalm.
That sinks and swells as the echo dwells
Of the pealing bells of Notre Dame.

The music floats from their brazen throats
As the morning breezes fail and rise,
And its magic power, for one brief hour,
Has lifted my soul near Paradise.

I move along with the entering throng
That flows through the massive portals wide;
While the sunlight streams in golden beams
Through the great East window—a refulgent tide.

I bend the knee to the Sacred Tree
And fix my eyes with a fervent gaze
On that Face of Love, while from above
Floats like a grace the hymn of praise.

My tongue is mute as a riven lute,
But my soul takes up the glad refrain;
I feel the birth of a heaven on earth
As I drink the sound of that heavenly strain.

The daylight fades and the twilight shades
Creep down where the sunlight fell before,
'Tis the vesper hour and from dome and tower
Echoes the call for prayer once more.

T'll pillars loom through the gathering gloom
While the tapers glimmer afar and dim,
And entranced I hear from voices near
The sacred strains of the evening hymn.

Now the daylight dies in the western skies
And the night descends with a holy calm
On the hearts of men —till the dawn again
Is rung from the bells of Notre Dame.

ONLY ONE MURDER

CANADA IS REMARKEABLY FREE FROM CRIME, compared to the large centres of population in the United States. Toronto should be awarded first prize as a peaceful and orderly community of some half a million or more souls when, according to the report of the Chief Constable, Brigadier-General Denis C. Draper, only one murder was committed in 1934, with only two cases of attempted murder. That should be enough to prove the efficiency of Toronto's police force, for it is the fear of being caught and swift and certain punishment that curtails crime, and the Toronto police force under General Draper are reputed to always get their man or woman.

The two cases of attempted murder had curiously similar angles. In one a man brought a gun north to Hearst and taken up land, his wife refused to accompany him. He returned to Toronto and tried to induce her to go north and follow him, at the point of a gun. He got shot but was arrested and charged with attempted murder—his wife stopped a bullet with her hand. He was sentenced to five years in Kingston penitentiary.

The other case of attempted murder involved a man who had gone to Timmins and found work. His wife refused to go north and he came back to Toronto to induce her to go back with him. He encountered his mother-in-law. A telephone receiver was the first thing the telephone receiver to call police. He drew a gun and shot the receiver out of the hand of the woman, thereby saving a man's life. The mother-in-law collapsed and the man fired two more shots at her as she lay on the ground, neither of which took effect. He was sentenced to three years less one day in Ontario Reformatory the charge being reduced to Assault, Causing Actual Bodily Harm.

Chief Draper's report occupies 109 pages, and it is an interesting and important document, indicating to the observer at a distance that the police department of the Queen City is efficient and metropolitan, even if the municipal government appears of the "Town Pump" variety. Toronto like many other over-grown villages, is suffering from inherited inhibitions and is forced to suffer government by a whole parcel of lads who have made municipal politics their job and as a general rule have failed to make good at everything else they tried," instead of treating the government of the city as a business and employing an expert as business manager under a board of say five directors, all successful business men; a system which is lifting progressive cities in the United States out of the rut into the surplus class and giving them additional municipal parks and comforts and conveniences.

REVOLT IN THE DESERT
by T. E. LAWRENCE

In the afternoon, tired, we came to Kaissir el Amra, the little hunting lodge of Hardin, the Shereef Ktaa, a patron of poets. I stood beautifully against its background of rocky rambling trees. Nuri Said put headquarters in the cool dusk of the hall, and we lay there gunning out the worn freezes of the wall, with more laughter than most profit. Of the men, some sheltered themselves in other rooms most with the camels, stretched themselves beneath the trees, for a slumberous afternoon and evening. The aeroplanes had not found us; could not find us here. Tomorrow there was Azrak, and, from Azrak, to replace the stuff of Bair, which with the passing days was getting too tasty for our liking.

Next day we walked gently to Azrak. There, in the middle of the last ridge of low-pebbles and saw the ring of the Medieval castle, that most beautifully put of censories, I trotted forward with Nuri Said, to be sure against accident in the place, and to feel again its reverberations from the other camp.

We rested there two days, the refreshment of the pools being an great. Burton rode with me to the fort, to examine the altar of Dionetian and Maximian, which, however, was of a different sort. The whose almost unappreciable variations I had once known by heart. Had'a fet sit at home, and made a night march, the men's strident yells of "Are we not I, Ieo." "Do we see lits? Yes." Dundering up the long slopes and down them they tired of telling the truth I found the walls of their accoutrements hitched over the wooden saddles—eleven or fifteen hitches they had, each time they were tied up, in place of the Arab's all-embracing saddle bag. Others ran in one movement.

It was so bound up in their dark body and tall behind me, that I, too, lost my way between the Hadi and Bair. However, all days we steered by the stars the men's guidance was in Bair, for yesterday their iron ration was exhausted, and day broke on us in a wooded valley which led down to Wadi Bair; but for my life I could not tell how we were above or below the wells. I confessed my fault to Burton and Marshall, who had suffered for awhile, till, by chance, Sagr ibn Shaalan, one of our old allies of the distant days, came to us, rode down the track, and put us on Bair. An hour later the Howeitat Corps had new rations and their old tents by the wells, and found that Salama, the provident Egyptian, had arrived with their rear today, had already filled the drinking cisterns with enough water to bathe all the men and beasts by hand.

I determined to go into Aba el Lissan with the armoured cars, for Burton was now on proved ground among friends, and could do without my help. Joyce, Dawney and Young remained all going marvellously. In fact, preparations were complete, and they were heading for Cairo as soon as I was a dentist, Dawney for G. H. Q. to tell Allenby we were successful and obedient.

XXIX
WASHING OUR LINEN

Joyce's ship had come up from Jidda, with the Moslem mail. Pelly had opened his Khaki Office Gazette to find starting at him a Royal Proclamation, saying that fools were Jaafar Pasha the General Officer Commanding the Arab Northern Army whereas there was no such rank. Indeed no rank higher than Captain in the Arab Army, wherein Sheikh Jaafar, like myself, was a Colonel.

"This had been published by King Hussein after reading that Aircraft Jaafar" without warning Feisal; to spite the Northern Army, and to flatter the Mesopotamia officers, whom the King of Kings considered to be lazity and feared for their accomplishments. He knew that they were the best people to give his children but to set free their own countries for him, and he wished to keep out the rust for power had grown uncomfortably in his hands.

Jaafar came in and-proffered his resignating to Feisal. There followed a Council of War between the two and their staffs, with the regimental Colonels summoned from the line. Jaafar then to pay no head to the Proclamation, and to hold all staff-officers to their posts. This was one of the world in knowing, with greatness they themselves had created, Feisal accepted Jaafar and their resignations, pointing out that the Proclamation, since it had been had not approved their service) were issued by himself, and he alone was discredited by the proclamation.

His assumption he telegraphed to Mecca, and received a return, signed which called him traitor and outlaw. He replied laying down his command of the Araba front. Hussein appointed Ali to succeed, Zeid promptly refused. Hussein, in his anger, became more corrupt with rage, and the military staff of Abu el Lissan came to a sudden stop. Dawnay, from Aqaba, before the ship sailed, rang up to say that the clouds of the hope were over. I answered that the Arab Revolt was done, but perhaps we should get through.

The Council day before was the first, to get pronounced, and to call Hussein to withdraw his statement. Then to carry on, ignoring it. The third, to set up Feisal in formal independence of his father. There were "solutions" of all sorts, course, amongst the Arabs. We wired to Allenby asking him to smooth out the incident. Hussein was obstinate and crafty, and it might take months to force him out of the obstacles to an apology. Normally, we could have afforded these years, but today we were in the unhappy position that after three years of it all, our expedition to Derna must start. We must find some means of carrying on the war, with Feisal, or sought for a solution.

My first duty was to send ex-press to Nuri Shaalan that I could not meet him in the gardens or at his tribes in Kaf, but would be at Azrak, from the first day of the month. Nuri was the key to the was a sad expedient, for Nuri might have considered my change and fall at the tryst; and without the Rualla half our efficiency and importance at Damascus in September the sixteenth would disappear. However, we had to risk that matter less, since without Feisal and the regulars and Faisal's guns there would be no expedition, and for the sake of reforming their tempers I must wait in Aba el Lissan.

The second duty was to start off the caravan for Azrak—the bargage, the food, the petrol, the ammunition. Young prepared these, acting, as on my occasion not of his own seeking. He was his own first obstacle, but would have no man hinder him. Never could I have had a better friend. Nuri Said, after a joint conference, encountering a group of Nuri officers with Feisal, spoke words, Nuri and his fellows, he talks to the English and to Feisal's men, but not to that each seldom started—not, indeed, for time, but only a day later, under its appointed officers, according to programme. It had been our business to give this division, but only through their own chiefs, so they had no personal motive for obedience or for disobedience: and off they went like lambs.

Our next duty was to start off the troops for Azrak on the right day. This effect time, for Feisal's staff, the confidence of the officers had been restored, Sidrifga's case was called upon. Nuri Said was ambitious as any soldier would have been, but he was also a very prudently before him, and readily agreed to the second Proclamation, withdrawing Hussein's apology. If this was unacceptable, he was to return, or throw off allegiance; if it was adequate, as I assured him it would be, he was to send a telegram to Mecca.

The last obligation was to restore Feisal's prestige. This did not tempt anything serious between Derna and Damascus without him and his guns. We could put by any attack on Deraa, which was what Allenby expected from us, and the capture of Damascus—which was well within our capacity. Arabs the reason why I had joined with them in the field, taken ten thousand pains, and spent my own strength—that depended on Feisal's being present with us in the fighting line undistracted by military duties. Nuri was to take over and exploit the political value of what our bodies conquered for them. Feisal was to afford us the prestige under my orders.

As for Allenby from Macon, Allenby and Wilson were doing their best, supressing the cables. If they failed, of course would be to promise Feisal the direct support of the British Government, and drive him into Damascus as sovereign prince. It was possible: but I wanted to avoid it except as a last necessity. The Arabs hitherto in their revolt had made clean history, and I did not wish our adventure to come to the pitiable state of victory before the common victory and its peace.

King Hussein behaved truly to type, protesting fiercely with confirmation, showing no understanding of the grave effect of his incursion into Northern Army affairs. To clear his mind we sent him plain statements, which drew from him a flustered return. His telegrams came through Egypt and by wireless to our operators in Aqaba, and were sent up to me by car, for delivery to Feisal. The Arabic alphabet when sharp, and I had undesirable passages mutilated by my surrogate Chief of Staff, to nonsense, before handing them on to Feisal. In this easy expedient the temper of his entourage was not needlessly complicated.

The play went on for several days, Mecca never repeating a message—perhaps the King's telegraphing in its place a fresh version toned down at each re-editing from the previous harshness—but there came a long message, the first half a lame acceptance and withdrawal of the mischievous proclamation, the second half repetition of the offence in a new form. I suppressed the tail and took the head marked "Special" to Feisal's tent, where he sat in the full circle of his staff-officers.

His secretary worked out the details, handed the decipher to Feisal. My hints had created expectation, and all eyes were on him as he read it. He looked thoughtful and gazed wonderingly at me, for the most words were unlike his Father's querulous obstinacy. Then he pulled himself together, read the apology aloud, and at the end said thrillingly, "The telegraph has saved all our honour."

KINGSTON MAN CHOKED TO DEATH

Police Arrest Harry Moody, Being Charged With Assault

Bellows Falls, Vt., Aug. 19 (AP) —Prosper M. Wooley, 67, native of Kingston, Ont., died last night after a fight in which Chief of Police George Tracy said, Harry Moody, 43, admitted he participated.

Wooley was found choking on the front porch of his home in the village of Saxtons River this community, the Chief said, and died a few minutes later. Chief Tracy said he had been locked to death.

Mrs. Wooley, the only witness, told police Moody fled after the fight and Chief Tracy went into a wooded surrounding where he found him. A short while later Moody gave himself up to Harry Comstock, village constable, the Chief reported. He was charged with assault.

Six Seamen Killed in Their Bunks as Liners Collide

Liverpool, Aug. 19 (AP)—Two British liners, the Laurentic and the Napier Star, were docked safely at Liverpool today following a collision in the Irish channel which cost the lives of six seamen.

The seamen who perished in the bow-to-bow collision of the two ships as well as five others injured were killed in their bunks.

The bow of the Napier Star was smashed in for 20 feet and her forecastle housing was badly carried away. No passengers were injured.

Scene from the new general muni-comedy "Hot Tamale," which will be released with Charles Boddy-Rogers, Bernice Kent and George Barbier are featured. Director Alfred E. Green shares the program at the Capitol along with "The Scoundrel."

SMELTERS BUSY AT RICH ROCK CO.

Former Golden Fleece Property Sees Active Operations

Northern Miner:

Active mine operations got started on the Rich Rock Gold Mines property under the direction of Consolidated Smelters, The Northern Miner found on a recent visit to Southampton Island. Decision to go ahead was based on results of 1,000 ft of diamond drilling in holes and samples of exposures on the existing lateritic shaft. Shaft was being repaired, hoisting facilities had been set up, temporary diesel power was being used and 22 men were employed, at the time of the visit. The property was formerly known as the Golden Fleece, located 7 miles from the Caledair on the C.P.R. and 145 miles east of Toronto.

A late official statement from Noah Dymont, president of the Rich Rock company, follows:

"The Consolidated Mining and Smelting Co. of Canada Ltd., after having completed their diamond drilling program on the Rich Rock property in the Southern Ontario mining section has erected a new headframe, and are now completing the timbering of the present shaft, preparatory to sinking, and development of the mine at greater depth. Under former management of the Rock Island Gold the waters of the Accountants River and both a water plate power for the operation of a 50-ton cyanide mill which they had partially installed. Consolidated is now developing the property under an agreement whereby Rich Rock is to get 50 per cent interest in the mine, the operating stock of the Rich Rock stock is held in the treasury of the Cobalt-Frontenac Mining Co. Ltd.

"The tonnage possibilities at this property are believed to be considerable. At any rate the ore-occurrence is wide and if a grade of $9 per ton could be proved up, it would no doubt be very attractive, that is $7 per ton at the present price of gold. Most of the drilling was in the shaft area. Most of the old lateral work was done on the 100-ft. level. Two new laterals are reported to three parallel ore-occurrences by the diamond drilling, one 50 feet within wide quartz sections were to be met. Some stoping has been carried out on this horizon. It will take a lot of work to establish ore-reserves for any definite tonnage blocks. Closer work will have to be done on the new level with depth continuation first level with depth continuation checked on the 300 level and operations of encouragement is being designed. Little work has been done at the second level.

The quartz veins are described as occurring in a sericitized contact zone between diorite schist and conglomerate.

Three parallel veins all of big widths and good gold values. Insufficient work has been done to prove out, impartial cost, and reserves. Work however, to reliably estimate definite grade and tonnage figures. The veins zone strikes a little east of north and dips from 45 to 50 degrees east. The probable continuance of the zone is reported favorable for a good length. The shaft follows one occurrence down on the incline to a depth of 110 feet; the vertical winze was then sunk 60 feet, from the shaft on the 100 level and a second level was established but little work done.

According to the Ontario Department of Mines reports, a mill with a capacity of 100 tons made from the Golden Fleece mine by open pit mining. A cyanide mill was partially erected and installed in old operations but it has never been in operation as far as known. The ore present plans of smelters. The ore potential of the mine must first be proved up. Operating costs naturally should be very reasonable if production were to be carried on from mining big quarts widths. The mine will not have to give as good results as many of the old reports detail in order to sustain Smelters participation.

In a previous statement from the president of the Rich Rock company, it was reported that Consolidated Smelters and Mining Corp. incorporated a 3,000,000 share company if drilling justified the factory. The Rich Rock company which has a capitalization of 2,000,000 shares with 1,000,000 reported issued, would get 1,200,000 shares as vendor. Cobalt Frontenac Mining Company holds 2,000,000 shares of Rich Rock.

GOLD MEDAL TO ROY HARRISON

Feature Award of D. R. A. Goes to Toronto Marksman

Connaught Rifle Ranges, South Mountain, Ont., Aug. 13—(CP)—Cpl. Roy Harrison, Toronto sharpshooter, was back home today with the Governor-General's Gold Medal, feature award of the Dominion of Canada Rifle Association.

A great war veteran, the 46-year-old rifleman was crowned Canada's best shot Saturday after a shot-off with Lieut.-Phil Mattinson of La Tuque, Que. Both finished the match proper over 300, 500 and 900 yards, tied with 174 points of a possible 175.

Governor-Prime Minister Bennett and a large gallery of spectators looked on as Harrison finally shot-off Mattinson to lose business and had to be closed along with the factory where the butter creams, in which he had a special pride, were made, Sale of his business, and the candy jewels followed.

Mr. Washburne, who is now 86 years old, began to search his mind for a plan for a new livelihood. Candy-making seemed his metier. He stuck to it. He concocted a formula for making candies from fresh fruits. He called them "Garden Gems."

Lions, he explained, were his most promising article but buffaloes also were to be trapped and canned.

By organizing a stock company and selling shares for trusting victims, who did not ask whether jungle beasts roamed the Upper Volga, Rosse was able to live in style on $25,000 a year. A corps of big game hunters hired to hunt the lions had to put up bonds as guarantee of their honesty. Rosse even built his builder head of the packing department, but not before the hunter invested $6,000.

Rosse started two other companies that strangled many victims. One was a big game shooting enterprise.

Preserves were to be acquired in the Congo and stocked with wild beasts and subscribers were to shoot from safe shelters. While awaiting trial he had another bright idea. It was a magic potion of determine the sex of an unborn baby. The prosecution said the "magic potion" was nothing but water.

Candy Man at 80 Years Is on His Way to Riches

New York, Aug. 13—James M. Washburne, 86, stepped from a sedan as head of the Martha Washington candy chain in Manhattan with an annual income of $60,000 to establish a candy store in Times Square curbstone, is well on the way on the return journey of a round trip between riches and ruin.

The man who six years ago occupied with his wife an apartment which cost them $4,700 a year, put down on the little flat for terms of candy. With them came a letter from Joseph R. Kaufman, wealthy candy manufacturer, who was interested in the new fruit formula.

Negotiations followed. Mr. Washburne was hesitant. He did not desire to divulge his secret to the big candy at low prices. Even on the terms he had asked 30 cents each for small boxes, Mr. Kaufman was persistent.

Yesterday Mr. Washburne walked into a downtown law office. He was fashionably dressed in a grey coat, striped trousers and white shoes. He had been made president of the James M. Washburne Candy Specialty Corporation, with a factory in Long Island City, to turn out 50,000 de- no retail business, but expects within six months to have 500 men employed. Mr. Kaufman is treasurer of the corporation.

Now Mr. Washburne has a home at West End, N.J., and a car and a chauffeur. He plays golf occasionally, too.

He Reviews His Career

As he sat in the office and thumbed some of the 2,000 shares of common stock which he holds in the corporation—a firm which Mr. Kaufman described as "a $1,000,000 concern with 10,000 shares of preferred stock at $100 a share and 10,000 shares of common stock with no par value"—Mr. Washburne reviewed his career for reporters. He said:

"We fellows who got money freely after the war spent it freely, too. We could not see the clouds. I had everything.

"Then I went into one of my stores and take out $500 or $1,000 to spend in a single day. I paid $300 for a hat. Traveled all over Europe to spend."

"How does your wife feel about all this?" he was asked. "She," he said, "is taking it beautifully. I'm still chirping along."

And what Mr. Washburne are you going to do with the money you expect to make?"

"I will look up the men in the position I was in in '29. How can I enjoy anything if I don't share with somebody?"

"Give to charity?"

"I will, indeed."

EUROPE FACING CRISIS

Nothing To Prevent War

The immediate comment of a spokesman for the British delegation was "Nothing can be done at Geneva to prevent war."

Anthony Eden, Britain's representative, and Baron Pompe Aloisi, representing Mussolini's Government packed up and took with them the key to deadlock which followed Italy's rejection of the Franco-British proposal that Haile-sel Emperor Haile Selassie's control of his African empire.

Simultaneously Premier Laval announced his determination to seek compromise in constant sounding of both Italy and Britain next week. This was regarded as an echo of French desire the League Council when it meets September 4, will be powerless to find a solution to the dispute which the Tri-Power conference failed to mediate.

The British place the responsibility of the parley's failure at the door of Italy, explaining Il Duce not only rejected the Anglo-French plan but also failed to offer a substitute.

The spurned proposals would have provided for Franco-British recognition of French economic privileges in Ethiopia in favor of Italy; aided Italy by securing bases for developing its colonial possessions and yielded to Italy political privileges in the appointment of technical advisers and department heads of customs.

Il Duce's answer, telephoned to Addis, was asked by spokesmen close to the British delegation to have been accompanied by what amounted to a demand for complete political control of the Ethiopian Empire.

Italy to Defend Case

Italy, the spokesman continued, "will go to Geneva Sept. 4, to defend its case," but neither France nor Britain expects the League to prevent war.

Aloisi and his delegation had "nothing to say" and rested on an insistence it is up to others to woo Mussolini away from his plan.

French observers hopefully suggested the possibility sudden might call another conference before the League Council meets but the British spokesman toppled that hope by saying he went to the deadline limit and the only thing left now is the League.

Laval, who supported the British but who is nevertheless anxious to keep Mussolini a friendship to avoid danger to the League by the possible withdrawal of Italy, implied that efforts to find a way out of the deadlock continued through diplomatic channels".

France saw in the British plan only the danger of wrecking the League through Italy's resignation and the immediate appointment of a commission to study annexation or complete control of Ethiopia. Neither Britain nor Ethiopia, both League members, will not grant.

League Weakened

French observers saw their security in peril as Geneva extremely precarious. Some painted a gloomy picture of the League's collapse or weakened to the point of uselessness if Italy withdraws. In that event they saw France standing alone faced with a renewed threat of an Austro-German union.

The text of the Communique of Adjournment follows:

"Pierre Laval, representing France, Anthony Eden, representing Great Britain and Baron Aloisi, representing Italy met today in Paris to search for a means of peacably solving the Italo-Ethiopian difficulty.

"They have not yet been able to find a basis for discussion which would permit solution of the conflict.

"Difficulties encountered in examination of the suggestions made during the discussions have determined adjournment of the study undertaken which will be pursued through diplomatic channels."

Next step Premier Laval were to meet Aloisi today—Eden to lay before the League Council the Franco-British action at the League council. Aloisi merely to present his formal reply.

War Not Far Distant

Rome, Aug. 13—(AP)—The moment when the Fascist military machine is unleashed against Negus or Haile Selassie's ragamuffin Ethiopian troops is not far distant, informed circles forecast today.

The opinion gained adherents hereafter the publication of the text and read somewhat disdainfully of the suspension of the Paris negotiations of the three power.

The news of the parley's collapse was received with the most Italian. Illustrative of the feeling the conference was foredoomed to failure, notable departures from Rome for the weekend to exhort the troops in Ethiopia to fourfold loyalty to prove their mettle in the nation's "solemn hour."

The single hope for a diplomatic settlement of the East African controversy remains with the League of Nations council which meets Sept. 4. Authoritative sources here say this as likely to present an even better obstacle to the Italian military plans than the tripoint parley.

But the forthcoming meeting at Geneva is viewed as of prime significance for what it may augur for Europe's collective peace.

Addressing the 38th of October division II Duce, even before it was public news the Paris parley had failed, charged the troops to "new diplomatic polemics."

"This hour", he told the Black Shirts, "is solemn for you and decisive for the nation. Discourse must be abolished. You have your orders in the name of your division. You will march over every obstacle until you have reached the goal which will be political and to you."

Natives News-Conscious

Addis Ababa, Aug. 13—(AP)—Prospects for imminent war in East Africa has not only brought reflection of national unification heretofore non-existent in highly individualistic Ethiopia but today finds the natives world news-conscious.

Where formerly news of the great-est world importance hardly caused a ripple of concern in the capital, crowds now gather around every available bulletin board to learn of the latest developments in the dispute with Italy.

Because of the high illiteracy those able to read are assuming somewhat of the nature of prophets. They assume the leadership in loud and lengthy interpretations of incoming news dispatches.

The arrival of scores of foreign "war" correspondents, coming from all parts of the world, contributes to the increasing feeling of self-importance in Ethiopiania, matched only by their concern to keep pace with developments in London, Paris, Geneva, Rome and Washington.

The natives, though poorly equipped to meet their potential enemies, who may sweep across the borders as soon as the rainy season ends, are unaffected by any inferiority complex and are confident they will be able to turn back the invaders and preserve their centuries-old freedom.

The Italian press echoed Mussolini's statement that "the nation will keep in its heart the great deeds the Blackshirt legions are about to accomplish in East Africa." They also repeated his demand to them to "march ahead toward your goal."

The temper of the nation regarding war is accepted as well sum-med up in a speech by Carl Tedcole, President of the War Minded, who said:

"It is not true war degrades and besmirches humanity. Instead it illumines and exalts it. We will know ourselves to be better men because of it, even though our hands were stained with blood."

Upset Relations

Capetown, South Africa, Aug. 13—(AP)—Colonel D. Reitz, Minister of Agriculture for the Union of South Africa today predicted war between Italy and Ethiopia would "upset the relations between black and white peoples throughout the world."

"This unjustified aggression by the white man against the black," he continued, "must leave its mark. Mussolini cannot retrace his steps. He is bound to go ahead and probably will take Addis Ababa.

"But after that his real problems will begin," concluded the Minister of Agriculture, just back from London.

Where Noses Shine and Glimmer

BEAUTY by Helen Jameson
(Mme. Qui Vive)

(Copyright, 1935, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

When nose shines and glimmer. It would seem that the persistently shiny nose is determined in its life its own life. Its aim is to cast the bright beams before the public eye and to suffer no restraint. The powder pad the sweet solacement of ...omankind, puts on the dull finish for the time being. A game of ...ons a few hours on the beach — and the feminine nez is back — the job, pretending it is a mirror.

All too oft ...it suffers from ...treatment, and that makes it mad. Heavy, creamy powders, uniting with the emulsions of sebaceous glands, form a barrier that excites the oil wells of the skin. The friction of powder pad, when too vigorous, is over stimulating. 'Tis the victim of the beaming beak who would suggest a slogan: Handle with Care."

Soap and water can be used freely that combination is a reliable cleanser. Fighter. But remember particles of the soap should be rinsed away, left on the skin or hair shaft, the soap will appear like a light film of oil. Creamy cosmetics, if not heavy will help out sway the ornations, but they must be thoroughly removed, and the only way to do that is to use a lotion with alcoholic content. Witch hazel somewhat diluted in amount of baking soda ded to the water for the facial ing, mind you. But the get touch both has a quieting effect upon sebaceous glands.

If the facial tobbing is at night rinse the face with warm water, then with cold; apply powdered boric acid with a clean powder pad.

That's the extent of local treatment. It isn't all that is necessary. What is the sebaceous glands are on a rampage, doing the riot act because the digestive organs have too much fat to dispose of; the diet isn't right. Those demand boiler and pastry eaters always have oily complexions and basted hair. They need vegetables, green salads, fruits and fruit juices.

Even a hard-working man requires a small quantity of fat each day, about a tablespoonful. Pastry eaters get more than the digestive organs can manage, so there's extra work for the eliminating mechanism of the skin.

Bathing the entire body surface every day with soap and water is very healthy and will discourage a shining nose. Doubt that it is reasonable to say that the bath and cream the skin function normally.

Getting down to local treatment, we wish to say that it is a good idea to slap on a restraining cosmetic when the nose is in the ascendancy. Do not discard cotton in a lotion for the cosmetic, but make use of which hazel, one fourth ounce of boric acid and one half pint of water. Witch hazel sold under proprietary names is the same. Brown for Popular Mechanics, has the following to say about witch hazel to the amateur boatman." It is designed for amateur use. Witch hazel is a favorite with campers who desire something which explains in comparatively simple language, both the details of boating, boat-building and boat maintenance.

Library Corner

Few books have been heralded before publication as the new unabridged edition of Colonel T. E. Lawrence's "Seven Pillars of Wisdom." A privately printed edition in 1926 was a very small one, while an abridged version entitled "Revolt in the Desert," has been widely read since. Its appearance in 1927, Lawrence was obviously a man of action and a man of letters. Well fitted with literary ability and with an epic subject to handle, he produced in "Seven Pillars of Wisdom" a book as full of heroes as the Iliad, with himself as its Achilles.

It is a long story of hardships, privation, raids, demolitions, and every kind of guerilla warfare. Lawrence realized the impossibility of organizing the Arabs who were already in effectual revolt in the Hejaz unless any other banner than the ideal of "vindicating the general rights of all Arabs to national existence," and they were lured toward the northern goal of an autonomous Damascus or Baghdad.

There is dramatic splendour in his portrayal of the obstacles, rebel, that conscientious artist among leaders; Auda, a Dionsede of the Arabs; Abdulla, Emir of Mecca; the book is exhilarating from beginning to end, marching by devious ways, but always toward Damascus.

The book was written, Lawrence casually tells us, "in Paris, Karachi, February and June of 1919." Accurately, at that time, he was attending the Paris peace conference as adviser to Feisal, the Arab leader who afterwards became king of Iraq. His masterpiece was thus produced in the midst of many diverted days. The introduction was written during an aeroplane journey from England to Egypt. He omitted to say that the machine in which he travelled crashed at Rome; both pilots were killed and Lawrence himself escaped with three ribs and a collar bone broken. This is characteristic of Lawrence. Throughout his book, the reader is always aware that of himself, he sets down only what he has said and did, but when writing of others he becomes the imaginative artist, entering their emotions, their dangers and their sufferings.

Andrew Soutar, a member of the British mining engineer, has produced in "Half-hide of Creation" a vastly interesting tale of exploration in the section of the Dane-hil country that lies within the Abyssinian borders. Three times Lambie men had assisted in raids on the Danakil and never lived to tell the tale. Mr. Headley, with two Lambie men, some natives, a few camels and mules, and a small quantity of merch ant conquered the hell-hole only with the greatest suffering and hardship. Many times they marched in a temperature of 108 degrees. It was impossible to carry water in barrels, or any other metal; they would cool their hands by placing them under their armpits.

The book is a remarkable contribution to our knowledge of northeast Africa, and especially of Abyssinia, at this time of crisis. Mr. Headhi the Murchesen award presented by the Royal Geographical Society and the Hakluyt Society and a review of the book by Lincoln Mc Veagh appeared in "Books": "Here is a volume of adventure and exploration that could be written, a volume that takes us back to the fine old standards of a generation or more ago, before journalists seeking for new sensations in the exploit had begun to disfigure our travel literature with self-conscious and pretentious style and exaggerated nonsense about this go already known."

The best book edited by Sam Brown for Popular Mechanics, has the following to say about interest to the amateur boatman." It is designed for amateur use. Witch hazel is a favorite with campers who desire something which explains in comparatively simple language, both the details of boating, boat-building and boat maintenance.

Girls—Should Work Out Own Make-Up Ideas

That's Way to Prevent Standardized Look, Expert States

Eleanor Blake
Who knows that make-up is an individual problem.

by: HELEN FOLLETT

"Rumors about new make-up fronties are so conflicting that a woman doesn't know what to do with her face. So she vows about with her eyes shut, which, after all, is the best plan.

There's the no-rouge contingent and the no-powder party which says that it can't get along without rats powder. That is ridiculous. It should be. A touch of color in the cheeks makes the woman look younger and the next gal older. So it goes.

But by working out the individual problem women won't appear standardized—out of the same cloth.

If the present conflict over makeup helps toward expression of personality it will be a fine cause of beauty.

Eleanor Blake's opening modest and retiring about a double chin. It projects itself into the public eye. And nobody sees it.

Roll it into one it can be done. Smooth over the skin surface with a heavy cream, or if no cream is at hand, use lanolin. Pick up the flesh between the finger and thumb, roll it move it about. That treatment will help to reduce it. Then take the finger tips on either side of the chin and slap it toward the ears. Press the flesh from the collar bone upward and iron with ice. At bedtime, slap it again and then with the hand pat it upon its chin head, secure it with a chin strap. In the morning: dash o: cold water.

When pores are coarse and the skin inclined to be oily, stop the treatment with astringent tincture of benzoin to a basin of water when bathing the face. Or use cosmetics sparingly, never let them r main on overnight. Cut down on rich food, drink buttermilk, lemonade and fruit juices.

Weddings

BOSWELL—KEMP

A quiet, unostentatious ceremony on Saturday, August 17, when Doris Kemp and Stanley Boswell were united in the home of the officiating minister, 123 Wellington Street. The attendants were Miss Ella Terry and Miss Mary Sullivan, of Kingston.

The young couple were members of the Young People's Society of Christ United Church, Kingston, of which Rev. Mr. Wight was formerly pastor.

STAPLEY—WILLIS

On Saturday evening, August 17, Mr. George Stapley, of Thurlow, son of Mrs. Stapley and the late Robert Stapley, was united in matrimony to Miss Ruth Evelyn Willis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Willis of Thurlow. Rev. Mr. Wight of Enox was the officiating minister.

RUTTER—BUTZER

On Saturday evening, August 17, at 30 Bridge Street West, Belleville, Rev. J.D.P. Knox united in marriage Miss Gertrude Butzer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William A. Butzer, of Bloomfield, and Miss Martha Rutzer Bloomfield, and Mrs. Martha Rutzer Butzer, of Picton.

TWEEDY—WRIGHT

On Saturday afternoon, 17th, at 12.30, the Bayside Parsonage by Rev. J. A. Plant, was united in marriage Miss Ethel Wright, daughter of Myrtle Amelia, only daughter of Mrs. Myrtle Amelia Wright of Hillcrest Park, became the bride of Kenneth Arthur Tweedy, youngest son of Mrs. Arthur Tweedy, of Tweedy, of Thurlow.

The bride was becomingly attired in fawn crepe, trimmed with satin of the same shade. She wore a fawn felt hat and brown shoes. The immediate relatives and a few friends were present.

Mr. Bert Wright and Miss Edna Morrison were attendants.

After the ceremony the bride and groom left amid showers of confetti on a honeymoon to Toronto, Callander and North Bay, the bride travelling in a fawn dress with brown accessories.

On their return the happy couple will reside at the groom's home in Thurlow.

Advice to the Lovelorn

(Copyright, 1935, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Husband Objects to Beauty Parlor Treatments.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

My wife is a treasure, neat, orderly and a good cook. I like to take her out to see my friends, as she has a cwaift in me. The only fly in the domestic ointment is the amount of money she spends in beauty parlors. She has a permanent wave every six months and what she calls a wave-set every two weeks. This costs a dollar. She also has manicures and facials.

Her argument is that as long as she does all the housework and is most economical, that she should have these beauty parlor treatments.

Questioning Husband

You wife keeps house economically and saves you a servant's wages. You enjoy going out with her and she looks pretty when you go sociably. Then why if you object to the money she spends in making you proud of her? If you object on moral grounds by objecting to the beauty parlor and turning her into a dowdy, she will not represent you so well, and in addition you'll be less pampered, and lose her skill in cooking and housekeeping.

They Feel Left Out of the Fun

Dear Miss Fairfax:

We are two young girls in a crowd where there are many girls than boys. The girls who have "steadies" find the evening and we are left out of a good many of them. When we go to a party, we get no spooning from the boys,

Livestock

Toronto, Aug. 19.—(CP)— The Toronto livestock market was off to a weak opening today with hot enough cattle sales to establish prices, calves 50 cents lower and hogs, sheep and lambs unsettled. Weight and of the showing was an indication of a 50-cent advance on lambs.

Receipts reported by the Dominion Livestock Branch were: Cattle, 4,200; calves, 1,175; hogs 550; sheep and lambs 548.

The cattle run included 3,300 westerns, mostly stockers. Bids on the division were lower. A few good cows brought $2.00 while fed calves brought $8.00 to $8.50. Stockers were active at $3.50 to $4.50.

HOGS

Toronto, Aug. 19.—(CP) — A 15-cent loss at Barrie was the only change on bacon hog levels from reporting market points today. Other points held steady at last week's close. Prices:

Chatham 10; Hull, 9; St. Thomas, 10; Kingston 9.50; Barrie 9.35; Woodstock 9.50; Stratford 9.50; London 9.50.

Board Room Gossip

As supplied to Bongard and Crawford by Financial Service.

Action of the Wall Street market during and after the trading sessions of the past week or so has suggested something akin to a state of indigestion a natural development following the extended rise since the spring. An extension of the trading period over the near term would be by no means surprising, and even marked irregularity here and there should on occasion no cause for general alarm. Corporate earnings, dividends and money rates are the factors which play the most important parts in the determination of security prices, and in spite of these directions does there appear to exist the ingredients for any protracted decline in stocks, regardless of whatever technical and temporary shakeouts may be seen. Indications are that the business improvement for the last half of the year still has much further to go before reaching its peak, and third quarter earnings should show striking gains over those of the same period or last year. This is not the case of stocks which experience for important liquidation in the share market.

Comparison of current prices of a number of the blue chip stocks in the New York with the quotations prevailing in more normal periods —such as 1926—considering the size of the per share earnings then and now, seems clearly to indicate that the bulk of the best grade issues now are being held up in price more by yields than by earnings. But the appearance of an upward movement in money would, according to all precedents, indicate as a reflection of further expanding business profits. With the latter being translated into higher corporate profits and dividends, most of the standard issues would doubtless be worth more than their present quotations even when without the supporting prop of an extremely easy money market. The same fundamentals, of course, are favorable to bonds.

BUTTER OUTPUT SHOWS BIG GAIN

Production of creamery butter in Ontario for July as estimated by the Provincial Department of Agriculture, showed an increase of 12.98 per cent. over production for July, 1934. Total production last month was 12,262,642 pounds, as compared with 9,856,610 a year ago. Production of creamery butter from Jan. 1 to July 31, 1935, was 76,455,258 pounds, compared with 46,756,182 pounds for the corresponding period last year, an increase of 3.74 per cent.

Many Ayrshires Went to States

During the period March 15 to July 31, 1935, United States farmers purchased 1,292 head of purebred Canadian Ayrshires. This total compared with a total of 1,533 during the entire year 1934. These cattle were distributed as follows: Vermont 588, New York 465, Massachusetts 250, other states 83.

Amongst the largest purchasers were A. H. Hatch of Granby, Que., with 115 head and Alta Crest Farms, Spencer, Mass., with 62 head.

Nine hundred and twenty-three of these cattle were purchased in the Province of Quebec, 436 in Ontario and 10 in the Maritime Provinces.

Toronto, Aug. 19 (CP)—Renewal of war threats and an advance in the export copper price stirred up considerable action in the base metal shares of the Toronto Mining List today and gains were general throughout the group. Gold shares were weak in spots and the silver issues were barely firm. Aggregate volume was around the best for the summer.

Encouraged by an advance in the export copper quotation and a better London quotation on most other metals, Base Metal Corporation gained 10 to 15 cents during a heavy turnover in which the higher price group, Falconbridge was 7 cents to 6.45, and Noranda 1-4 to 38 1-2. Sudbury Basin added 5 cents, selling at 1.40.

Silver stocks were steady with Beaver Consolidated and Coniagas the solids had both soft and firm spots, Little Long Lac advanced 15 cents and McWatters, Central Patricia, Goch's Lake and Macassa were steady. Dome Mines was off 5 at the first hour but slipped later to show a net loss of 2 cents at 2.81.

TORONTO STOCKS CLOSE

Toronto, Aug. 19.—(CP) Industrial stocks turned weak this afternoon on the Toronto Exchange as a period of development on the New York Board. Distillers-Seagrams weakened to 37 1-2 after opening slightly closing with a loss of about 3-4 points at 34 1-4. Brewers were weak, took a loss of more than a point while Canada Malting fell slightly. The Oil group as well as the Metals and Ford A lost fractionally.

A weak tone ruled in the Oil group, Imperial Oil declined on a rallying Imperial back to 19 7-8 and International Petroleum to 15 3-4. The Liquor issues were barely firm, Distillers Seagrams held to 37 1-2 while Brewers Associated gained about 7-4. Recessions had the edge on gains over the Board by a small margin.

The two big Metal stocks, Nickel and Smelters, were weak in spite of a new advance in the export Copper price and a firm tone in the London market. Nickel lost 1 point at 36, a gain of 1-4. Smelters was up better than two points and Nickel held around 29. up 3-4.

NEW YORK CLOSE

New York, Aug. 19 (AP)—Steels, coppers and various specialties were the best performance in today's market. Transportations, a majority of new highs for the year were reported the utilities and rails exhibited little change.

Issues up fractionally to around an initial point or more included U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Anaconda, Kennecott, Phelps-Dodge, American Smelting, DuPont and Auburn. A decline of around a points was registered by Atlantic Pacific and among losers of a point or so were American Telephone, Public Serv. and Consol. Edisoldated Gas. American Water Works, Columbia Gas, N. Y. Central and Delaware and Hudson. The list moved steady. The last hour was irregular. Transfers approximated 1,700,000 shares.

WALL STREET FINANCIAL

New York, Aug. 19 (AP)—Selected stocks today showed a market on a generally firm foundation in today's session.

Among stocks of Canadian companies, a steady trend prevailed in Dome, International Nickel and Canadian Pacific. On the curb, Canada Northern Power Gained. Dominion Government Bonds were steady. Canadian funds improved 1-32 of a cent at 99 3-4 cents.

Share gainers of fractions to around a point or more included U.S. Steel, Commonwealth & Southern, S. Pipe & Foundry, Republic Steel, Am. Smelting, American Smelting Corp., Du Pont, Phelps-Dodge, Wright Aeronautical, Bendix, Amerada, Standard Oil of New Jersey and Socony-Vacuum.

Union Pacific dropped 2 and American Telephone Consolidated Gas, Public Service of New Jersey, American Water Works, North American, N.Y. Central, Northern Pacific and Delaware & Hudson were soft.

LONDON MOTION PASSED IS READ

Buyers Against Paying Five Cents Per Pound Levy to Producers

Again the matter of the five cent per hundredweight tax on all cheese purchased by registered buyers engaged the attention of members of the Belleville Cheese Board as their regular Saturday meeting.

The reading of a communication by Mr. James Cook buyer, received by him from the London Dairymen's Exchange, London, Ontario, in which was set out the motion by J. W. Boyce and seconded by Arle Writer of that exchange, is reproduced. It was supported by at least two buyers on the Board.

"Knowing that the English market, which takes around 70 per cent. of our production at a premium in the world markets, will not accept a levy of five cents per hundredweight of cheese, and—

"Knowing that the Canadian export business with its hazards of marketing and its method of financing which at present bring prompt cash returns to the cheese factories and their patrons cannot afford to absorb such a levy, we are forced to the logical conclusion that a levy of five cents per hundredweight of cheese will eventually be paid by the farmer in proportionally lower returns, which will result from such a levy, and

"Realizing that as individuals we will have no control over the expenditure of funds arising from such levy, be it resolved:

"That we consider a levy of five cents per hundredweight of cheese to be unsound, unbusinesslike and to the detriment of the farmer's interests.

"We hereby request that such a levy be abolished.

"That a copy of this resolution be sent to Premier Bennett, the Hon. Mr. Weir, Minister of Agriculture, the Hon. Donald Sutherland, Woodstock, and to the secretary of each cheese board, and to the agricultural papers published in Ontario."

A previous communication received from the Provincial Cheese Company by Mr. Cooke from Woodstock, pointed out, that the London Board held on August 16, had an offering of 1,000 boxes of cheese, which were sold at 9 11-16c, "so you can see that we are taking the 1-16th of a cent for the company."

"We had considerable discussion," the communication continues, "about the levy and the attached resolution (the above) was passed, with all assenters and buyers voting for the resolution with the exception of one salesman, and he did not oppose it. The secretary was instructed to send a copy of this resolution to all the secretaries of the cheese boards, as well as the Premier, the Minister of Agriculture and/or other members of Parliament representing dairy countries."

Eliminates Compromise Clause

Immediately following the reading of the letter from Woodstock, Mr. Cooke, Mr. McCreary, pointing out, that any competition he was willing to bring to the local Board had now been eliminated through the fact, that the star had been taken on his customer; the customer had refused to accept more", moved, and was seconded by the government, asking that they be instructed where the Belleville Cheese Patrons' Association got the 75 per cent production to qualify under the new regulations law. We're in favor of that association. We are not in favor of their methods," declared Mr. Cook. "They have all the powers in the world, but they're forcing his hearers.

Mention was requested by President Morrow of the local Board to attend the next Saturday session one half hour earlier so that they might enjoy a brief outing. Mr. H. V. Ellsey who has just returned from a trip to the Old Country where he has been studying that study of marketing conditions, particularly as they applied to the cheese industry in this district, Mr. Ellsey will undoubtedly have interesting points in his address promised next week.

Cards Win Series from Giants But Lose Advantage by Splitting With the Braves

Detroit Wins First Two Games in Series With Yanks

ROWE IS TOPS

Tiger Hurler Back to Form of Last Year

By HUGH S. FULLERTON, JR.
Associated Press Sports Writer

Dollys the Giants, who are still having their troubles and plenty of them although they escaped from their struggle with St. Louis with the greater portion of their slender lead untouched, Detroit Tigers are having just a gentle canter toward the pennant so far as their series with the second-place New York Yankees is concerned.

The Tigers have won the first two games of the clash with their leading contenders, rollicking through to an easy 6-0 triumph behind Schoolboy Rowe yesterday after pulling out a 10-inning decision Saturday. That gave them an eight game lead with just six weeks to go before the season closes. The Giants aren't that far ahead of the four-place Pittsburgh Pirates in their league.

The Cards took the edge in the big series Saturday but lost most of the advantage Sunday afternoon when they could get no better than an even break in a twin bill with the lowly Boston Braves, while New York pounded out an 8-4 triumph over the Reds. The third-place Chicago Cubs also split even in a bill with Phillies and as a result the Giants led St. Louis by 8 1-2 games and Chicago by three.

Lefty Clouts Homer

The closing of Hank Leiber, who made four extra-base blows paced the Giants to yesterday's victory, while Carl Hubbell rang up his 17th record triumph. Meanwhile Ival Goodman Frankhouse limited the Cards to six hits and aided his two runs to beat the Cards 2-1 in the opener. St. Louis had to go 10 innings to win the afternoon but did it 8-4, when Leo Durocher belted a homer with the bases full to break a deadlock. The Cubs each bowled over the Phils 8-2 in the opener but lost 8-5 when the home team rallied for four runs off Larry French in the seventh.

To intensify the contrast between the two races, Detroit's Schoolboy Rowe withstood the Yankees with three hits in their second clash and romped off a big day for the new-now crowd of 39,000 by belting a home run. He did all his slugging in the pinch-hit hurl when he got in front of Earl Combs' liner in the second inning.

Dodgers Trim Pirates

The hitherto hapless Brooklyn Dodgers provided the day's sensation among the lower ranking clubs, all of which were knotted for doubleheaders. They trimmed the Pirates twice, 3-2 and 4-2. Whitey Clark cracked all the Bucs except Arky Vaughan as he buried a three-bit shutout in the second game, and his mates took charge and smacked out 16 hits in the afternoon battle, doing some record fielding. Jimmy Jorgan handled 11 assists at second to tie the major league standard. Vaughan, l e a gue leading clouter, bettered his .400 average with four hits in six times up.

The Athletic-White Sox bargain bill was rained out soon after the start. The Red Sox and Browns broke even, Boston taking the opener 8-3 with a three-run rally in the ninth and St. Louis the afternoon tilt 4-3. Washington turned back Cleveland 4-3 in a thrilling first clash, when Heinie Manush doubled with two aboard but the Indians opened up in the second and belted out a 13-4 decision.

ROYALS STAY OUT IN FRONT

Win Both End of a Double Bill From The Newark Team

By The Associated Press

Montreal's Royals added on by the pace being set by Buffalo and Syracuse, have turned on the heat themselves in relation to the rest in International League.

The Royals took both ends of a double bill yesterday to win their fourth straight game and widen their eighth win in their last nine starts.

They beat Newark Bears 3-3 and 4-1 to broaden their lead over the Bisons to three full games. The Bisons now trails the Bisons by one-half game.

Leon Chagnon pitched his second straight victory for the league leaders, limiting the Bears to eight hits in the first game and blanking them until the eighth inning. Chet Brewer obliged with a homer in the second game, Chad Kimsey registered his 15th victory of the season, giving the Bears but four safe blows.

The Bisons won a single game, hits in two contests.

beating Toronto Maple Leafs in 10 innings 8-7. It was the Bisons fifth win in a row and their 12th victory out of the last 13 starts.

Although the Leafs lost, Schumerich was the big man of the day, clouting in four runs with two home-runs and scoring another after getting a double.

A double by Flint Rhem, third Syracuse pitcher to see action, scored Sarina in the eighth inning and gave the Chiefs their margin of victory in the nightcap game with Albany Senators, after the Chiefs had annexed the first game by the score of 16-5. The score of the first game was 3-4.

The Chiefs went into the last of the seventh trailing 4-3 but with two out Kroner hit a homer over the left field wall to tie the score and send the game into an extra inning.

Baltimore copped the series from Rochester Red Wings as Bill Lohman pitched the Birds to a 6-1 triumph in the nightcap after Ray Harrell blanked the Orioles in the opener 1-0. Harrell yielded only four hits and fanned Purcell, the league's leading batter, three times.

CURRENT SPORT
DAY BY DAY

Regardless as to whether the O. A. A. reinstate the Belleville and Trenton softball loops or not, those two bodies are going to carry out the provincial body's bulletin and play-off regardless. This evening the Asjmass, winners of the local loop journey to Trenton for the first inter-league game with the return match being played locally on Wednesday. Manager Glen Bowler was in conference with the Trenton moguls over the week end and arrangements have been completed. Incidentally we understand that the local softball executive was in close communication with the parent body on Saturday and it seems that the differences between them, two bodies will soon be clarified and all may be happy today in surrounding softball circles once again, then of course there's the Mercanille play-offs tonight.

Just as the Belleville Kiwanis Juniors were ready to depart for Picton on Saturday afternoon a message was received to the effect that the Kiwanis baseball-softball twilight game had been called off, no reasons were given. Could it be that the Picton-Bloomfield-Hicks aggregation smelled a defeat at the hands of the local kids, Tenservice affiliated the Picton and Belleville intermediate clubs launch upon the Bay of Quinte League intermediate playdowns in the Prince Edward County seat with the return game being played in Belleville on Friday at twilight. Manager Fanning has Carl Caser, Ernie Smith and Phil Loft ready to step to the hillies and Behind the Flinging Neutral umpires are being used for this series, George Baker of Gananoque at the plate and Walter Gerow cavorting about calling 'em on the bases.

For those citizens interested in the formation of an O.R.P.U. team in Belleville a meeting is being held at the Y.M.C.A. this evening. On Friday last, nine interested citizens convened and stamped their approval on the subject, but seemed desirous of adding to their numbers. Citizens interested in football are cordially invited, not particularly as players, but interested enough at large. Up at the R.C.A.F. they are holding their annual field day on Wednesday afternoon. The usual track, field and gymkhana program has been arranged, with open event, included. High in the midst of yesterday's heat a sport fan hailed us and asked—"Is it right they are playing hockey in the artificial ice arena where it is nice and cool?"—justifiable homicide—we'd say.

When Secretary Newt Thompson writes us relative to the league's proposed all-star game, we later get in touch with him in regards to a few points that needed attention. For instance Newt asked for two pitchers and eight other players. The first question we popped out of the bag was—"Say fellow, what if your all-star catcher should be injured or one of the infielders become sick, what are you going to do in the midst of an all-star game with only one substitute sitting on the bench then-" Newt knows all of the answers and politely says he'll have the answer to us before it even got cool, I talked it over with President Swanston and he thought it a good idea, and I immediately rushed out and contacted Manager Chris Carr, certainly pick a regular team with a manager and all, name two or three pitchers but be sure and make a first choice as the starting pitcher of the day. A catcher and also one for the second-string catcher. An extra infielder and spare outfielder would be a good idea also," added Newt. Due to the fact that this game has been sponsored by league officials we are stepping beyond our bounds and naming President Max Swanston as the Manager of the proposed all-star team at this point. "Sweazy" has gone through all phases of baseball from being an outstanding player, up to manager and then continuing until today he is the leading and guiding light of the flourishing C.O.B.L., as its president. "Max Swanston for the manager of the all-star team" is our first choice.

Secretary Thompson announced today, that Kingston would play their postponed game in Belleville on Wednesday at 5.00 p.m. If the Petes win this game, then the Petes have to return to Kingston for a second postponed game to be played possibly on Friday, but if the Petes win on Wednesday, well there'll be no game in Kingston as the Leo men will have sufficient advantage to win regardless as to the outcome of any future games. If the Petes win the Central league play-offs may have to commence immediately as both Kingston and Belleville Fairs will be in progress next week, thereby eliminating any chances of playing-off from the 26th to the 30th.

Although it has not been announced officially we understand that Dennis Kerr has won the National Billiard Pastor's large silver jubilee trophy to be presented to the player attaining the highest batting average in major baseball circles each and every year. The trophy donated by Jim and George stands some 36 inches high and is well worth blasting out base hits for its possession. The cup is a challenge trophy and is to be competed for annually. Although Kerr's actual batting average has not been officially announced as yet, we understand it is the highest batting aggregate enjoyed by any member of the Stewart-Warners for 1935.

During the progress of last Friday's Kingston at Belleville senior game it was clearly demonstrated, that twilight baseball cannot be successfully played in this town at this time of the year. The shadows cast across the infield were continually causing the infielders to misjudge the ball, while at first base it is humanly impossible to see a ball thrown from around the short stop position. The initial sacker having to look directly into the rays of a strong setting sun. As daylight saving ends at mid-night next Saturday, doubtlessly all future games played in Belleville will be of the afternoon nature, which is as should be.

Regatta's Have Charm

Elisabeth and Anne Korke

There are certain charming angles which add interest to midsummer regattas here and there. For instance, Elisabeth, LEFT, and Anne Korke, of Cleveland, were two of the 50 girls competing in the Harvard summer school regatta on the Charles river at Cambridge, Mass.

PROFITABLE TRIP

FREDDIE MILLER

Just back from Europe after many victories, poses in his fighting stance. He won a long series of bouts "over there" and profited by about $30,000.

COAST THREAT

Another threat to eastern Canadian rowing supremacy is rising in the west—from which Monte Butler and Johnny Dickinson recently emerged to capture several Canadian Henley events—in the person of Tom Townley, 21-year-old six footer who won the single sculls championship at the Pacific northwest regatta. He has been on the water only a year but shows much promise.

YESTERDAY'S STARS

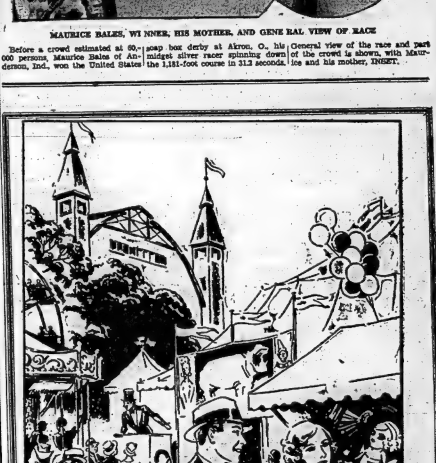
Chuck Klein, Cubs: Smacked 20th homer, triple, double and single in double-header against Phillies.

Fritz Ostermuller, Red Sox, and Rollie Hemsley, Browns: Former pitched five hit game; latter made three blows and drove in winning run in second game.



Fred Frankhouse, Braves, and Leo Durocher, Cardinals: Frankhouse outpitched Paul Dean to take first game; Durocher's tenth inning homer with bases full won second.

CHAPTER XIX

"Up thought's been with me every moment—since last night.

"Why should I hang for Bannister Coote?

"As he is best one, now that he's dead? Have I to give you up and go under? Bannister was a crook and a scoundrel, he did me pretty nearly every wrong a man could, but Lord knows I never meant to kill him. It was a fight—a rough-house, the sort of it was just—accident.

"Who would ever believe that? Whose word is there for it but mine? And what possible chance will I stand with an English jury? I get away with it. Here, never. Don't you see the verdict's a certainty. There's only one they could give.

"Facing the facts, it means a hanging, or a life sentence. There's one chance and it's pretty slim. In France, or the States, I might that they can be got to before I didn't go after Bannister with the intent to kill him—that there really was a fight. Then I might get off with a stiff sixteen for manslaughter. No judge would turn me loose with anything less than that.

"I step into Bannister's shoes: it couldn't be done. And the best seven years of living death; and damned to his anyway. At the worst, the rope. I've got me to a last stick — If I cut out that stick, and give myself up."

Sonia's face was deadly white. What he was saying her, she had told herself already. She knew he was right. Suddenly she slid her arm round him and drew him close.

"I can't lose you Brian—I can't if they parted us tonight—"

"They won't. Let the police play their hand; I'll play mine. No one's going to beat me. I'll fight the thing through. Only remember, I'll give my eyes if Howe hadn't tackled you first; that's the only thing I'm afraid of. If there's any chance of livable life for you, I shall hand myself over to them at once. You've got to stand clear of it, from now on."

"Clear of nothing!" she said. "Let's get this thing straight. You can't do without me. I'm standing by you. I know you'd stand on chance with a boy. I don't believe the police are looking for you at all—though I've seen Howe, and they're plenty to keep them busy. The awful part of it is that I should have betrayed you. Something's happened to me—there's something behind all this that neither of us have even guessed at, Brian. I'd never have dared to believe you to take such a course as this, desperate as it looked. The risk's too great."

"I'm taking some risk, I know. But any risk's better than a certainty. I hold good cards and I'm a good player. If Pete has stacked the cards for me, it is my fault. Damn the Cooke money, I'm not playing for that. For me and liberty, and you! I won't go under. How then, quick—is there anything more before I get off to face the rural policeman Howe who's waiting for me with his bicycle hanging out?—if he suspects me to return at all. It's high time I was away."

"Stop, Brian! There's one thing more. You're armed, aren't you? You carry a gun?"

He stared at her.

"Yes," he said slowly. "How did you know?"

"Never mind how I know—you may hear about that later. Brian, when I was leaving the mine last night, after the thing happened, I saw what I believe was the flash of a pistol; heard it too. What do you know about that?"

"I should say you dreamed it."

"Did I? I dreamed of nothing else last night but the run. But give me your gun, I want to see it."

"What—"

"Because I do." She stamped her foot. "Brian, that pistol, I tell you! I don't move from here till you do."

There was no resisting Sonia. He reached for the heavy .44 Army revolver and produced it without a word. It was hardly out before she took it from his hand.

"Careful," he said, "you shouldn't handle a loaded gun."

She put her little finger-tip gingerly inside the muzzle; it came away clean.

"How d'you open the thing?"

Reluctantly, as she insisted, he pressed the catch for the end piece, and the barrel swung down. He saw the six cartridge bulbs complete in a neat circle round the drum. Five of them were still—but had been—struck with, just to the right of the barrel, the hard, the direct fire of bright new copper shell tight round the rim of lead pellet; an ugly thing, lying naked in her white palm under the dim light of the car's dashlamp.

"I don't know much about guns," she said, "but why is this copper shell so new, when the others are old? When did you put it in? When did you last fire this gun?" she hesitated. "Don't say you don't remember, because you do."

"It was on the ship. Some of us started plugging at bobbing cork in the crowded over the side for fun, till the captain stopped it. I had one shot."

"Did you hit the bottle"?

"Yes, I did."

"I remember I heard somebody shooting. That's a week ago, isn't it? It looks to me as if the barrel had just been cleaned; it's as bright inside as a new pin. Did you clean it and reload it on the ship?"

"No, if you want to know, I didn't. I thought I had. But this morning when I looked at it I found I hadn't. So I cleaned it up and shoved another cartridge in before coming away."

"Why?"

"Because, the way things are, a spent shell in a gun is no use to anybody, and looks bad. It seemed the best thing to do."

"I'll say it would!"

"Look here, Sonia, what's the idea? Why are you questioning me like this—what are you driving at?"

"Brian," she said quietly, "you kept the fact of Bannister's death from me, till I got it out of you. You aren't keeping anything from me now are you? Because that's hopeless and it'll mean disaster. On your honour?"

"I've told you everything. Everything! What do you mean by talking about honour. Do you think I'm lying to you?"

She shook her head.

"I don't. If I did it wouldn't be any use going on, Brian, I had to ask you. It's a matter of life and death we're dealing with. Look here—that pistol shot—I saw it with my own eyes—is evidence in your favor, for you didn't fire it. Isn't it safer for you after all, to put all this up to the police?"

"No," he said "how can I? You'd have to put it up to them. It's not in my favor but against it. You can't tell them that without giving everything else away, and yourself, too. You handed me over a double certainty, and once arrested I'm helpless and you'd be left to face it out on your own. I'd be charged with murdering Bannister, there'd be no getting away from that. Not by shooting him — of course I didn't shoot him.

"Whether there's anything in this pistol-shot story of yours I don't know. Sonia, have you some theory in your mind that Bannister was was shot—God knows how or when—and that this proof of it would relieve me? Think a moment and you'll see it's impossible—"

"I'm not suggesting Bannister wasn't shot. That I'm clear about. But what about Barker and Selby. Both of them are missing."

"Do you see that?" he said, reaching for the fire-bucket thing, slipping quickly out of the car and clanking the door to.

"You won't get that back," said Sonia, and turned it over her head-bag. "You mustn't meet Howe with a gun anywhere about you. Don't worry about it, the police either —I'll look after that."

"Sonia—!"

"Don't argue with me—get along back to the village. Drive me home and I'll walk—we can't go together. And don't switch on your lights till you've turned into the main road."

She mounted the running-board, and pulling Brian's face to hers, suddenly kissed him full on the lips.

"Good luck, Brian!" she said with a break in her voice, and, jumping off, ran back through the wood.

Brian drove through the village street, turned his car into the yard of the Ring o' Bells, and passed straight through into the little back parlor. He only occupied was Mary Stubbings, on her knees before the hearth, sweeping up the ashes, the glow of the fire shining on her red hair. She leaped up with a startled face.

"Mr. Chalmers! I been looking after that young lady of yours, same as you told me. I dunno what she'd have done, if you hadn't come back!"

"Why shouldn't I come back Mary?" said Brian, hanging up his cap. "Didn't I say I would?"

"Lord save us, you look like a ghost! Been down with fever, you? Dyou know what they're sayin' sir, Mr. Cooke's—that he was murdered!"

He turned to face her.

"Reminisce!"

"And that you had a row with him last night? I thought he'd killed by the arm. "You dunno what's been doing here since you left, sir; said the girl under her breath, "—it's been awful. I've been all dumbfounded. She began to pour out a rapid, but coherent account of the facts as she knew them, while Mary had scarcely got started when the shock of the arrival of the murder. The door handle gently turned and Inspector Howe stepped into the imposing figure. He paused in the doorway, looking at the couple. His handsome face was sternly inconsolous except for a grim gleam of satisfaction in his eye.

"Every way I turn in this case," said Howe, "I find the hand of murder used. You know that on my cousin's death I inherit everything he had; everybody knows it ....Before I talk I must have the facts from you. What's it all about?"

"I'll give you the bare facts" said Howe. "Then it will be up to you to answer my questions."

Briefly and clearly he described the finding of Bannister Coote's body, and its condition.

"That's as much as I can tell you now. I'd like to have an account of your movements yesterday. Let me give you, Mr. Chalmers, to tell me —everything. I've had some of it from Miss Neil. You said it was a serious case," said Howe grimly.

"Believe me—it is."

"There's an error about that," said Brian "Right from the start there's ugly business; I'd give a great deal if it could end in this room and never go outside it. You've got to have the whole story, and it begins on the Armenia. Listen."

"I'd gave it in detail; the spying of Sam Barber, his own errand on Coote's orders, his return to King's Rim, his encounter with Sonia there, the scene with Bannister. He did not omit the story of the clock Diamond, as Sonia had one. He gave a full account of the quarrel, the exit to the inn with Sonia.... and his departure for London. The telling took an hour; it was complete to the last word—save only for his journey to the Sanctuary Mine.

This called the attention of the two behind the airplane to the newcomer. They saw Numa leap from the cockpit and advance upon Tarzan. The ape-man, carrying his tool spear in readiness, moved deliberately forward. They saw the man and lion stop simultaneously not more than a yard apart.

The beast's tail whipped from side to side as deep-throated growls rumbled from his cavernous chest. And then the great black-maned lion charged. To have attempted to meet the full force of that charge would have been suicidal. Instead, Tarzan resorted to methods of agility and cunning.

With outspread, raking talons and bared fangs, Numa sprang for the naked chest of the ape-man. Throwing up his left arm to fend the fierce might of the lion struck upward beneath the left forearm of the lion, at the same time running in with his shoulder beneath the animal's body.

Little Benny's Note Book

We was eating supper, being lives and onions in pop's honor, and me said. While I think of it, Willyum, Mr. Clarges would very much appreciate it if you wrote him a letter of recommendation.

Mr. Who? pop said, and ma said, Mr. Clarges, and pop said, I never heard of him.

Of course you have, silly, he's the man that just whitewashed the cellr, ma said. Mr. Sewerd has been too busy so he sent this frend of his. It seems Mr. Clarges hasn't got a regular clientele - like Mr. Sewerd and he thinks a nice letter of recommendation mite help him to get other jobs. And naturally a letter from a man would seem more like, so that's why he'd like you to write it, ma said, and pop said, by golliee this Clarges must be a fine man that wuld go me out of a sound sleep singing at the top of his voice out in the back yard yesterday morning. Is that what he'd like to be recommended for the despoiles of innocent slumber? pop said.

Now Willyum, isn't it better to be woke up by somebody singing happily than by somebody complaining bitterly about imaginerry grievs and woes? ma said, and pop said, It's better to be allowed to sleep undisturbed by somebody preparing a decent silents befitting the time and place. However, if you can induce me to eat another helpful of this liver and onions I'm sure I shall be wax in your hands, he said.

And he ate some more without being induced, and after supper me took a piece of paper to write the recommendation on. Which he started being. To hoten it progressed without even having inspected his handywerk. I can testify from personal experience that Mr. Clarges's whitewashing is so much more attractive than his singing as to leave no room for comparison, Willyum P. Potts.

The result being ma bre it up and wrote one herself being. To hoten grieb and woes was said, and pop washed my collar with complete satisfaction and no after mess. Mrs. W. P. Potts. . .

TIN CAN TOURISTS HOLD REUNION

Organization Composed of 35,000 'Motor Gypsies' Meets in Michigan Camp

The Tin Can Tourists of the world—nearly 600 of them—moved their "land yachts" into the municipal tourist camp at Grand Rapids, Mich., recently for their annual summer reunion.

The members of the organization are nomads de luxe with whom the automobile road map is a best seller and whose homes are wherever they can park a car. James A. Smith of Dorpell, N.Y., Royal Chief of the TCT, boasts that "I've only slept in a house four times in the past six years."

The TCT membership rolls contain 35,000 names, and the members think nothing of crossing the continent several times during a year, wintering in Florida or California and summering in Michigan, Maine or Oregon, says The Associated Press.

During the seven-day program the tourists will exchange experiences, engage in sports, listen to concerts and speeches and inspect the very latest designs in automobile trailers—creations which are a far cry from the flat, box-shaped affairs that clutch on the rear of automobiles in years gone by.

The delegates descended on Grand Rapids in high-powered automobiles drawing stream-lined trailers which are complete with ice-boxes, radios, comfortable beds, stove and libraries in which a family can, and does, live from one year to the next. Some of the outfits have bumped over the back roads of Canada, Mexico and the United States for more than five years and are still going strong.

The TCT has for its slogan, "No fees, no dues, no graft," and its motto is the Golden Rule. The members are fiercely proud of their organization.

"We look a lot like gypsies to start with and we've made it mean something," Smith explains. "That is quite different from taking a serious, high-sounding title and having it fall down on you."

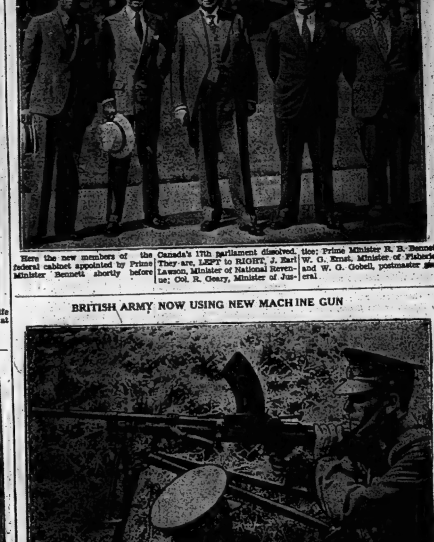
KLONDIKE KATE GOES BACK TO THE LAND OF HER YOUTH

By CENTRAL PRESS-CANADIAN

Vancouver, Aug. 19— Klondike Kate, the former dance hall girl of the north whose romance and wedding created wide interest here in 1923, is on her way back to the Yukon.

She has settled up her affairs in Oregon and passed through Vancouver recently en route to her new home in Whitehorse where she will live with John Matson, prospector husband, who won her hand on a brief visit "out" two years ago. He had been an admirer of hers for years and their friendship soon blossomed into romance.

Kate, as she was known to all and sundry, was a blue-eyed girl of 30, slim, svelte, with a magnetic personality and a rare gift for smiling in the face of difficulties when she first met John Matson nearly forty years ago. When she went "out" he wrote to her and the correspondence led to a meeting and marriage.



Men of the old days see little change in Mrs. Matson, as she is now, from the days when she was a girl. The blue-gray eyes are as bright. They smile as piquantly as ever.

DEATH STALKED OVER ALL CANADA

29 Drowned, Besides The Deaths From Other Causes

(By The Canadian Press)

Death stalked grimly over Eastern Canada's roads and waterways from Prince Edward Island to North-western Ontario during one of the hottest week-ends of the summer and took a total of 61 lives, 29 of them by drowning.

Every eastern province figured in the tabulation of the tragic results accompanying efforts of sweltering easterners to escape blistering heat. The west reported no fatalities. Ontario led with 17. There were 13 lives lost in the Maritimes, 12 in Quebec.

Multiple drownings occurred in all but Prince Edward Island. Three men, who could not swim, lost their lives at Rice Lake, north of Port Hope, Ontario. Three more drowned in four-and-one-half feet of water in Missisquoi Bay, Lake Champlain, Quebec and two girls were drowned at Wedgeport, N.S., trying to save a bather's companion.

Five children perished in Heath near Edmundston, N.B., when their farm home was consumed by flames. A level crossing accident near London, Ontario, brought death to a man and his wife. Trains killed two men in Ontario and shooting accidents in Quebec and Ontario took another two lives.

Altogether there were eight drowned in the Maritimes, 10 in Quebec and 11 in Ontario.

Close Shave

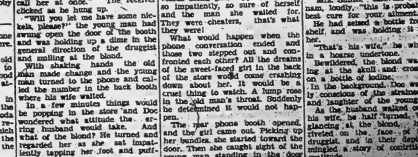
By JOSEPH M. GRAHAM

She was young and very pretty. Almost hidden by an armful of packages she lowered them long enough to smile at the old druggist who smiled back, — reminded suddenly of some one also young and fair who used to smile at him that way many years ago.

"May I have two nickels?" she asked laying a ten-cent piece on the counter. "I'd like to telephone."



"Certainly," said Doc Putnam cheerfully, adding "We have two telephone booths, one in the rear and one at the front. Take your choice".

"I'll take the one in the rear," she smiled, gathering her bundles together.

"I'll see you use," the druggist's eyes twinkled, "I can hear everything you say."

Laughing gaily, she entered the booth. As she called the number, Doc listened idly. Some lucky young husband was about to be called, he guessed, perhaps informed that dinner would be late because his darling had been delayed while shopping. Doc enjoyed cataloguing the people who passed in and out of his drug store day after day and generally his guesses were right.

"Is this Bishop 7-3233?" the girl was speaking. This is Mary. Yes, John was supposed to phone me at exactly five o'clock and he never—he hasn't—and I'm left led by the girl in the red phone booth.

"This is John, is Mary there?" The young man's voice was easily distinguishable to old Doc Putnam.

"Yes, yes," the voice was suddenly impatient, "Let me have the number. O. K. Thanks. Good, I'll call her at once. The receiver clicked as he hung up.

"Will you let me have some nickels, please?" the young man had appeared between the two of them and was holding up a dime in the general direction of the druggist and smiling at the blond.

With shaking hands the old man made change and the young man turned to the phone and called the number in the back booth where his wife waited.

In a few minutes things would be popping in the store and Doc wondered what attitude the striking husband would take. And what of the blond? He turned and regarded her as she sat impatiently tapping her foot and puffing a cigarette.

But the telephone conversation broke in on his thoughts.

"Hello, Mary, this John? Yes, yes, I know, I'm very sorry, but I won't get home until late — delayed downtown, you know."

There was a pause. "I know I promised but—"

Suddenly Doc Putnam was angry. Suddenly he heard the frivolous blond girl, tapping her foot so impatiently, so sure of herself and the man she wailed for. They were cheaters, that's what they were!

What would happen when the phone conversation ended and those two stepped out and confronted each other? All the dreams of the sweet-faced girl in the back of the store would come crashing down about her. It would be a cruel thing to watch. A hurt crushing husband would take. And what of the blond? He turned and regarded her as she sat impatiently tapping her foot and puffing a cigarette.

Suddenly he stiffened to attention. It was the same number as

"Why, John—" her laughter bubbled out—"What a coincidence! You were in that phone booth all the time?"

"Mary!" His voice was astonished and frightened.

The blond who had been staring as the girl indignantly, stepped forward. But a firm hand grasped her arm.

"Mrs. Smith," said old Doc Putnam, loudly, "this is probably the best cure for your ailment."

He had seized a bottle from the shelf and was holding it before her.

"That's his wife," he whispered in a hoarse undertone.

Bewildered, the blond was staring at the skull and cross-bones on a bottle of iodine.

In the background, Doc was dimly conscious of the strained voice and laughter of the young man.

As the husband walked out with his wife, he half turned, Without glancing at the blond, his eyes riveted on the face of the old druggist, and in their depths was mingled a story of contrition and gratitude.

MLLE. JOSE LAVAL REPEATS VOWS

PARIS, Aug. 20.—(AP) — Jose Laval, only daughter of the wealthy Premier of France, and Count Rene De Chambrun, descendant of Lafayette and honorary citizen of United States, repeated their marriage vows today before a priest.

The wedding was one of the simplest which cosmopolitan Paris has seen in years. The couple was married yesterday in a civil ceremony kept as unostentatious as a Premier's Orche could make it. The religious wedding today was of the same sort. It was without bridesmaids or bridesgroomsmen, music or flowers. The bride wore no Gowns.

Colonel John J. Pershing long a friend of the Count's family, and Monsieur L. Dernis, Paris lawyer, signed the marriage register for the bridegroom.

Premier Laval, conscious of the people's economic worries, was anxious to avoid public attention but the church was crowded by important personages.

Old Age Pensions For Rich and Poor

Washington, Aug. 20 (AP)—Old Age Pension cheques will be sent to millionaires and laborers alike when the United States Social Security Boards begin payments in 1942 under the contributory pension system.

Every wage earner taxed under Title 2 of the Security Bill will receive the full amount of his pension, one official said, "whether he be Alfred P. Sloan Sr., President of General Motors Corporation or a poorly-paid ditchdigger."

"Forever" Comes to End as Weeds Grow Around Monument to Dog

Merrick, N.Y., Aug. 20 (AP)— Weeds on the tomb of Rover, the "taller dog" that became an institution on the Long Island Railroad, showed today that "forever" had come to an end.

Rover died 30 years ago but his tradition was so strong commuters and trainmen who remembered his unceasing journeys, tail wagging, on the company's trains raised $75 last year to erect a monument here to his memory. Speakers on that occasion declared that Rover's drinking water from beneath the stone would flow forever" to appease the thirst of roving pets.

Mrs. O. U. Shreve, Jr., member of the Nassau Island League, announced yesterday Rover's memorial fountain, the flow of water had ceased and the pipes actually were disconnected. She called on the railroad for action.

BRITAIN, FRANCE ACT IN CONCERT IN AFRICAN CRISIS

Mussolini Makes Bold Demonstration on Austrian Border

FRANCE IS GLOOMY

Ethiopian Natives Restive, Feel Emperor Too Conciliatory

With the Ministers summoned from their holidays, the British Cabinet met hurriedly Thursday to determine policy in the face of the breakdown of efforts to avert war between Italy and Ethiopia.

Informed quarters in London said the British likely would support collective sanctions but no "gun-boat" action was considered plated. Nor would Britain send troops to guard Lake Tsana, source of the Nile.

France Pessimistic

Paris was pessimistic following declarations by Baron Aloisi of Italy making clear Italy would go ahead and would leave it to the League of Nations if the Council condemns her.

At Rome Mussolini ordered the entire Government, represented at Geneva, to return immediately to take charge of the Italian-Ethiopian problem.

The Cabinet, summoned to the Premier's session on the International crisis developing from the dispute between Italy and Ethiopia, is to determine Great Britain's policy in the imminent conflict, which Mussolini, summoned from their vacations, will meet Thursday.

Sir Samuel Hoare, Foreign Secretary, and Anthony Eden, Minister for League of Nations Affair, already are working on an outline of policy to be submitted to Prime Minister Baldwin.

Collective Measures

Informed sources said the policy would still support collective sanctions measures against an aggressor, but would act with the nations in concert but not as a single power. The general mood of Great Britain and France had agreed informally to work in the crisis caused by Italo-Ethiopian crisis but there had been no formal agreement.

Aix-Les-Bains, France, Aug. 20 (CP-Havas)—Abruptly ending a conference with Prime Minister Baldwin of Great Britain left Aix-Les-Bains today with Foreign Minister Vansittart, Permanent Under-Secretary of the Foreign Office, who had come here following collapse of the tri-power parley at Stresa.

London, Aug. 20.—Although the British and Italian Governments, as Lake Tsana, one of the sources of the Blue Nile and consequently of life in Egypt, has maintained the Government does not plan to go so far as to send troops to the area around the Lake.

Children to Egypt

Rome, Aug. 20.—(AP)—Authoritative sources disclosed today a large proportion of Italian children, as well as governmental chieftains will be transferred to East Africa.

Addis Ababa, Aug. 20.—(AP)— Reports from the Interior said today the natives were becoming restive because Emperor Haile Selassie concluded his long peace insistead of starting to rebuff the Italian invasion.

The natives were claimed to regard the Emperor's conciliatory policy and to be asking hostilities start immediately.

LEAGUE OF NATIONS SITS IN SOLEMN SESSION OVER ITALO-ETHIOPIAN DISPUTE

One of the greatest problems to come before the League of Nations in recent years is the dispute between Italy and Ethiopia, with the two nations apparently preparing for armed conflict. This new picture from Geneva, Switzerland, shows the League of Nations council in debate over the crisis brought on by Italy's threatened invasion of the African empire. If Mussolini carries out his plan to invade Ethiopia it will, in the opinion of observers and officials, mark the end of the league.

Dog 10 Minutes Dead, Lives Circulation is Mechanized

New Type of Operations on Humans Forecast, in Extraction of Blood From Body and Return of it After operation.

By JOHN LLOYD
Associated Press Foreign Staff
Moscow, Aug. 20—(AP)— Dr. S. S. Brukhonenko, Russian scientist, today revived a dog 10 minutes after an "irremediable death" in the presence of a group of foreign delegates to the International Physiological Congress.

Dr. Brukhonenko used an apparatus of his own invention called an "autojector" to produce an artificial circulation of blood in the dog's body.

The lungs were extracted from a second animal and attached to the machine which mixed the oxygen from them with the blood being pumped back into the veins of the dog which was the subject of the experiment.

The Russian scientist said two possibilities were opened up by his series of experiments. The first was it may sometimes be possible to remove the human heart from the effects of an otherwise fatal accident. The second was it may become possible to operate without bloodshed by supplying the blood from life-veins of a patient and permitting it back after the operation is performed.

He said he had succeeded in reviving dogs as much as 40 minutes after "irremediable death" in previous experiments.

One of the principal problems to be solved, Dr. Brukhonenko said, is when does incompete death—the state in which the tissues are not yet destroyed—turn to complete death. He said the autojector's possibilities are limited to the period of incomplete death.

GOV'T ANSWERS CUTTEN'S APPEAL

Brief Filed Contains 127 Pages to Answer Charges

Chicago, Aug. 20—(AP)—The appeal of Arthur W. Cutten, Chicago grain dealer, from an order suspending his from trading privileges for two years has been answered today by the U.S. Government.

The reply to the Canadian-born speculator was a 121-page brief filed before the United States circuit court of appeals by Wendell Berge and Leo P. Tierney, special counsel for the U.S. Department of Agriculture. Oral arguments are expected to be heard sometime in October.

The government attorneys contended the grain futures commission was fully within its juridiction in suspending the trader.

CHILD'S TICKETS FREED FROM TAX

Cabinet Will Pass Order Exempting Admissions up to 16 Years

Toronto, Aug. 20 (CP)—Removal of the amusement tax from children's tickets was announced officially today by Premier Hepburn.

At tomorrow's Cabinet session, the Premier said, an order in council would be passed exempting from amusement tax tickets of admission for all children 16 years and under.

At the same time the Premier announced an amusement tax exhibition will be in state five hours, beginning at 7 a.m. Thursday in a tower of pine and olive trees at Forest Lawn Memorial Park at Glendale.

Private services were set for 5 p.m. in the Wee Kirk O' The Heath, and will be conducted by Dr. J. Whitcomb Brougher, an old friend.

ALASKAN PILOT NOT INTERVIEWED

Refuses to State His Personal Opinion of Crash Cause

Los Angeles, Aug. 20—(AP)—The shattered bodies of Will Rogers and Wiley Post who left here as carefree aerial adventurers two weeks ago lay in a Glendale mortuary today awaiting the final homage of admirers and friends.

Another long journey will begin later in the day for Post's remains as they are taken to Oklahoma City for services and burial but Rogers' last flight had ended.

Public and private rites will be held Thursday and the body sent later to Oklahoma for interment.

The 2,500-mile journey from the northern Alaska wilds where they crashed in Post's ship last Thursday ended just at dusk yesterday when Police William Winston sent down his big Packard ambulance to ways transport at Burbank Airport. The arrival was attended by the first disorders since the bodies of the celebrated dead were brought from Point Barr.

Police and the curious clashed at the airport after the officers had sought to halt the taking of photographs. The incident delayed transfer of the bodies to the mortuary a half hour.

Joe Crosson, Alaskan pilot who had brought out the bodies of his friends in less than two days, refused to be interviewed on his trip or on what his personal inspection of the remains of the small ship indicated as the possible cause of the crash in the far north.

The body of the famous humorist-actor will lie in state five hours, beginning at 7 a.m. Thursday in a tower of pine and olive trees at Forest Lawn Memorial Park at Glendale.

Private services were set for 5 p.m. in the Wee Kirk O' The Heath, and will be conducted by Dr. J. Whitcomb Brougher, an old friend.

RADIO CITY AT BERLIN IN RUINS

Spectacular Fire Causes Death to One And Injury to 26

Berlin, Aug. 20. — (AP) — The main building of Berlin's Radio City was a heap of smouldering ruins today after a spectacular fire which caused one death and injury to 26.

The building, wood construction, was the only one of the eight interconnecting halls gutted by the fire, the origin of which has not been determined.

Of eight persons taken to the hospital three were firemen, their condition today was reported good.

Most of the exhibits of radio firms in the burned building were destroyed. Radio exhibits of the Ministry of Posts, such as the sending apparatus of Berlin' first broadcasting station and latest models for sound and television transmitting stations, were consumed.

POWER DELIVERY TO BE REFUSED BY COMMISSION

'We Will Refuse Delivery of 60,000 H. P. From Beauharnois Co.'

HEPBURN STATEMENT

'Physically Impossible to Accept Added Power' He Says

Toronto, Aug. 20 (CP)—Premier Hepburn said today the Ontario Hydro Electric Power Commission would maintain "the same attitude we took toward the McLaren Company" and would refuse to accept further deliveries of Quebec Power advised for Oct 1.

"It is definite," said the Premier. "We will refuse delivery of the 60,000 horsepower due by contract from the Beauharnois Power Company and 7,000 horsepower from the Gatineau Power Company."

"Furthermore," he said, "I believe it would be physically impossible to accept the added power. We haven't the transmission lines to carry it over. We would only be paying for power we didn't even draw from the power plants."

He declined to say when legislation, passed at the last session of the Ontario Legislature to nullify Quebec Power contracts, would be proclaimed, adding only it would not be given effect before Oct. 1.

REPAIRING WIRE IS ELECTROCUTED

Andrew Bennett of Kingston Touched Wire With Hand

Kingston, Aug. 20—Andrew Bennett, Public Utilities Commission electrician, was electrocuted late Monday while repairing wires at the corner of Queen and Frontenac and York Streets.

Bennett was on the pole with another employee when his hand came in contact with a live wire. His belt and spurs prevented him from falling, but he was killed instantly, it was said.

The power was shut off quickly, and artificial respiration applied. Three physicians endeavored to revive him, but without success.

Bennett had been employed by the commission for a number of years. He lived and two young children survive him.

Sugar from Brilliant Dahlias Twice as Sweet, Chemists Told

San Francisco, Aug. 20 (AP) — Fields aflame with brilliant dahlias may be rich source of a sizeable portion of United States sugar commercial sugar supply, the American Chemical Society in convention here was informed today.

A method of producing for market, the sugar inulin, which is now commonly used has been developed by Dr. Wray Rieger and Prof. Leroy W. Wesiterby and research associates at the University of Southern California.

Commercial production already has become a practical possibility, the scientists say, as the result of the working out of a means of manufacturing on basis comparable to that of cane sugar.

Professor Westlerby pointed out that inulin is a mixture of carbohydrates which may serve the human body in the same way as starch and sugar. Inulin is found in the root of the dahlia, the artichoke and other plants.

He said economic possibilities of dahlia sugar are enhanced by its sweetness, twice that of cane sugar. Dahlia sugar, he said, would find its greatest use in diabetic patients who cannot utilize common sugar in the form of starch.

Another factor in favor of dahlia sugar is that the crop can be raised by Prof. G. A. Hvahlen of the University of Wisconsin who said individuals should eat a little copper daily, in addition to iron to insure good health.

FARMERS WATCHFUL AS FIELDS SCORCH

As spring heat and high temperatures continue to bake the district, farmers throughout the rural areas of Hastings and Prince Edward Counties have increased their vigilance over bone-dry farm buildings, hot stoves, furnaces and fire traps. Grass fires during the past three weeks have put Prince Edward County particularly in dangerous shape. Gordon produce is withering in the ground, and the moisture has taken on a brown sun-dried tinge. Caretul watch is being maintained against the possibility of roadside fires spreading.

CITY CLOCK AGAIN READY TO TELL TIME

After a shut down of some weeks while construction work was in progress, the clock in the city hall tower will again be illuminated this evening and the correct time announced by the bank to local citizens who have missed the time service. During the erection of the scaffold now surrounding the tower, it became necessary to disconnect which interfered with the movement of the clock's hands. This will be removed today and the clock resumed and set.

INFANTRY SCHOOL TO OPEN HERE OCT. 7

Announcement is made today that the Provisional School of Infantry to be held here for the qualification of officers and non-commissioned officers of the Argyll Light Infantry and Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, will commence in Belleville on October 7, and continue for a six weeks' period.

WEIGHING SCALE TO MEASURE MATERIAL

Construction of a large weighing scale which will be used throughout the Bay of Quinte district for measuring material used was commenced at the government dock this morning by employees of the Paterson Construction Company recently awarded the contract for a 30,000 yard fill at the north side of the new Bay bridge.

According to Mr. Walter Paterson, president of the company, the work on the fill will be commenced at the latter end of this week, possibly on Friday.

POLICE BLOTTER

Two minor break-ins were reported to Belleville during the past twenty-four hours. Arthur Jordan, 12 Blackburn Ave., complained to the authorities that his home had been entered during the night and a sweater and a package of tobacco stolen. The same complaint was received from Mr. Jorden's next door neighbour, where only small articles were reported missing also. The matters are being investigated and are thought to be the work of transients.

Late this morning local police were called to a Station Street residence, where a five year old lad discovered a badly gashed eye and injured arm, the result of being struck by a 16-year-old youth. After bringing the two boys face to face Philanthropic Constable Hand reprimanded the older lad for striking the five year old boy, who, it was alleged was molesting the older boy prior to the accident. When the smaller boy was struck he fell to the pavement striking his eye and badly bruising it.

Transients slumbering in open parts in Belleville are quite on the decline these warm nights, especially after the present police roundup late last week. Only four transients slept at the police station last night.

After being bitten three times on the left leg by a large dog, Miss Ruth Hawley, Amelisburg, was taken to the surgery of Dr. O. S. Cronk for medical attention during the noon hour today. Although the canine inflicted three severe wounds and tore Miss Hawley's clothes, no serious results are expected, local police stated after investigating.

Miss Hawley was peddling fruit and vegetables on Howard Street and had entered one of the houses at No. 3 Howard Street, the residence of Mr. Fred Marvin, to display her wares. A person was at home at the time and a dog, only recently purchased by Mr. Marvin, was tied to a rear verandah. As Miss Hawley approached the rear door the dog attacked her and inflicted the wounds. Miss Hawley was treated by running to wards the front of the house, the canine's barking evidently holding it from further attacks.

Following medical attention Miss Hawley returned by taxi to her home, police authorities stated.

WHERE O WHERE IS SILVER DOLLAR?

"Where have all the silver dollars gone from the tills of the city merchants?" is a question local citizens not long ago" asked a prominent merchant this morning.

Apparently among other merchants disclosed the fact that the new dollars which are the latest addition to our coinage are definitely not in circulation. Nobody has yet received enough of them in change for a two dollar bill, nor are they visible anywhere like some of the new half banks where the demand for them is still maintained. The general opinion is that most of them are stored by as keepsakes to hand on to a younger generation in years to come.

NOEL COWARD IN "THE SCOUNDREL"

To say one who has followed the theatre at all closely the career of Noel Coward has been an amazing one. He has gone from one triumph to another as playwright, and actor, and given the world some plays such as "Cavalcade", notable plays and including West ..nesday evening ...

Noel Coward, brilliant author and dramatist who made his screen debut in "The Scoundrel" at the Capitol in Monday's bill.

A large audience expressed its pleasure in no uncertain way as the splendid acting of Mr. Coward brought out the fine points and humor in the part of this remarkable play "The Scoundrel", which gives a vivid picture of the life it lived in the big cities in the midst of wealth and the vices which trail in the path of pleasure seekers unhampered by lack of money. A peg from the grave that has helped the grave is also given, just a peg, another, that has not given up the ghost, sneering grimly carthly drops, played in magnificent manner by Noel Coward.

This is a story of a modern Don Juan running amuck in New York Society and leaving a trail of dregs and ruin among bewildered hearts. A small sweetened by the one girl, honest and virtuous Julie Hayden, who stumbles into the set and furnishes the big love interest for the story. Belleville theatre goers, from now, henceforth and forever, will Noel Coward fans and anything dramatic in which his name appears henceforth will find a ready support.

Don't miss "The Scoundrel" it's different and worth while.

POLICE COURT

In the absence from the city of Magistrate J. Hubert Porter, K.C., Mr. F. S. Deacon, local Justice of the Peace, presided over today's police court proceedings.

William Lucas, 57 Bridge Street, appeared in court charged with reckless driving following an automobile accident on Front street and Bridge street on August 14 at 10.30 p.m. Lucas was driving failed to make the turn into Bridge street east guard rail fence, breaking off three guard rail posts. Although the radiator and entire front of the vehicle were both badly damaged, Mr. Lucas fortunately escaped uninjured. The accident was investigated by Motor Patrolman Jack Irvine, who subsequently laid the charge.

The local resident spent the night in the police station and today was charged with Magistrate Deacon, the case being enlarged until Friday by the court.

TWEED DEFEATS REDNERSVILLE

Will Now Meet Either Campbellford or Omemee

Tweed, Aug. 20—Gordon Steel Works team of Tweed tucked away the first game of round one of the playoff series with Rednersville by the score of 6 runs to 5 after being tied at the end of 9 innings in round two. The score of 5 to 3 about represents the run-ning between the two teams, except in the fourth and the sixth innings when Wannamaker and Sinclair each scored two runs. The visiting team got off to a fast start when Sinclair's long single, in the sixth, however they fell on the rival twirler's offerings for consecutive hits and four runs. Simpson and Tummon singled and Quinn drove them home. Rednersville's wild throw to break the dead-lock as the visitors had notched a counter in their half of the same inning. This gave Gordon Steel a lead which they never proceeded to protect as only one other run was scored on them in the eighth to wind the scoring for the day.

Laffman was at the peak of his form, striking out thirteen batsmen, allowing seven hits and giving three bases on balls. His star in the sixth scored Sinclair. Wannamaker who pitched five and one-third innings struck out nine, and allowed twelve hits. Dempsey who relieved him struck out two men, and allowed one hit in two and two-thirds innings. Wannamaker had three hits for the homesters, Sellick, Quinn, Orr and Sinclair, the last each, one of Orr's being a triple. Hollins played a bang-up game in centre, and Rednersville's McCutcheon in left field stole the show with his leaping one-handed catch of Wrese's. Drive in the seventh after a hard run. It was a splendid piece of work and retired the side.

Dempsey, Wrese, H. Farley received Simpson and Tummon's first nice double play in the first, and Wrese and Farley got credit for the next two players in a similar manner in the seventh. For the visitors Quinn tossed out three at first base.

Only two patrons and one assist were registered by the local outfield and the same number of outs by the visiting outfield, the rival infielders getting all the outs. In addition to striking out thirteen, Laffman tossed out three at first base.

Elkier of Belleville and Wallbridge of Madoc umpired.

The lineups:

Rednersville: J. Farley 3b, H. Farley 1b, H. Wannamaker p, H. Dempsey c, D. E. Moy lf, H. Russell cf, J. Taylor c, G. Thompson rf, L. Wrese 2b.

Gordon Steel: Rollins 2b, Broad lf, Simpson c, Tummon p, Hollins cf, Orr ss, Sinclair rf, Laffman p, Prevost 3b.

Skilful exponents of the art of tossing horse shoes played on the local pegrels on Friday evening and a number of tidy battles resulted. Reid and Lammie of Belleville defeated Bullier and Delnard for the visitors. R. Clark and Masters for the homesters won all four of their matches, two of their opponents being scratch scores when they shut out their opponents in two straight games 21-0 and 36-0. Score:

BICYCLE THEFTS QUITE PREVALENT

Three "Bikes" Taken From Streets Monday Afternoon

An epidemic of bicycle thefts broke out in Belleville during the past 24 hours, when no less than three locally owned "bikes" were stolen off Front street, where they had been parked by their owners.

Early yesterday afternoon Willfred Mills, 14 Green street, complained to the police the theft of his Simpson model bicycle, Mr. Green had parked his bicycle on Front St. but upon his return the vehicle was missing.

Later in the afternoon Frank Tom Chinese restaurant keeper, informed the police that a bicycle, the property of a fellow-countryman, had been taken from the parking place in front of 338 Front Street, while late last night Robert Aman, 72 Highland Ave., filed the same kind of a report with the night sergeant. He parked his bicycle on Front Street, for the matter of two hours, but upon his return it was gone. Young Aman's was riding a new Quinta model.

No signs of the missing bicycles were in evidence last night while local constabulary were making their rounds on the beats. A thorough check-up pertaining to the continued stealing of bicycles in Belleville has been promised by the police, however.

MARMORA

VETERANS VISIT GRAVES OF PALS

Decoration Day Service is Held at Marmora Cemeteries

MARMORA, Aug. 20.—(Special)—Legion members of Marmora Branch No. 237 of The Canadian Legion gathered on Sunday for their annual decoration service. The Legion led by the Legion squad and the Legion Band assembled at the Marmora Memorial Building and from there proceeded to the Public School grounds. A short address was given by Rural Dean A. B. Caldwell, who then led in the singing of several hymns suitable to the occasion.

Rev. Father J. V. Meagher, a chaplain with the overseas forces, then gave a very interesting address stressing the importance of doing honour to their fallen comrades. The Marmora Protestant and Roman Catholic cemeteries were then towards visited where two sprays of flowers were placed on each of deceased members of the Legion in the latter cemetery the graves of Matthew McFarlane and Thomas Devine, two veterans of the United States Civil War were also decorated. The Last Post and Reveille were sounded by Comrade G. Brooks. The procession returned to the Memorial Building where the memorial tablets were dedicated. The service was in charge of Lt.-Col. A. E. Hannisett, assisted by Padre Meagher and Past Pres. Percy Gray. The firing squad chosen from B. Coy. of The Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment was composed of Privates, H. Hewitt, J. Thomas, O. Hannah, G. Osborne, R. Donnelly, B. Johnston.

Car Accident

On Saturday night, about nine o'clock, two cars have been a very serious accident occurred just west of the Crowe River bridge at the entrance to the rock cut. A car owned and driven by Miss Irene O'Neil of Marmora, was proceeding east on Highway No. 7 when it was struck by a car driven by James Kerr of Havelock, who was proceeding in the opposite direction. O'Neil car was badly damaged on the left side, being turned over on the road by the crash. The occupants of neither car were seriously injured.

Constable Percy Gray investigated the accident and the result that Kerr was arrested and lodged in the local Jail. On Monday morning he appeared before Magistrate Lloyd in Marmora on a charge of operating a motor vehicle while intoxicated. He was found guilty and sentenced to one month in the County Jail. On a second charge of operating a vehicle without a permit he was fined $10.00 and costs which were paid.

Baseball

On Hill vs Marmora, 7-7 The first game of the series with Trent Valley intermediate O.B.A.A. 'C' series play-offs was played in the Marmora Athletic grounds. The boys from the North put lots of pep into the game in the 7th inning when they collected four runs off Brady, before he was relieved by McKinney. # Fascinating Story of Gold Search Near Lake Ontario

District Buzzed With Activity Starting in 1864—Former Deputy Minister of Mines For Ontario Relates Romantic Development of Industry in Canada—High Gold Price and Modern Methods Restore Growing Interest.

By THOS. W. GIBSON

Former Deputy Minister of Mines, Ontario, in the Northern Miner

The Eastern Ontario gold belt occupies a strip of country extending from the township of Belmont in Peterborough county eastward across the counties of Hastings, Lennox and Addington and Frontenac, and into the county of Lanark, a distance of about, seventy miles.

Two generations or more ago, and for a number of years thereafter, beginning with 1864, this belt became well known, active, and gave rise to many hopes. Old men who were boys seventy years ago still remember the thrill that ran through the country when word came that gold had been found in Madoc. Truly the first discovery was of something well fitted to get hearts beating, for gold has, ever since the time of Adam, been the one material thing that man has desired above all others. Out of the Garden of Eden ran the River Pison, which encircled the whole length of Havilah, "where there is gold, and the gold of that land is good"—and can almost hear the smack of the old scribe's lips as he indited these words.

A Golden Cove

In August, 1866, a prospector named Powell and an old Dutch miner were following a seam of copper on the Richardson farm, lot 18, concession V, Madoc township, and at a depth of 16 ft. they all struck ore carrying free gold. There was a rock basin at the time the seam suddenly opened out into a cave 12 ft. long, six feet wide and six feet high, so that he could stand upright in it. Gold was there in the sides and roof of the cave, and the floor in leaves as thick as knife blades of nuggets and pieces of butternuts. Hundreds of forty-niners, N. C. prospectors and from the lands of the "pure Yankee" Powell had put up a shack to protect his find, but that night a prospector clung a rope around it and threatened to pull it down. A sale of Mounted Police prevented the demolition of Powell's protective works, and Carlton Cameron, another man were allowed to descend into the cave and secure the find, which they reported was all that had been claimed for it. Powell and his associate sold their $90,000, a goodly sum of money in the backwoods of those days. The whole neighborhood was speedily filled with gold-seekers, and many more such Aladdin caves were found, and traces of a rich mineral field were far from being fulfilled. Nevertheless, in numerous places gold-bearing were found in the rocks. On many of these, stamp mills and the Allen Arrastre, Sovereign Cook, Cawley, Stevens and others, including the Richardson property, where Powell found his cave of gold. Ore was got to the Sovereign all these deposits consisted of brecciated quartz veins containing gold and sulphides, more connected genetically with the Algonquan granite, but sometimes originally named the Pelgie, contained very rich ore. The Madoc mill was operated apparently in a rather primitive sort of way. There was also the Diamond mill, which had an outcropping of quartz 200 ft. thick. There were also mills on the property, one of mispickel and the other of galena. Some of the Madoc ore contained 1 oz. in 2 tons 16 cwt. Other contained rich mispickel ore, and on the best of these the various specks of free gold were visible. The ore became harder as the shaft was deepened and yielded some specimens of "sylvanite" ore. The mine passed into the hands of a New York company, which operated it for a time, but finally closed down. Still another company erected in 1900. The working of essential ore in these mines led to several serious difficulties and required expensive experiments, the cost of the power of individuals of small companies to provide. To this may be attributed the abandonment of many such mines.

The Craig gold mine in Tudor township had a shaft 150 ft. deep on a quartz vein 4 to 5 feet wide and yielded a small quantity of gold by working a stamp mill. The Gilmour mine was situated on lot 29, concession XIX, in the township of Grimsthorpe, and was operated from 1900 to 1901, yielding $34,344 with a five-stamp mill. During the present year the Gilmour Gold Syndicate has been formed, and has been busily hiring the old No. 1 shaft preparatory to a resumption of operations. The Star of the East was located on lot 30, concession I, Barrie township, and produced gold by a stamp mill and cyanid in 1905. The ore consisted of quartz boulders slightly impregnated with pyrites in crystalline limestone, near granite. The workings are 313 ft. deep. The original company was that of Mr. Martin Lake Mining and Milling Company, Limited, which surrendered its charter in December, 1905. The Ore Chimney near Northbrook was opened up and the condition-ate development work, installed a mill, and sold much stock, but up to the present time has reported no production. The property was sold to the Bay Mines, Limited, in 1920 and 1921, and the Bay Mines of Cobalt. A. Campbell, now M. P. for Addington, with inconclusive results. Drilling showed the vein to continue to at least 800 ft.

Revival Justified

Many more mines or near-mines could be added to the above list. Before President Roosevelt's magic wand touched the price of gold and raised it from $17.50 to $35, the enumeration of these old mines might have been likened to reading of the epitaph in a graveyard. Many of the mines are entirely changed. There seem no good reason why there should not be a great revival in this nearby gold field, where there are easy railway communications, plenty of labor, and provisions right at hand. The revival has in fact already begun. With modern mining and milling methods there should be little difficulty in restoring the Eastern gold belt and to a position higher than it ever before attained.

Sun's Rays Cause Traffic Troubles

The prismatic surface of the rear light of an automobile causes it to gleam red when the headlights of a following car hit it, whether it is illuminated itself or not. This phenomenon presents a danger on the road, but when the new lights at British crossroads are hit by the rays from those approaching from headlights, it does not, and "Motorists Obstruction Signals" are born. The British Minister of Transport is now experimenting with a device to eliminate trouble which has been responsible for many collisions. Thomas Wilson, Leicester public lighting engineer, has invented a glinting reflector, which is automatically switched out of operation when the light it reflects is rendered useless, and he says that this will prevent motorists from being misled. Mr. Wilkie is a member of the British Institute Standards Technical Committee, which approached by the Ministry of Transport, and asked to attempt to overcome the dangerous "phantom signals."

TREASURE HUNT CAUSES DAMAGE

Cabin of Widow of Silver King Ruined by Tourists

Leadville, Colo., Aug. 30—Hunters of buried treasure and souvenir seekers have almost demolished the rude cabin of Elizabeth "Baby" Tabor on Fryer Hill. Windows have been broken, the door hangs only on one hinge and the floors and ceiling have been torn away, apparently by tourists who believed the widow of H. A. W. Tabor, onetime Colorado silver king, might have hidden a portion of the Tabor millions there.

The heavy roofing paper with which Mrs. Tabor covered the rough walls to keep out cold of 20 below zero has been stripped away and even the little stove with its crooked pipe has disappeared, leaving a gaping hole in the roof through which Summer rains trickle.

Almost without fail, the first question asked by the tourist arriving in Leadville is "how do I get to the Tabor cabin?" Travelers from all over the United States have scrawled their names on the cabin walls. So far as is known all of the treasure hunters have been disappointed.

WIDOW OF SWEEP PLEADS OWN CASE

Astonishes British Judge by Her Legal Knowledge and Wins Damage Claim

Frank Slater, a London chimney sweep of the old school, was pedaling his bicycle loaded with the implements of his profession in Soho when he was run down and killed by a motor car driven and owned by Walter Charles Sprag of Welling, Hertfordshire.

It was natural that the widow, on behalf of her children and herself, should have sought damages, but it was an unusual that she should have pleaded her own case when it came to the High Court in the King's Bench Division. London Daily Mail, Lord Hewart presided.

The judge did not miss the opportunity to quote to the plaintiff the adage about the diligent who pleaded their own case having a fool for a client, which brought a smile of appreciation from the widow in person. Both were unaware of the fact, however, presently to be demonstrated, that the widow was also the bride of the chimney sweep whose Mary Jane Mrs. Slater had studied law.

Soho and widow raised a new legal point, she not only claimed damages for the living Arthur Lee Campbell's Fatal Accidents Act of 1846 but also claimed, as administratrix of her husband's estate, damages on behalf of the dead. She asked for £500 damages for loss of her husband's pain and suffering and for "decreased expectation of life arising from the Law Reform (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act, 1934."

Justice MacKinnon, giving judgment, decided that under the act of 1934, a widow was entitled as administratrix to damages for her husband's pain and suffering, but not for his decreased expectation of life. But in the circumstances Mrs. Slater was rendered unconscious by the accident, and Mr. Justice Goddard could not find that the pain and suffering had been proved.

As Mr. Slater was unconscious until he died and the authorities allowed that damages should be awarded for the mental distress following the shock, expectation of life, no additional damages could be awarded. He accordingly awarded her under Lord Campbell's act, £65 for funeral expenses, and costs—nearly £10,000 in all.

DATE THIRTEENTH HALTS WEDDING

Superstitious Father Pays All Bills as Groom is Angry

Barcelona, Spain — The wedding march had sounded, the bridal party in choir loft and the couple had started up the aisle, but Manuel Castro Bolella was not going to marry Maria Illera. For as the pair reached the altar the bride-to-be shouted:

"No wedding! On the thirteenth! Never! Tomorrow, all right. Come home with me, Maria. Your father insists."

"Today or never," said Manuel stubbornly. "What do you say, Maria?"

Maria faltered. Manuel shrugged.

"If that's all she loves me, take her home," he said.

Next day Maria's father received bills for flowers, music and refreshments.

Furiously he drove and bought a new mill," an accompanying note said. "It's only right that you should pay them."

Maria's father thought so, too.

Admission every evening $1.13 per person, including tax. Reserved seat advance in prices for "Fieldwashan" broadcasts.

MUST LABOR TAKE JOBS IF THEY OFFER

Girls Who Reject Jobs Will Not Be Eligible For Relief

Toronto, Aug. 20—(CP)—Although the Ontario Government has no intention of cutting single unemployed girls off relief as it cut single men off relief in 1932, Premier Hepburn indicated today girls who refuse employment will no longer be eligible for relief.

"People can't get domestic servants," the Premier said, "and yet there are hundreds of girls receiving relief."

For sometime the Department of Welfare has been considering establishment of a training school for domestic servants since with the curtailment of immigration from Britain, the supply of experienced domestics is far below the demand.

Labor Department officials have made a study of the possibility of a training and some move may be made in this direction with the co-operation of Toronto civic authorities.

L.U.D.G.

The L.U.D.G. class of Scott's Church held their monthly meeting at the home of Mrs. Howard Dafoe on Aug. 12th, 1935, with a large attendance. The meeting opened with hymn 111 "Rescue the Perishing" followed by the Lord's prayer. The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved. The business then discussed. It was moved and seconded that Miss Nellie Striker be placed for the coming year. The Scripture lesson was read by Andrew Dafoe.

Elizabeth Ramsay and Ronald Jones sang "What a Friend We Have in Jesus" in speech. Prayer was given by Mrs. Howard Dafoe. A duet by Mrs. Ewing Sine and Miss Eva Thrasher piano, and Mr. George Brown, violin. Reading by Clara Carr "The Good Old Times." Reading by Hilson Sine. A talk was given by Miss Edna Kolcheson which was very much enjoyed by all. Reading "The Two Seamsters" by Elmer Smith. Hymn 250.

A contest was given by Elmer Ramsay which was won by Mildred Paul and Pearl Dedby. A vote of thanks was tendered to Mrs. Howard Dafoe by Miss Dorothy Paul.

Lunch was served by the boys. God save the King brought the meeting to a close.

Name Just Marry But She Put to Rout Three Bandits Trying to Jimmy Safe

New York, Aug 20—(CP)—Outsmarted by a woman bookkeeper, three bandits attempted to rob a safe in the office of the London Guarantee and Accident Company, Limited, here today, but failed to get away with any money.

The safe was open when police arrived, but failed to find out who was the "Just Mary".

"Just Mary", was the first of her crew to arrive this morning. She let herself in and saw two men with revolvers.

"Working late, sinnchas" she calmly remarked. She didn't know they were yeggs.

They grabbed her. A third man joined them. They sat her down in one of the chairs and ordered her to keep her mouth shut if she wanted to live.

One man remained to guard her. The others went to the cashier's office to continue drilling of the safe.

Then dawn on "just Mary" that the place was being robbed.

Quickly she followed with a series of screams of increasing intensity. Her guard was completely unnerved and so were the two at work on the safe.

"Just Mary, Sir!" cried one, and all three fled.

Then the little scrubwoman went into the office and calmly called the police.

"We were brave," said the detectives.

"No, they were cowards," said she.

Men Do Not Know How to Dress London Woman Stylist Declares

New York, August 20 — Miss Ethyle D. Cameron, London stylist and buyer for a Regent Street house in London, arrived on the Cunard White Star liner Georgonia and took American men to task for the way they dress. The fashion expert, who is a slim, vivacious blonde of medium height, said this was her first trip to this country, but that she had seen many Americans in London and Paris and that while the men were nice, their clothes did not match.

"Look at him," Miss Campbell exclaimed, pointing to a reporter who was wearing grey trousers, a brown coat, a black-and-tan shoes with black tops, and trying to look unconcerned. "An Englishman would never do that. He would match."

"The wedding! On the thirteenth! Never! Tomorrow, all right. Come home with me, Maria. Your father insists."

"Today or never," said Manuel stubbornly. "What do you say, Maria?"

Maria faltered. Manuel shrugged.

"If that's all she loves me, take her home," he said.

Next day Maria's father received bills for flowers, music and refreshments.

Furiously he drove and bought a new mill," an accompanying note said. "It's only right that you should pay them."

Maria's father thought so, too.

looked at her farewell supper party in grey gown and a grey coat, and she came back to the dock of the Georgonia in the same dress.

"But an American would probably tie a piece of string around that thing and then go to the trouble of putting on brace—a bit and

Speaking of the object of her visit to New York, Miss Campbell said she had come over to see what American women are wearing in the fashion.

"Paris is no longer the world's style center," she declared. "The American women lead in day clothes, especially sports clothes, but we can still hold our own in London for evening frocks.

The American knitted wear is marvelous and so is the way your women work in fur. I am told that we have you beaten in clothes and tailoring and evening wear.

"You get in Paris...now fashions over here so quickly and copy them that they are cheaper than go to the big stores here; then in Paris, and the quality is standard.

Miss Campbell, who was accompanied by Miss Giles Harbottle, an assistant buyer, said she would spend three or four days in New York shopping. She said she would scene new styles for afternoon wear and then return to London and then go to Virginia to visit friends. They will go back on the Berengaria on Sept. 4.

ANNUAL FAIR

Not far off is Belleville District Fair which is usually taken as the first sign of the end of the holidays and of the approach of autumn. Next week witnesses the annual exhibition which with scarcely a break since time immemorial has shown the values and the benefits of agriculture and other industry in Belleville area.

This year's exhibition is the heir of all the ages during which the fair has been held, during which farms have been worked, industries have been operated and our people have met. Steadily the unfolding of the importance of this part of the Province along with the development of the fair has been marked.

Next week finds for the first time Belleville Fair in Class B, which means a much higher rating, higher grants and greater responsibilities to insure that rating and the increased grant. Evidence of this will be missing at next week's four day display of this district's features at their best.

There are two sides to the fair. One side has been well developed, the planning which will insure a magnificent display of all classes of exhibits in agriculture and industry and of entertainment. The other side remains with the public. There must be adequate support, the support which is warranted by the efforts of the executive and directors. That in the last analysis means attendance and gate receipts. That the second factor in the success of the fair will be as marked as the exhibitional side is confidently expected for a good show always attracts a major attendance.

JESTER PRESERVES STABILITY

The kindly jester is probably the man who by common consent of humanity to keep society at an even keel. The kindly jest outlaws wrong, pokes gentle fun at the too serious-minded, and smooths the path of frailties of humanity. The wrong-doer has a speaking sense of guilt when the humorist is through with him and is heartily ashamed of himself.

In such times as these mankind requires a jester to keep the world from growing too serious with its panaceas for the ills political and economic which are pressing upon society.

During the Great War the need of light comedy and farce was supplied in the theatres as a relief against the crash of nations and the strain upon the nerves of men and women of the nations of a conflicting world.

But the real jester like Will Rogers is more than a mere sleeping potion, dulling men's minds and nerves—it is a healthful tonic, which is corrective in its influence.

The humorist comes to love to be laughed at, joins in the smiles at the exposure of its own folly. It is this gift which raised Aristophanes, Moliere and Shaw to the high niche they occupy. Somewhat in the same class, only reaching a vaster audience because unlike them Will Rogers did not seek to be mainly intellectual is his wisecracks. Underneath Aristophanes, Moliere and Shaw is a serious purpose to ridicule mankind into sanity in all things. The gentle humorist Will Rogers did his work in a more quiet and yet in a very subtle way.

In 1930 he wrote as his epitaph "I joked about every prominent man of my time but I never met a man I did not like." This shows the spirit of his fun and joking. That these persons were sane and that people were saner for his jokes goes without saying.

Once he said in reply to the question how he got away with handying the names of the great "I get away with it because I ain't for anything. I ain't selling anything. I ain't got no remedy for nothing." But yet his words "told" people did apply them as a real remedy. His greatness was because he was perfectly artless like the ideal "fool" of the Middle Ages, his philosophy of life was homely, his humorous sallies droll, his reasoning sound, and his attitude so intensely human.

Today there is many a man in high office and responsibility in the world who would profit by the shafts of a naive philosopher.

Those who never retract their opinions love themselves more than they love truth. —Joubert.

Evil events come from evil causes; and what we suffer, springs generally from what we have done.—Aristophanes.

A good man doubles the length of his existence; to have lived so as to look back with pleasure on our past life, is to live twice.—Martial.

We must remember how apt man is to extremes—rushing from credulity and weakness to suspicion and distrust.—Bulwer.

The covetous man never has money; the prodigal will have none shortly.—Ben Jonson.

TENT DWELLER OF ROSSMORE MEETS THE ANCIENT FISHERMAN!

The Golden Rod and wild purple Asters are now displaying their rich, royal colours in great profusion along roadsides and in all waste places. They aggravate Hay Fever, but they brighten up the prevailing grey, withered russets and browns. These lovely flowers are the last gift of bountious Dame Nature for this season, and reminder that we must soon make preparations for the rigours of a northern climate.

Meet The King Bird

A king bird, nearly black and about the size of a robin, has been a constant attendant of the tent-dweller at Rossmore for the past few weeks. This bird is so called because he selects a dead tree for his nest, and then fights off everything in feathers (even crows and hawks) that dare to come within a hundred yards of his domain. You admire his triumphant courage, and readily concede the title, "King." This little fellow is sulky and solitary with other birds, but not with people whom he loves and trusts, as our ducks do. He sits on the wire fence not more than ten feet away and watches you with interest, occasionally giving a chirp or two as if to say: "Fine day. Going to stay long." Then he sees a grasshopper, moth or other insect in motion, and like a flash of lightning he pursues and captures his prey almost on the wing. He returns to his observation position, faces his spectator, leisurely tears off wings and appendages, and then swallows the insect. Time is off then to his nest. The King bird, like the swallow and the night-hawk, obtains all his food on the wing, and hence can fly and turn with marvellous dexterity.

One afternoon the writer was having a wonderful time with a King bird, when a visitor ran his punt ashore near by.

The Ancient Fisherman

"Are you the fella what writes for the newspapers?"

"I guess," admitted humbly that I did now and again for just one paper, the best that I have found anywhere.

"Well I've heard a lot about you, and I wondered if your could help me. You see I'm an old fisherman, nets, hoops and anything, dynamite if I dared. I see you have some of my old hoop-poles in that Indian wigwam there."

"Yes, Captain, I found them lying along the shore, and put them in good service until you need them again. There are a number beautiful children in the cottages along here, who love to play Indian. Champlain and many of his Indian allies camped along that shore I'm told, and the children like to hear stories about those distant days; they even wonder if Indian ghosts come around here at night."

An Old Man Wonders

"I have no children, but, I guess they are all right in their place. I have just been looking around to see what I can do to help the time hang a few weeks. The weeds below the water are terrible, and then we can hardly sell our fish at any price. I'm an old man, what am I going to do; that's what I want to know."

"Perhaps the government could help you?"

"It's no use; I've tried that; I've tried everything—but drowning."

"Perhaps after election next month, times will be better?"

"Times have been getting worse as long as I can remember. Our political leaders make grand promises and secure much confidence just before an election, but after election people become suspicious and disconcerted like me." (Notice how eloquent Old-Timer becomes as he warms up.)

"Do you think that we select the wrong leaders, or that they have not the proper training?"

"Hooked a Big One"

"Just it, you hooked a big one that time. Our leaders have too much wealth and too much education. What do they know about a poor man like me?"

"No doubt you read your Bible, and you know how great leaders like Moses, John the Baptist, and others were chosen and trained, and the means that invariably attended their efforts? They spent a long preparatory period in the wilderness, fasting and communing with Nature."

"Bravo! Three cheers! Am I glad that I came here to meet you, Mr. Writer! You are the man we want to be our leader; wait until I tell the boys all about this."

As our ancient fisherman uttered these words he almost went through an Indian war dance and then pushed off his boat in the haste that hinted at an important mission.

The writer has tried in these few articles to entertain and instruct, and now that his friend Will Rogers has passed on, he will feel the responsibilities of his efforts more than ever.

It is now not only "Best wishes to all" but also "Good-bye" for a time.

REVOLT IN THE DESERT
by T. E. LAWRENCE

A shorus of delight burst out, during which he bent aside to whisper in my ear, "I mean the honour of nearly all of us." It was done so delightfully that I laughed, and said dismissingly, "I cannot understand what you mean." He replied, "I offered to serve for that last march under your orders, why was that not enough?" "Because it would not go with your honour" His murmured, "You prefer mine always before your own," and then sprang energetically to his feet, saying, "Now, Sira, praise God and work."

In three hours we had settled time-tables, and arranged for the encounters here in Abd el Iaaan, with their spheres and duties. I took my leave. Joyce had just returned to us from Sayyi, and Feisal promised that he would come with him and Marshall to Azrak to join me on the twelfth at latest. All the camp was happy as I got into a Rolls tender and set off northward, hoping, indeed, to reach Jauf by the fourth of September, yet to rally the Rifalla under Nuri Shaalan in time for our attack on Deraa.

CHAPTER XXX
IN THE ADVANCED GUARD

It was an inexpressible pleasure to have left the miles behind. We caught at each other with thankfulness as we drove standing, Dawnay, Hasir and myself. Lord Winterton was our last-found recruit. He commanded other men. Burton's Camel Corps, Shirfi Nasir, who had been space-pilot on the last Harrow armoured car, and Frank Makins, who sat in the box-body of the Rolls and by his hand across a furlong to each friend we overtook. Hasir we heard from Nasir, the alarmed Beni Sakhr that the Turks on the preceding day, had burned Azrak and imprisoned Nesib from Hesa into Tafileh. Mifleh thought I was mad, or most untimely merry, when I laughed outright at the news which four days since would have made me weep. In the old expeditions, but now we were started, the enemy might take Ab el Lissan, Jerf, even Akaba itself—and welcome! Our formidable talk of Arabian offensive had pulled their leg nearly out of socket, and the innocents were out to counter our merry. What man they sent south was a man, or rather ten men, mad.

In Azrak we found a few servants of Nuri Shaalan, and the Crossley car with a firing officer, an airman, some spares, and a canvas hangar for the two machines protecting our concentration. We spent our first night on their aerodromes and suffered for it. A reckless armoured-plated camel fly, biting like a hornet, occupied the ground parts till sunset. Then came a blessed relief as the filth grew active in the evening cool—but the wind changed and hot showers of blinding sailly dust swept us for three hours. We lay down and drew covers over our heads, but could not sleep. Each farmer was at pains to throw off the sand which threatened to bury us. At midnight the wind ceased. We leaned from our sweaty nests and restfully prepared to sleep—when, alarms, a cloud of mosquitoes rolled over us, then we fought till dawn.

Immediately, at dawn we changed camp to the height of the Meshrefe ridge, a mile west of the water and a hundred feet above the marshes, open to all winds that blew. We raised awhile, then put up the hangar, and afterwards went off to bathe in the river which encircled the ridge. We learned from our Beni Sakhr that the Turks had been very much perturbed by their visit. They were too bold with hunger to be afraid of water, and after bathing they lay naked in the sun and fraternally into our clothes, the blood running from twenty or thirty bites each.

Nasir stood and laughed at us. He had been surveyed together to the Jauf to rest midday there. All the Jauf was under one roof, and that only roof in the desert, was cool and peaceful. The Turks had driven the Arab fronds outside to a frostily rustling, neglected palma. Here the water was sweet, the food crop to be good; but the stems were thick with lice, bedbugs and other permanent shade. Under them, on his carpet, sat Nasir in his white robes, the centre of his thrown-away cigarette ends, collated out on the mats. He was feeding and fading through the sunspots which shone between the leaves. "Why," he asked, "do the men all happy."

In the afternoon an armoured car arrived, completing our necessary defence, though the risk of enemy was small. We had not yet cleared the country between us and the railway. There were no Turks on the Deraa line, none in Amman, also, as yet the Turks had no armoured cars of their aeroplanes. few over on the morning of the ninth, made a perfunctory reconnaissance, and went off without seeing us. Our camp, on its airy summit, gave us splendid observation of the Jauf and Amman roads. The day we twelve English, with Nuri and his slave, lazed, roaming, bathing at sunset, night-seeing, thinking, and sleeping comfortably all night, or rather I did, enjoying the precious freedom between the odds spared friends of Aba el Lissan and the enemy of next month.

The previous week had seem to have been partly in myself for on this march to Damascus (and secretly it was already in our imagination) my normal balance had changed and I could feel the taut power of Arab excitement behind me. The climax of the preparations had at last come and a united country was straining towards its historic capital. In confidence that this was open, tempered by myself, was enough that we were as safe as any one in the world at war. Because of the good luck I never had sent our "horsemen of St. George" ahead overnight to Azrak, trusted to the Beni Sakhr, purchasing all the barley on their threshing floors, and commandeering their transport. So we would require it for our attack on Deraa, and for our flight to Azrak. In addition, Feisal warned the Zaim to Nair, for service; and Hornsby, now (perhaps a year) accustomed to Arab clothes, was active in preparations for the advance on Madeba. His plan was to move about the nineteenth, when he had collected Allenby's attention to his hope beating to the on to Zerkeh, so that if we failed to destroy our force we could rally and reinforce his movement, which would then be the left flank of the Deraa swing to con how. However, the Turks knocked the rather flimsy bridge at Mafrag and to Tafileh, and Hornby had to defend Shobek with his force.

For our second part, the Deraa business, we had to plan an attack on the bone-dike which, garnished into the line near Amman, would prevent the Turkish reinforcement of Deraa, and maintaining its conviction that our real against the railway. This part to me that with Sayidara to do the actual destruction. The preliminary would be undertaken by the Ghurkas, whose detachment I would take with me, a month body from the main purpose.

This main purpose was to cut the railways in the Hauran and keep them cut for at least a week, and if possible to be three ways of doing it. The first was to march straight on to the Damascus railway, as on my ride with Talal, and the second to the Yarmuk railway. The second was to march south on Deraa, and the third to march on Es Salt in November, 1917, and to hold the hills overlooking the Jordan Valley.

The third scheme could to undertake with our Air Force would promise so heavy a daylight bombing of Deraa station that there would be lamtamount to artillery bombardment, enabling us to attack Deraa from the west with our two men. Salmond hoped to do this; but it depended on how many heavy machines he received or assembled in time. Dawnay would fly over to us here with his last word on September the eleventh. Till then we would hold the scheme equal in our judgment.

Of our supports, my bodyguard were the first to arrive, pranking up Wadi Sirhan on the fifth of September, happy, fatter than their fat camels, rested, and amused after their month of training with Auda-Rualla. They reported Nuri nearly ready, and determined to join us in a fortnight. Dhiab of Taffish—that incomplete Arab—followed them punctually on the fourteenth through to Kerak.

In addition, Feisal warned the Zaim to Nair, for service; and Hornsby, now (perhaps a year) accustomed to Arab clothes, was active in preparations for the advance on Madeba. His plan was to move about the nineteenth, when he had collected Allenby's attention to his hope beating to the on to Zerkeh, so that if we failed to destroy our force we could rally and reinforce his movement, which would then be the left flank of the Deraa swing to con how. # GORDON STEEL OF TWEED PICNICS AT MEMORIAL PARK

Families And Friends Have Delightful Afternoon

BAND CONCERT

Belleville Women Thrown Against Windshield And Hurt

Tweed—The first picnic of the families of the employees of the Gordon Steel Works Ltd. and Tweed Foundries, Ltd., was held at Tweed Memorial Park on Friday afternoon when about two hundred and fifty people, practically every one of whom is dependent in some way upon these two industries, were present. The meeting was held with the weatherman on his best behavior. The afternoon was devoted to band and water sports and an interesting program was run off. There was been rivalry between the Steel Works and the Foundry. The former emerged victorious by the small margin of 30 points to 44 points. High point winners were "Mickey" Maguire 18; "Lordy" Thompson 16, Earl Woodcock 11, John Marchen 10, John Orr 10 and Walter Leal 8.

War canoe race (4-man team)—Gordon Steel team composed of Shorey, Maguire, Wilson and Simmons defeated Foundries team.

Long plunge—H. Wilson, Maguire, E. Woodcock.

Basket Lunch

After the attractive program of sports was completed the long tables duly covered by their loyal followers, supper was served on the tables set under the trees. It was a fine sight to see the large crowd in the best of spirits as they sat down to tables laden with an abundance of good things. Among the guests of the management were the members of the Gordon Steel Works softball team, several of whom are not employees.

At the conclusion of supper some clever dancing was given on the pavilion by little Miss Ruth Hagerman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hagerman, Belleville, traveller of Gordon Steel Works in Northern Ontario. The little girl gave a clever exhibition of acrobatic dancing to music. This was followed by some splendid tap dancing by tiny Miss Ina Forster of Belleville, a girl not even more than pleased with their exhibition. Mrs. Mary Forster, also of Belleville, teacher of dancing, concluded this phase of the program with a tap dancing act that was heartily applauded. Miss Jean Richardson furnished the accompaniments for the dancers.

An interesting softball game between the Steel Works and the Foundry concluded the sports program, with the former winners by a score of 13 to 8 in the innings.

The lineups:

Steel Works—Goswell c, Maguire p, G. Shorey 1b, H. Thompson ss, G. Shorey 2b, H. Wilson cf, W. Hodgins 3b, C. Mitchell rf, J. Mills lf.

Drinkwater, Mrs. S. G. Way.

Tweed Council

The recent Sunday evening band concert by Tweed Citizens' Band, Walter J. Dark, conductor, and Scout 84 Memorial Park on August 18th. The popularity of these concerts is evidenced by the large crowds of people who attend. It is conservatively estimated that there were a thousand people present on Sunday evening. Under the capable bandmaster of the Machine Gun Corps Band, Hamilton, and now Bandmaster of Belleville Municipal Band, the very quiet conductor, directing the band during the rendition of "The Envoy".

An pleasing variation in the evening's programme was a vocal male quartette, "When I Survey the Wondrous Cross" sung by Messrs. Gil Colton, Jim Corbett, Jack Marchen and Arthur Corbett, four members of the band.

The leader of the band was the recipient of congratulations not only local persons but also people visiting Belleville and Tweed. Others were heard to comment very favorably on the showing of the band which improves with each public appearance.

The programme consisted of the following numbers: March, "Jolly Fellows"; Waltz, "Love Your"; Overture, "In the Stockade"; Serenade, "Down and Flowers"; March, "Proclamation"; Intermission; March, "The Envoy"; Waltz, "Beaun and Belles"; Vocal Quartette; Hymn and "Lead Kindly Light" (Sandon); Waltz, "Faith Looks Up to Thee"; Overture, "Monogram"; March, "Who Awaits", God Save the King.

Mr. W. S. Gordon, chairman of the Parks Board, expressed on behalf of the assembly their appreciation of the work of the band.

Trenton Hall, an elderly lady, of Belleville, while motoring with friends east of Fairfield's bridge near the railway crossing on Sunday evening was rather painfully hurt when thrown against the windshield of the car. The car in which she was riding turned out to meet another car and ran with considerable force into a culvert which crosses the road at this point. Miss Hall sustained lacerations and bruises on the forehead and a painful cut on the bridge of the nose. Dr. M. G. Dales of Tweed, who was passing at the time, kindly rendered first aid to the injured lady.

Ernest Armstrong of Kingston appeared before Magistrate Allen of Northbrook at a special session of the Police Court held at that place on Saturday to answer to a charge of careless driving said to have been committed on Highway No. 37, between Tweed and Belleville. According to the evidence submitted the police officers, Chief Constable Hayes of Tweed, and R.C.M.P. officer, arrested the speedometer of their car up to 75 miles per hour in an effort to overtake the speeding motorist who was later arrested in Belleville. On pleading guilty to the offence, Armstrong was required to pay $10 and costs.

Edward Dwyer of Sulphide also appeared before Magistrate Allen at Northbrook on Saturday morning charged with assaulting his wife on Thursday night, causing bodily harm. He was released on bail.

Master Fred Hayes, young son of Chief Constable and Mrs. J. C. Hayes was operated on for removal of tonsils by Dr. A. C. Locke on Friday.

Mr. and Mrs. F. R. Houston and family motored to Toronto Sunday where they were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Clare Barnett, former Tweed residents, now of Toronto.

Master Charles McCaw, young son of Mr. and Mrs. Jas. W. McCaw was operated on for removal of tonsils by Dr. A. C. Locke.

Dr. and Mrs. M. G. Dales and children were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Wright of Stirling at their cottage at Oak Lake.

SCHOOL TEACHER BID GOODBYE

Mr. C. A. Wells to Have Charge of Stirling School

Stirling, Aug. 20 (Special)—Cherry Valley public hall was filled to capacity on Friday evening when members of the community gathered to pay tribute to Mr. C. A. Wells, who, during the past years has been Principal of Cherry Valley School, and is now leaving with Mrs. Wells and little Eleanor for Stirling where he will be principal of the Continuation School. Mrs. Sam Armstrong and Miss Mary Kavanagh were responsible for the happy arrangements.

The hall was beautifully decorated with garden flowers. Mr. Phillip Dodds presided, and a very interesting programme of short speeches and vocal and instrumental music was given. Mr. Dodds then read an address to Mr. and Mrs. Wells, who will be greatly missed in the community. Mr. Wells has been a most successful teacher and public superintendent of the Sunday School, and active softball and hockey coach. Mrs. Wells has been a charming hostess and neighbor. Mr. and Mrs. Wells were presented with a beautiful floor lamp, and little Miss Eleanor with silver knife, fork and spoon. Refreshments were then served by the committee, and a social hour much enjoyed.

Mrs. Hilma Dodds and Miss B. Wood were Friday afternoon at the Woods' cottage, West Lake, on Friday afternoon at a delightful affair arranged tea honoring Mrs. Bernard Kingsley, a recent bride. Many summer blooms were used in profusion in the cottage, where Mrs. Dean and Mrs. Fred Wood presided at a beautifully appointed tea table. Mrs. Kingsley was presented with a lovely gift of crystal, to which she expressed her appreciation not only of the kind gift, but also the good wishes of her friends. Twenty guests motored out from town for the tea and enjoyed the afternoon in the lovely cool spot by the lake. Out of town guests were Mrs. Kemp, Mrs. Bolton and Mrs. E. R. Vanderwater.

Mr. and Mrs. C. R. Houston of Smith's Falls, Mrs. Arthur White of Belleville, and Mrs. Robert Otto of Plattsville are week end guests of Mrs. Houston's sister, Mrs. Wood's at her summer home, West Lake at Bonisteel Ferry is the guest of Miss Bernice Wood for a few days.

Harold Leavitt

A sad death occurred in Prince Edward County hospital on Friday when Mrs. Ethel Mae Wood Leavitt succumbed to peritonitis, following an operation for appendicitis eighteen hours earlier.

The deceased was born in Picton, forty-eight years ago, a son of John Leavitt and his wife Clara McCarthy. He served overseas in France during the Great War, returning to settle on a farm on the Belleville Road. He is survived by his wife and two grown sons.

A military funeral service was held in St. Mary Magdalene's church on Monday afternoon, and was largely attended. Rev. Cecil Whitaker preached a most interesting sermon, to these left to mourn a husband, father and brother. Interment was made in Glenwood cemetery.

Mr. C. O. King is enjoying a two weeks' holiday at Hallett, N.S.

Mrs. Thomas Mathie of Tweed and Mrs. Leonard Jones of Picton spent a week at Mrs. Mathie's home in Bay St.

Extensive repairs are being made to the store of Mr. Bonisteel, store, which will be occupied by the clothing business of N. Vanover and Son.

A host of friends here regret the continued serious illness of Rosalie Knox in Peterboro Hospital. His many friends in Tweed hope for a speedy recovery.

Mrs. John Sayers and daughter returned on Saturday from a visit with her uncle Mr. David Pollard of Adolphustown who is ill, and with her cousins, Mr. and Mrs. G. Pollard and family of Napanee, who are camping near the village.

Mr. William Caugh received the sad news on Sunday of the death of his niece Mrs. Ted Shreed at Edmonton, Alta. Mrs. Shreed was formerly of Kingston, and visited in Picton last summer.

Eleven hundred tickets, all that are available for sale, have been sold by band members for their garden party on Wednesday evening next. Many people are now dispatching that they will not secure a ticket last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Seth Shaw and Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Jones and Betty spent Sunday at Long Point with Mrs. Joseph Cerder.

JITNEY TOURNEY PROVES SUCCESS

Mr. Corcoran And Miss Sager of Tweed Have High Scores

Stirling, Aug. 20.—Special.—On Friday evening Aug. 16th, the Stirling Bowling Club held another very successful mixed jitney tournament when ten rinks took part in the afternoon and evening games, finishing and exciting. Five rinks were present from Tweed and five rinks from the local club. The weather was ideal, and all those who competed had a most enjoyable time. The prizes for the highest score among the visitors were won by Mr. Corcoran and Miss Dorothy Sager of Tweed. The highest among the local player were Mr. and Mrs. Heagle of Kingston who received the prizes for that distinction. Mr. and Mrs. Heagle are camping at West Lake and were invited by the local club to take part in the games. In the absence of Dr. Ross, the president of the Stirling Club the prizes were presented by Mr. Thos. W. Solmes Treas. At the conclusion of the tournament lunch was served by the ladies of the Bowling Club, And all those present were invited by Mr. A. McGuire, president of the Tweed Club to take part in a similar tournament which is being sponsored by the Tweed club on their greens next Friday evening. It was also brought to the attention of the members of the Stirling club that the Tweed club hold its rising open tournament on the afternoon of Civic holiday, Aug. 26th.

Service was held in St. Andrew's Presbyterian church for the first time in two weeks on Sunday morning. For the past two months the services have been held in St. Paul's United church under the direction of Rev. J. A. Kofferud who ministered to the members of both congregation during the absence of Rev. R. W. Rowland who was on his vacation. Mr. Kofferud left on Monday morning last for his vacation and Rev. R. W. Rowland, who returned home on the same day, conducted the morning service in St. Andrew's Church on Sunday delivering a fine message to both congregations as they gathered there. Mr. Arthur Duncan of St. Andrew's Choir rendered a fine musical part of the service as he offered as a tenor solo "Abide With Me" by J. L. Molloy. These union services are very popular and largely attended. Next Sunday the two congregations will again unite with Rev. H. W. Perley of Sterling Road who will be the special speaker.

Mrs. Ernest Gilroy and daughter Jean spent a few days with friends in Picton.

During the past few weeks the Stirling Rod and Gun Club are in receipt of open air concerts at Oak Lake and by popular request will extend these to so far as an indefinite period. So great is the popularity of these concerts which embrace the works of many prominent compositions, that the attendance, at times now quite large, necessitates the sorts known as Crescent Beach and Bird's, has nearly doubled that of last year. All those who attend these concerts once not only return themselves but also bring their friends. There is at all annual when it is readily learned that no other resorts in Ontario offer such fine accommodation to the public with no charge for admission or parking space. So it is that on Sunday evening hundreds of visitors find their way to this delightful spot to sit on the benches along the waterfront with the cooling breeze blowing over the waters which reflect the yellow fashion the many dazzling lights along the shores. Here in the quiet of the evening the strains of the rendition of fine music. Mrs. Eric Lovell and Jack left on Saturday for an extended visit with friends in Toronto.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Mason, Bennie and Rose, Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Brownson and Irene and Mr. and Mrs. Richard Mason of Springbrook spent Sunday at Moira Lake.

Mr. and Mrs. H. Lewis and family and Mrs. Hawthorne, all of Madoc, Mr. and Mrs. O. Sweetman of Belleville, and Mrs. and Mrs. Harry Hulin and family of Stirling were Sunday guests at the home of Mrs. Hulin's mother Mrs. H. Rosebush, Moira Lake.

Messrs. William Dunn, R. Ware, B. Fenney attended the Rosebud game in Petrolea on Wednesday, of last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Salisbury and Jean visited with friends in Tweed on Sunday.

Mrs. Robt. Price accompanied by Mrs. M. Halleyd of Minneapolis, Miss. left on Monday morning for Cobalt, Ontario. After spending the day at Cobalt at the home of Mrs. Price's daughter, Mrs. Carl Conley, they will go to Swastry Bush, Timmadoe, were among those who attended the band concert at Oak Lake on Sunday evening.

Friends of Mr. and Geo. Green will be glad to learn that he is sufficiently recovered from his recent illness to be out and was an interested listener at the band concert on Sunday evening. He is a valued and active member of Stirling Band several years.

Mr. G. L. Clute was guest soloist at St. Andrew's Church. Campbellford, on Sunday morning.

Many beautiful and useful prizes to be awarded the winners of various competitions at the flower show being sponsored by the Stirling Horticultural Society are now on display in the window of W. J. Wright's store. The annual flower show which is the first of its kind in Stirling, is next week in the Community Hall.

LOCAL ROTARY HIGHLY PRAISED

An official visit from District Governor Stanley Forbes of Brantford, featured the Monday meeting of Belleville Rotary Club. Governor Forbes proved to be a very enthusiastic Rotarian and gave a fine address on the Rotary Club and its work. He brought a resume of the doings and legislation enacted at the International Convention in Mexico City, at which Canada with 200 delegates was represented by 70 delegates. Work among crippled children in Belleville Club was favorably commented upon by the District Governor who pointed out that the method through which work could be extended. He said that he found the Belleville club in excellent financial condition and complimented the executive and working well on the various committees. If he had any criticism to offer it was that Belleville should have a too good a financial condition with the result that more work could better be expended. A large cash balance constituted a false sense of security and laxity. A live club was the spending kind, on good works, which with an empty treasury hustled out and got more money.

Belleville Rotary was complimented upon its action in selling a Ford car to a man who met with a distressing accident which brought him under the ban of the law and threatened his future. Belleville Rotary adopted this lad and one of the members took him into his home. Result: a fine type of citizen in the making. This was one of the finest and most Christian acts the District Governor has heard of and he was deeply impressed.

International Rotary is still growing with 3,548 clubs in operation at this date — the result of that Rotary meeting of several friends called in Chicago, February 23, 1905 by Rotary's Grand Old Man, Paul Harris, still active in the work and present at every International convention.

Vocal solos by James Banter, including "Gypsy Joe", and "Waggin Wheels", added greatly to the pleasure of the occasion, Alex nor.

Gordon playing the accompaniments.

S. R. Burrows acted as song leader and Dr. Guthridge as serpeciallt-sruna.

J. R. Boyce, president, occupied the chair, and E. V. Illey presented the pleasure of the members at the visit of the District Governor.

Walking Along the Beauty Route

(Copyright, 1938
King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Getting steamed up about calisthenics is easy enough. Every woman has that kind of a beauty spasm now and then. But sticking to the determination to give the muscles regular workouts isn't easy at all. The spirit weakens, the soul sickens — and whatever is the use, anyhow, when the young pot and the lipstick supply synthetic evidence of health and activity?

Not real evidence, but counterfeit. The purposes of exercise is to make the body structure march, to set the digestive system in a cheerful condition, to help the skin to function, to refresh the mind.

But we can understand the popular indifference to calisthenics. They're routine. They aren't interesting. Repetition is treason. At least that's the average woman's viewpoint. Men have better ideas. Many of them swing Indian clubs every day, go through setting-up exercises, have a swim, play tennis, jump rope, trail over the archery range or swing golf clubs. Geography they do. If they didn't, there wouldn't be any handsome male figures at the country club.

Women need exercise, as men do. If they don't get it, they face early. Health depends upon the serenity of the blood streams. Clots and then a faint voice squeaks out to the effect that "one doesn't want to look muscular." As if that could possibly happen. women feeling as they do about exercise.

Any woman can be a Mrs. Walker. Walking is good exercise, if properly accomplished. It helps to mold the figure to normal proportions. It keeps down weight if there's enough mileage covered. It is possible to every one. The business girl can tramp to work and back again, or part of the way. The mother can take the children with her; it's easier on the nerves than having them turn the house upside down. Even the Eldest should get out and hoof it.

The brisk walker who clinks it fresh air, swings her arms, steps lightly and quickly, chugs up and down the slow and warmth that results from this form of muscular exertion. Her worries fly away. Worrying is an indoor habit. Many a woman loves to get the day's work done and to sit down to a good old spell of worrying. And what time that is for her! Body is tired. It cramps it, pleats it, puts it in pockets. And when the papa comes home he wonders if that's the same woman he dragged off to a movie. Worries age.

Place the whole foot upon the ground with slightly more weight on the toes than the heels. Walk so the knees approaching (even the front will not see the soles of your shoes. Point toes straight ahead.

Carry the body tall, well balanced, with perfection of the full length tightens up the muscular system, holds the liver organs in and over where they belong, flexes the abdominal fibers, gives expansion to the chest.

It takes creases out of the neck, moves the lymph glands, helps to does so much to increase beauty wealth that the much-shuddered cluch ought to come out of her huddle and join the up-and-at-'em the walk brigade.

Braid is woven into the fashion picture as Schiaparelli favors a sequined scallop made entirely of black soutache braid. Hats in silver or gold soutache braid will be seen this Winter.

Make Child Good Sport

By LISA GRENELLE

One of the first things a child should learn is how to handle defeat.

His natural instinct is to howl when he's hurt, to resent unfairly a beating. No one likes to lose. But for most of us, life is largely made up of stinging disappointments of small defeats. And, if we can't take it, it's just too bad.

A poor sport is always despised by his contemporaries. No matter what other attributes a small boy may possess, if he can't "take it" he can't command his team mates, he is soon ostracized from or persecuted by the gang.

Control, however, is not mastered easily or quickly. If courage and good sportsmanship is not asked of a child at home from the beginning he cannot expect that his progress is overnight to make a good impression on his playmates.

Home Training Spares Child

Once any habit of behavior is formed or allowed to form, even for a short period during their earliest years, it is very difficult to break.

When Jimmie is old enough to run with the gang, certain hard-boiled elements will teach his good sportsmanship—or else. But, unless he has been prepared beforehand, at home, it will be a cruel, perhaps a devastating lesson.

It may result, if Jimmie is sensitive, in giving him an inferior and perhaps incurable fear of his own kind. The lesson being a new one when forced upon him, also will resent it. Tom and George have been taught to him — they've been worldly boys with whom he wants nothing more to do.

And all this humiliation, fear, resentment and subsequent loneliness Jimmie must endure could so easily have spared him.

Avoid Lavish Sympathy

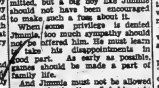
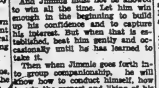
At two, or even a year and a half, Jimmie should have had his first lesson in control, courage and good sportsmanship. He fell down and fell in the garden path — of course it hurt, but must he howl a big one like Jimmie should not have been encouraged to make such a fuss.



When some privileges is denied Jimmie, and he is strongly moved to be pitiered him, He must learn to take his disappointments in stride. He must carry on healthy games should be made a part of his life.



And Jimmie must not be allowed to win all the time. Let him win in the beginning to build up his confidence and to capture his spirit, when that is established, beat him gamely and occasionally until he has learned to take it.

Then when Jimmie goes forth in the group companionship, he will know how to conduct himself, how to win the respect and liking of his contemporaries through ahabit of good sportsmanship, become a he-boy, been taught him in babyhood, and practiced by him in early childhood at home.

Correct Manners

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

(Copyright, 1938, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

EXPRESSING CONDOLENCE

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

When expressing one's sympathy to a bereaved family is it proper to do so on arrival or departure? and just what is the proper thing to say?

K.

It is more natural for us to say our words of sympathy and understanding when we arrive in the bereaved home. And we should guage very carefully what we say and how much we say. For there are definitely about what they wish said on the occasions. Some people find relief in talking naturally about their bereavement. While to other people it is an unbearable experience and they can't bring themselves to talk about their sorrow.

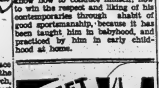
So we must be sensitive about the first words we say, feeling our way in sensing what the other person's wishes are. The understanding manner in which we say the first words, and the accompanying warm-hearted, revealing handclasp are most important.

If, for instance, when we greet the person, we shake hands and say, "I am so sorry, Mary," or "Mary dear, please let me say how sorry I am," we will know at once from Mary's response, whether or not she wishes to speak of her sorrow.

Ordinarily we stay only briefly for such a visit, and as we rise, it is natural and human to say, "Is there anything that I may do, Mary?" or "Mary isn't there some thing that I may do? sons errands, perhaps, or to anything that will make it easier for you? I should love to be of help."

Man Walks On the Outside

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:



A very obstinate friend of mine tried to convince me that when two ladies and one gentleman are walking together the gentleman walks on the outside. I have tried to tell me that when a gentleman, his wife and another lady are walking together, his wife must be next to him on the inside. He argued very heatedly about this.

Please tell me who is correct. I have insisted that the gentleman should walk between the ladies, whether or not one is his wife.

F.

Your friend is right when he maintains that when two women and one man are walking together, the man walks on the outside of the curb. He should not walk between the two women.

There is not such a definite rule

REASONS FOR HAVING BLUES

Mental Depressions Often Come From Organic Source

By Louis E. Bisch, M. D., Ph. D. Famous Authority on Health and Psychology

(Copyright, 1938, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

"Having the blues is one of the commonest of our indispositions. Women experience such occasional depressions more frequently than men, but business men are victims, while even children are not wholly exempt.

Whenever you have the blues you may be sure that there is a reason for it — a good, sound, logical reason, to boot.

First and foremost of the organic side. The general state of the digestion should always be investigated. Toxic states caused by chronic failure of complete elimination are among the worst offenders. Under such circumstances, the poisonous products which should have been discharged are absorbed into the intestinal walls, into the lymph and blood streams, and so affect the nerves, the brain and the thought processes.

Therefore, it is not surprising that when we find that the bowels are unable to think clearly and effectively. Normally our thoughts are hazy, jumbled and rambling. We think more of less by chance. Losing the so-called 'cool' idea in our stream of thinking, we seem to lose control.

The realization that our mind is not functioning as it should has a lot to do, of course, with making us feel down-hearted. When attention and concentration do not act quite as they should be, the natural feeling of well-being is upset.

Persons who are subject to repeated attacks of the blues should look to other organs besides the digestive tract for discovery of perhaps the beginning of some chronic condition is to blame.

A person with a sore liver trouble, for instance, and not know it. Yet retention of bile, or chronic malfunctioning of the liver, gall bladder or its ducts, may, on the other hand, give one a pessimistic look on life — anxiety and even fear.

Heart disorders have a way of developing uneasiness in the mind. These unconscious processes are perceived and interpreted by the sufferer as mental or nervous trouble rather than organic heart disease.

Lack of exercise and too little variety, fun and laughter are also prime causes for the blues. Disturbances in the emotional sphere, especially in the relationship between the sexes, misunderstanding between loved ones, overwrought-ness—any one of these may bring on a case of the blues.

Lastly, one must consider the various neurotic — the purely functional — causes for depression.

These reveal themselves in various ways as depression, anxiety, panic or other apparent cause; disinterest, lack of ambition, pessimism, perhaps a cynical or fault-finding attitude.

The point is, however, is that the blues need not be. If they occur frequently, and continue inside, they tend to persist, one should not consider them natural, but should, rather, seek out a competent physician and find out why they occur.

Nature is optimistic and when the body and mind are working efficiently, only optimism pervades the whole body.

Dr. Bisch's Daily Health Hint

The proper chewing of food is as important as its preparation. In fact, it is a good plan at each meal to add something to the diet that requires a great deal of chewing in order that the flow of saliva may be promoted. Such articles are toast, zwieback crackers, dry cereals, celery stalks and meat.

Aiding Child To Develop Mind

Teach Concentration Through a Natural Interest is Advice

by LISA GRENELLE

Willie didn't pass any of his examinations. It wasn't that he was dull or lazy; he spent enough time on his homework. He puttered around with it until it was co late to go out and play, and stayed up long after bedtime to put on the finishing touches.

Consequently, his parents were shocked and amazed. It must be the fault of the teacher, they reported, that Willie was a difficult child.

Why? Was he stubborn? Well, no. The teacher didn't think Willie was stubborn. Simply? No, not stupid, either. Lazy? Not Lazy—it was that he couldn't force his mind on anything for any length of time. Willie had never learned to concentrate.

The principal duty of any school is not to prepare children for college board examinations, but to teach children to study, to teach them to concentrate. This, however, is difficult, if not impossible if the teachers have no help from the home.

Young as a child is when he enters school he is able to start to think to begin to organize his mental processes.

The proper time for a child to learn to concentrate is three, and earlier if possible.

One Try at Time

To encourage a small boy to centre his attention, give him only one try at a time. Don't let him say, "I'll try again," or "I'll try harder." Such phrases stimulate creative effort and concentration. Not a colorful picture, but a black blocked beads, colored straws for weaving the choice depending on the child's skill, abilities and interests—but always something out of which something may be created.

Then, after the attention is captured, leave the child alone to exercise his own initiative, to use without interruption or interference his own mind. He should be as little help as possible, but always plenty of encouragement and praise. Any constructive result achieved.

If, however, the child becomes bored, remove the toy at once, and don't produce it again until he's had a good rest. He should be in no disappointment but never disapproved of because he cannot concentrate. Failure through lack of ability must be ignored and an easier task given the child to encourage him.

Reading aloud helps a child to concentrate, but the practice isn't to be put regularly. Stop it when he shows signs of boredom. A wandering attention is hard to hold. You can't expect him to concentrate on anything for that doesn't interest him.

The child to achieve is the habit of concentration — a habit which may be formed little by little more guiding him from the infantile mind and see it become easier, and finally instinctive.

A soft touch is being given the cocktail suits of velvet that are so much the vogue. Velvet is being used again in town. Light flowered prints and fluffy laces in chiffons will be worn with these suits which achieve ankle length skirts.

Board Room Gossip

As supplied to Bigger and Crawford by Standard Service.

PINK PROGRESS AT STADACONA.

Work has recently been proceeding on four levels at the Stadacona workers Mines, with values in the drifts being maintained at the mine average or better. On the 150 foot level a drift being driven west on the No. 1 vein to connect up with the main raise has already put up about 40 feet west of the shaft on the No. 1 vein. This drift was according to a report of last Friday.

On the 300-ft. level, 12ft drift on the No. 1 vein 610 feet west of No. 46 crosscut, while the drift east from No. 1 vein from the No. 46 crosscut. The manway raise was up 206 feet on the incline.

On the 450-ft. level, the north crosscut to the No. 2 vein is 311 feet, and Friday the drift west was in 91 feet and the drift east 90 feet. On the 500-ft. level, the crosscut is 290 feet north and 46 ft. south, with the drift west on the No. 2 vein 60 feet and the drift east 90 feet, and that to the east 55 feet.

One would have to look back a long way to find better technical conditions than exist in the local markets at the present time. Brokers in this district have been declining steadily for some time past, money is extremely easy and speculative interest has been practically dead for the past week or so has been almost entirely absent. The most likely reason to doubt that sound Canadian equities will move forward considerably during the next few weeks.

CANADIAN PACIFIC RAILWAY

In answer to an enquiry from a subscriber, the Wall Street Journal offers the following opinion on C.P.R.:

"Better crop conditions combining with higher commodity prices of the moderate upward trend in general business activity, Canadian Pacific Ry. may report substantially improved net profits showing of 1934, when net income of $6,196,780—equivalent after allowing for dividend requirements on the 4 per cent preference stock to seven cents for each of the 13,400,000 ordinary shares outstanding. That estimate, set with earnings of $1,257,161 in 1933, and $23,681,381 in 1932, is a far cry from the $48,313,437, or $3.57 an ordinary share, earned back in 1930 in order to maintain the secured bank loans outstanding, and the dividend rate, but with the financial condition improved, management is contemplating issuance of $50,000,000 of new debentures shortly.

"As indicated by its ability to report $1,257,161 net during period without digging into "red ink", Canadian Pacific Ry. is now substantially capitalized, with interest embracing grain elevator, telegraph, and hotel investments, and with as well as operation of a 17,000-mile railroad system, the company vast territory in the still relatively undeveloped Canadian provinces, the enterprise should benefit from increasing longer-term prospects. At present prices the stock ranks among the best secturian as especially low relative to current earnings and dividends, but commitments at this juncture probably would work out quite profitably over a period of years."

Chief of Clan McLeod Dies

Edinburgh, Aug. 30.—(CP Cable)—Sir Reginald McLeod, chief of the Clan McLeod and owner of the famous castle of Dunvegan in Britain, died today at the age of 88 years.

He was born at Castle Dunvegan, on the Isle of Skye.

TORONTO STOCKS CLOSE

Toronto, Aug. 30 (CP)—Toronto industrial share market was inclined to firm up in the afternoon but the comeback was not fast enough to erase all the early recessions and net losses were in the majority over gains at the close.

The oils took heavy trading up to 5-8 in International Petroleum and Imperial American, while Imperial closed unchanged. Closing prices round the food, gold and steel stocks on the down side.

Minor recessions were boarded for the leading industrial shares during the early trading as weakness in New York market and influence here. Oil shares were chiefly affected and the buying was heavy for a time but showed to better advantage in the early afternoon.

In the face of a strong metal market, Canadian Malartic dwellers declined two points and International Nickel weakened a fraction to 32 1-2. Losses of 1-4 were chalked up for imperial and British American Oil and International Petroleum ragged a full point to 23 1-2.

Pulp, utility and steel stocks were slightly off color and Brazilian dropped below 5.

TORONTO MINES
(Cless)

Toronto, Aug. 30 (CP)—Another day of gains before the close in the Metal listings cheered Toronto Stock Market though a sealing down of quotations in the gold and some of the silvers had a softening effect. Yet big Base Metal, Hudson Bay and Noranda, did not let up as a penny lower and the buying splurge was less active in the late afternoon.

Noranda was general in the gold listings while silvers were moderately active. Lower trading and Base Metals were buoyant and active. Trading was in good volume though the day before fell below which the pace eased up.

Base Metals Consolidated soared 70; Sherritt Gordon at 83, Falconbridge at 4.17 and Sudbury Basin at 1.64 showed good advances in cents each by early afternoon and Noranda added a half plat. Hudson Bay continued slow and steady.

Sylvanite, Siscoe, Central Patricia, McWatters and McKenzie took losses to 4 to 7 cents each and Little Long Lac at 4.70 was off 30 cents.

NEW YORK CLOSE

New York, Aug. 30—(AP)—After showing distinct weakness in the first three hours, the stock market turned strong in the late session and started to regain its losses.

The rally was led by the utilities which had been in the forefront of the decline during the week. Consolidated Gas, Columbia Gas, United Corp. and Pacific Gas cancelled recessions of a point or more while American Telephone cut a 4-point loss in half.

Strength was displayed by Douglas Aircraft which ran up 2 points, while United Aircraft ran up a point. Improvement was also shown by Westinghouse Electric, North American, U. S. Steel, Auburn, Anaconda, Kennecott, U.S. Smelting and New York Central. Chrysler, General Motors, Curtiss-Wright, Douglas and Boeing were irregular. Transfers approximated 2,000,000 shares.

WALL STREET FINANCIAL

New York, Aug. 30 (AP)—The stock market fell back under a new flurry of selling Tuesday to end the day with the utilities leading the retreat.

A break of more than 4 points in American Telephone toppled the utilities and liquidating pressure on the ticker behind floor transactions. In addition to the drop in the telephone issues, losses of fractions to 2 or more points were suffered by Union Pacific, Santa Fe, Western Union, Consolidated Gas, American Water Works, Public Service of New Jersey, Chrysler, General Motors, Sears Roebuck, R. C. A., Westinghouse, Case and Johns-Manville. Moderate gainers included Douglas Aircraft, Montgomery Ward, Kennecott and Anaconda were also weak.

Fractional recessions appeared among such Canadian issues as Dome, International Nickel and Canadian Pacific. On the curb Hiram Walker was the Dominion government bonds ruled steady. Canadian funds improved 1-16 of 1 cent at 99 13-16 cents.

FEAR FOUR LIVES LOST WITH SCHOONER

Boston, Aug. 30 (CP)—The probable loss of four lives in a marine disaster was reported today as four surviving members of the crew of the wrecked New York fishing schooner Hazel reached Boston aboard a Norwegian freighter. The survivors, coatless and cold, were Brooklyn, N.Y., men and another from Boston had been lost at the island bank off Nantucket yesterday.

BRITAIN, FRANCE ACT IN CONCERT IN AFRICAN CRISIS

mission was regarded as a likelihood in the near future. Ethiopia's entry into Italy had been introduced as evidence of Premier Mussolini's continuous, establishing Dalual, disputed area, as being in Ethiopian Territory. The source said the map would be recognized by Italy.

Italy acknowledged the inevitability of war in East Africa today with what appeared to be concessions to other powers to interfere with its conquest.

Italy openly expressed scepticism that "diplomatic channels" would avert a bloodshed "threatening" Ethiopia.

France and Italy

War was expressed by French officials as the Franco-Italian friendship strengthened last January in a Rome conference between Mussolini and Premier Laval was shattered.

They thought it unlikely Italy would support France in view of Premier's opposed attitude to Italy now.

Addis Ababa, Aug. 30.—(AP)—Ethiopia aged its further war preparations in secret today, hurriedly completing a cartridge factory in Addis Ababa to remedy the army's most serious weakness—lack of ammunition.

Livestock

Toronto, Aug. 30.—(CP)—Despite a light run of less than 500 head the cattle division of the Toronto Livestock market was still cluttered all the opening hour today with 2,300 head overs, mostly steers and butchers. Only sales in the first hour were a few cows and steers. Calves, sheep and lambs opened steady while hogs met their usual unsettled opening.

Receipts reported by the Dominion Livestock branch were—Cattle, 400; calves 370; hogs, 440; sheep, and lambs 378.

Cows opened at $1.50 for canners to $2.35 for good butchers with few up to $2.50. Steers were steady at $3.50 to $4.50 for bulk. The calf division had on yesterday's decline as $7.00 to $7.50 for good vealers and up to $8 tops on best grades. Lights were from $3.50 to $4.00 while common to medium kinds brought $6.00 to $6.50.

Hogs were unsettled with packers bidding a shade lower than yesterday's $9.65 level on off trucks, the only grade to sell.

Lambs were steady at $7.50 for good ewes and wethers and from $5.50 to $6.00 for culls and bucks. Sheep ranged from $1.00 to $2.00 cwt., according to quality.

Quotations:
Cattle and hogs—No quotations.
Calf, sheep and lamb quotes were unchanged.

CHICKEN SUPPLY REPORTED LIGHT

Stocks of eggs in cold storage in Canada on August first this year were 5,796,625 dozen, as compared to 13,802,873 dozen on August first last year, according to the report of the Dominion Bureau of Statistics. Frozen poultry stocks on the first of the month were 2,000,000 pounds as against 3,217,123 pounds a year ago.

Egg stocks are the lightest on record. There have been six years in the past ten when poultry holdings have been lighter, than at present but the difference with respect to poultry stocks is considered quite substantial. Stocks of fowl and turkeys are about normal, but chickens are light and the higher grades of chickens are especially all been used up. Heavy turkeys are becoming scarce and light fowl are moving better at somewhat lower prices, according to the Ontario Department of Agriculture.

U. K. BUTTER STEADY

Ottawa, Aug. 30.—(CP)—Butter prices were steady this week on United Kingdom markets, the department of Agriculture reports. New Zealand finest sold there on Aug 24 at 94s cwt. (20.56 cts 20.80 cents a pound); Australian 92 to 93s (20.45 to 20.68 cents).

Cheese prices were firm. New Zealand selling from 47 to 48s cwt. (10.44 to 10.77 cents a pound); Canadian, unchanged from 52 to 53s (11.56 to 11.78 cents).

EGG EXPORTS UP

Ottawa, Aug. 30.—(CP) The Dominion Bureau of Statistics reported an increase in exports of eggs in shell during the first seven months of 1938.

Cheese exports of 52,807 cwt. last month were worth $481,764, compared with 78,345 cwt. at $646,642 in July last year. Great Britain took 4558,807 cwt. in July, 1938.

Butter exports in July were 295 cwt., worth $2,282, compared with 438 cwt. at $9,020 in July last year.

GRADED EGG PRICES

Toronto dealers yesterday were paying the following prices for graded eggs: Fresh grade "A" large, 25 to 25 1-2c; grade "A" medium, 24 to 24 1-2c; "B", 20 to 21c; "C", 17 1-2c.

POTATO PRICES

New Ontario potatoes were quoted yesterday at 45 to 75 cents per bag to the retail trade. Prince Edward Island old potatoes were 60 to 85 cents.

While Cards Enjoy Selves Giants and Cubs Sneak Over Victories to Increase Leads

Giants Now 3 Games up While Cubs Are Tied With Cards

YANKEES WIN

George Selkirk, Batting Star of The Pastime

By ANDY CLARKE

Associated Press Sports Writer

St. Louis Cardinals turned their backs yesterday and the Giants and the Cubs sneaked one over on them.

Fresh from their series conquest of the Giants and with dreams of greater glory, the gashouse gang of Frankie Frisch went up to Lewistown, Me., to take an extra slam at the stagnating Boston Braves in an exhibition game while their two chief competitors stayed in civilized and made their profits.

The Giants increased their lead over the second place St. Louis club to three full games by whipping Cincinnati Reds 4-3 in 11 innings, while the Cubs moved into a virtual tie with St. Louis by shading the Phillies 3-2.

Dick Bartell was effective with the mace as he singled pulled their rivals out of the fire. He collected a total of three hits, starting the deciding blow after the New Yorkers had tied the score in the eighth inning and in the base path he set Bartell beat out a hit to short while Ott dusted home with the ball game.

Things looked bad for the Cubs for the first seven innings as Ray having collected nary a run or hit in that span. For six innings Lon Bowman pitched superb ball and in the seventh he allowed but two harmless hits. In the eighth, however, an error by Mickey Mealin, a double by Ogrodowski and a walk to Augie Galan, loaded the bases and Sylvester Johnson was called to the scene. Billy Herman caught one of his pitches for a single and the winning runs were over the plate.

Yankees Win

The Yankees got into the win column again after three straight defeats by jumping the tables on the league leading Detroit Tigers, 7-6. The defeat cut the Tigers' margin over the Yanks to seven games.

An enthusiastic crowd of 32,000 saw George Selkirk practically lick the Tigers single handed. Selkirk batted in all of the Tigers' runs. He connected for five hits including a home run, a double, in as many times at bat, drove in four runs and scored three himself. Red Ruffing, Tony Lazzeri and Johnny Broaca were the only Yanks who failed to connect at least once as three of Mickey Cochrane's second string hurlers offered ten runs scattered so to the tune of 16 safe blows. A half dozen of them clouted the ball over the circled lining the field.

The big crowd got a thrill in the ninth inning when with two on Harry Greenberg came to the plate. A homer would mean the ball game but like the Casey of the fa mous tap room ode, Greenberg struck out.

White Sox Divide

The Athletics and Chicago White Sox divided a doubleheader, the Athletics taking the opener 7-2 while the White Sox the afternoon 6-4. The seven splits dropped the fourth-place Chicagoans to within one-half percentage point of the second division. Bobo Johnson hit his 22nd homer and Foxx his 23rd.

Hal Trosky's homer with the bases loaded in the eighth helped Clevelan Indians defeat Washington in the seconn 11-5. The Indians won the game on Joe in the eighth when they scored six runs on three hits.

WOOLER LOSES TO AAJMAAS

Local Team Wins The First Game in Softball Playdowns 6-5

Trenton, Aug. 20.—(Special)—Glen Bowker and his mates of Consolidated Cement defeated the Belleville Senior Softball League, took the Wooler Legion here last night by a close 6-5 decision. Wooler won the honors in the Trenton Softball loop.

The locals seemed to be suffering from an attack of stage fright and did not hit the ball as they generally do. They swung at everything that Johnny Bawden threw from the Aajmaa mound. He started off very wild and passed three batters in the opening frame and the Leafs ran in four runs. They were held scoreless until the last of the ninth when they had a wonderful chance to win the game. Whitney started off the man singled but he advanced to third on the long fly to right field off Reda's bat. Fox singled and scored Forsyth. Yunn, Watson's home run hitter of the League doubled for his first hit of the game to put two on bat. Redcliffe went out at first to end the game.

Free walked two and whiffed three, while Bawden gave seven free rides to first and left eight on the plate swinging. Whitney let J. Bawden's hit to left field in the eighth roll between his legs and Bawden romped all around. Free was nicked for twelve hits, while Wooler only managed to touch Bawden for seven .safeties. Carm Cook, former Trenton player, was the pick of the Trenton defensively. while Tuttle was the leading batsman. The pitchers game will be played in Belleville tomorrow night. The largest crowd in many months was on hand to cheer for the Wooler Leafs in their first provincial play-down game.

Aajmaa Club—ab. Denis 3b; Tuttle lf; Henn 2b; Cook ss; Hanna lf; Kiser rf; H. Bawden 1b; Gray c; J. Bawden p.

LATTA WINS THIRD GAME

Defeat Foxboro 3 to 2 With Hurler Having 13 Strikeouts

Scoring two runs in the first innings by singles by C. Hall and A. Hall and a smashing triple by J. Marsh to deep centre field Latta took the lead in the third game played at Foxboro before a large crowd of interested spectators; Foxboro were held scoreless until the fifth, when K. Ashley scored Bailey and Walt with two runs to even the score. Latta were not to be denied and S. Vance walked in the sixth was sacrificed to second and stole third and came in on the throw which was wild at third base. This ended the scoring, although Foxboro threatened in the eighth, when two were on with nobody out, but sterling pitching by R. Tyner held them scoreless.

S. Tyner pitched splendid ball having thirteen strikeouts as against nine for Peacock. Foxboro's southpaw; Peacock was more generous allowing five walks as Tyner only walked two.

Marsh headed the Latta batters with a triple followed by singles by C. Hall, A. Hall, B. Vance, S. Parks and Tyner.

Latta— Foxboro followed by Ashley, Seeley, Gay, Ketcheson, Johnson and Bailey.

Interest in these games is at fever heat as both teams are evenly matched.

Next game is at Latta on Wednesday at 7.30 p.m.

Umpires— plate J. Marsale; bases Jack Tupper.

Line-up—Latta C. Hall, J. Gows, A. Hall, Young, J. Marsh, S. Vance; C. Parks, J. Shannon, B. Tyner.

Foxboro—K. Ashley, A. Seeley, A. Gay, E. Ketcheson, B. Johnson, Bailey, G. Wall, R. Ketcheson, S. Peacock.

Baer's Hands are In Good Shape For Louis Fight

By EDWARD J. NEIL

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Speculator, N.Y., Aug. 20 (AP)—If Joe Louis is in the house where Max Baer is working next now as later. There isn't a single thing wrong with Max Baer's hands, and if the truth of that great pugilistic mystery were much more wrong.

In an atmosphere so quiet it is almost deafening, totally foreign to his former surroundings, Baer settled training for a week for his battle with the sensational negro, September 24. He won't start boxing until Friday. He isn't going to box much more than a day or two before losing his wooly heavyweight championship to Jimmy Braddock in a terrific exhibition in June. He's going to box four rounds a day at his camp, but he's going to call over every second he has his gloves on.

A New Baer

The story of a "new Baer" a "new Joe Dundee" a "new this or new that" as old as fight ballyhoo itself. Here in these same Adirondack mountains the same hills where Baer runs five miles every morning, on the same Lake Sanford where Baer rows for an hour daily, a "new Gene Tunney" was born seven years ago, prior to Gentleman Gene's second great bout with Jack Dempsey in Chicago in 1927.

So might it be with Baer, but at the moment he's the most confirmed Baer or all the daffy years of this unpredictable California giant has been rising to tremendous heights, and plumbing the depths of notoriety, alternately and when least expected. For once nothing he is doing is unexpected. He married than anyone would expect of the night club delight.

Remember Sitalski?

He seems to realize the seriousness of his task and the closeness of oblivion.

"I'm not kidding myself," he said today. "It's miss and out for me this time. I'm not going to miss. I'm not overlooking that kid in a different way from the night I lost to Primo Carnera. I'm the guy that flattened Max Schmeling and Primo Carnera. I'll be the biggest guy in the fight game then. I'll have stopped the black menace. I'll get another shot at Braddock and I'll knock him out, too, the next time."

Baer weighs about 217 pounds. He has five weeks to get about 10 pounds off and be at his scalpine. It has been hitting the big bag with terrific power. Braddock down to Baltimore had him what to do for the only real injury he suffered, a bruised knuckle on his left hand. He wears a special pad over it in training, but it's the feeds on pain no matter how hard he hits.

Under Examination

Friday Jack Dempsey to New York to let the New York State Athletic Commission physicians examine his fists to decide whether they're in shape.

Throw out the Braddock fight," Baer insisted. "I simply made a mistake in it. I thought it was a soft touch and I kidded myself. The only thing I'm glad about is that Braddock—the lucky guy like Braddock, who needed the dough got the gate. Everything was set for the best. I'll flatten Louis and then win the title back."

Baer's father, Jacob, who next to the new Mrs. Max Baer, nee Lorraine Sullivan, influences the former champion most, arrived yesterday. "He wrote that if I came he'd walk the chalk line," said Baer, "and I'll say this—if he doesn't, I'll lick him myself."

WITH THE LAWN BOWLERS

by McElheran & Watkin,

On Saturday afternoon C. Sulman beat Geo. Watkin in a game of bowls the game was decided on the last shot and Charlie sure can take it. The teams were C. Sulman and W. Adams; G. Watkins and Joe Black.

We are invited to Picton on Thursday evening, Aug. 29th. They have asked for twenty-four men. Anyone that would like to make the trip give your name to the President. The first twenty-four names will be accepted.

The winners in our Jitney were—Mrs. Tanner, Miss Thompson, (Desoronto); Mrs. Shaw, Mrs. Mathews (Deseronto), H. Thomas, (Deseronto), T. Solmes, (Stirling), C. Sulman, Mrs. Mc Millan, Mrs. Springs, Joe Black, Bob Dewar.

We wish to thank the following ladies for their help in serving the lunch —Mrs. R. A. Backus, Mrs. Wilbur, Mrs. Hogle, and all others who helped to make the lunch such a success.

In a game of doubles on Monday afternoon—J. Holley and N. Willing, Geo. Watkin and C. McIntosh by three shots.

Our Monday night game was one of the most exciting we have had for a long time twenty-four rinks were playing and everyone had a real good time. One of the highlights of the affair was when one of our men bowlers came out all excited and said say we have four Baldwins against us that's not fair. So I explained to him it was the way they draw same and would have to say that way. After eight ends had been played the score was tied at 11 all. Gentlemen!!. So ons never knows.

Our vice president was out watching the game affair. Glad to see you Davy.

Twenty bowlers from Stirling and twenty from Deseronto along with sixty-six from our own club made up the twenty-four rinks.

We have invited Kingston up to a night game in the near future.

Glad to see Alf Heyworth back. Alf looks as though he had been in Ethiopia. He sure has a lovely tan.

We were sorry to learn that Mr. Baker of Stirling is not well and was unable to play on Monday night.

Frisch Does a Dance But Moore Gets Base

Joe Moore, slugging Giant outfielder, opened the eighth inning of New York's crucial double header against the Cardinals with a single to centre, whence he advanced to second on a passed ball by catcher Delancey. In the picture, Moore is shown arriving safely at the keystone sack, as Frankie Frisch performed a few fancy steps in his efforts to stop Delancey's peg from going beyond the field. Durocher batting up Frisch, leaped up and stopped the ball, thus holding Moore to second. The Giants lost the second game 3-0 after having won the first 6-4.

CURRENT SPORT

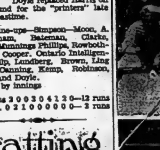
DAY BY DAY

Like a bolt from the blue, the information that the Oshawa and Belleville juniors were to play in this city tonight, came rather suddenly, giving the Kiwanis kids little opportunity to advertise their first home game in the O.H.A. intermediate series. Coach Allen Meagher would have much rather had the initial game of the series away from home, but orders is orders and the kids will walk up to the Fair grounds in time to watch the local junior team open fire for the first time. Just who Coach Meagher will use in the pitching assignment is to still questionable, except for the belief that either "Lefty" Weeks or Johnnie Bawden will get the call. Of course the kids also have Joe Belcher, who also toases a mean curve, Bradd, a brother of Jerry Bradd who played hockey for the local Cities service hockey team some years ago, is the same burler reported by the Motor City crew and may be used in tonight's twilight fixture at the Fair Grounds.

While all of this is going on the Belleville intermediates will be battling with the Picton "Blue Sox" in the first game of the Bay of Quinte League play-offs over in the Prince Edward County seat. Manager Fanning took his charges and Coach Casey and Ernie Smith for the trip early Sunday morning, but Lofft for relief duty. The local "kids", expect to be in full attendance this afternoon and intend making matters interesting for the Doyle-Church - Keho regulars in addition to whether Church or Bishop succeed in the mound assignment. Umpires game with neutral umpires officiating will be Ken Hall and Ken Ivy Friday as a twilight fixture.

On another week, the Belleville Fair will be in operation and with it the annual Exhibition ball game, racing and we know of a lot of people who are just looking for it. There will be real meals. As usual the horse committee has been generous in providing amusement for the lovers of horse flesh and as in years gone by, the racing will be keen. The Parks Board has assisted materially in that the racing strip has been especially prepared for the occasion, the weeds all taken from the course and the grandstand painted. The track has been levelled and rolled until it is as near perfect as hands can make it.



For the first time in this city a race over will be featured. This race will be for three year olds and there are several fast ones entered in the country and there will be a purse of $150.00 for the winner, while on Friday a $250 class for $150.00 and a $.14 class for $200.00 will be the features. The entrance is five percent and no deductions from money winners. The racing chairman, Harry Ketcheson has already received a number of applications for stabling room and the three day meet should be worthwhile. As usual, the meet comes between Oshawa and Toronto and there should be be dearth of horses.

Yesterday's news that Jim Barclay had met with a serious accident, while bravely trying to stop a runaway automobile on Pine St., was received with anxiety in the camp of the Stewart-Warners. Dr. A. Flynn, the club physician, today announced, that Jim had received some nasty gashes about the head and arms, as the result of flying glass when the driverless car struck a telephone pole, just as he had boarded it. He will be indisposed for about a week, but as the league play-offs will doubtless be postponed for some time, Barclay, it is hoped, will not be a loss to the Stewart-Warners.

At the request of Secretary Newt Thompson and President Max Hamilton we publish the first All Star team of three, this team to be over choice providing Belleville Rangers should win the O.H.A. and have to meet the pick of the other three—naturally we picked the toughest opposition that has been offered the Radio darling the past season and therefore name Yammy Jamieson (Kingston) as the starting pitcher, with Ken Ritchen (Peterboro) next in order, Jimmie Arnold (Kingston) is the choice as catcher, with Cy Whatley (Peterboro) first baseman, Matthews (Oshawa) right and Scrutten (Kingston) left, keeping Peg Hurst (Oshawa) in the spare outfielder, with Jack Spare infielder, which usually is included to round out a full team, there are Compeau and Osborne to pick from, but these named are the regular team naturally get first votes. The other two local selections will report from time to time.

Cy Barriage's Recreations rubbed out George Kilers' Simpson Lumber in the final game of the semi-finals of the local Merchantile League last evening while the Simpson's nine eliminated the Ontario-Intelligencer boys in the other game to advance to the league finals. Five witnesses inform the Radio Broadcasting Corporation clerk was a thriller as the two teams battled back and forth, first one team having the advantage and then the other and it was not until the last inning that the issue of the score added up that the winner was announced. The final score of 9 to 8 about indicates the play. The final series will commence either Thursday or Friday.

After spotting the Wooler Leafs, four runs in the initial frame last night the local Merchantile Athletics set to work to not only overcome their disadvantage, but win be the score of 12 to 5. In a battle with Johnnie Rawden pitching seven hit ball and Jack Holt a home run scored what proved to be the winning counter in the eighth, as the Athletics came from behind a field of more than 600 competitors from all parts of Canada and from England, to win the much coveted Governor-General's gold medal and title of best shot in Canada at the Dominion of Canada Rifle Association matches at Connaught ranges. He is shown (BELOW) being "chaired" after the match, in Bisley style.

London Lunch And Ont. Intell Teams Are Eliminated

Recreations and Simpsons won the right to battle it out for the championship of the local Mercantile Softball League, when, these two team eliminated their opponents in the league semi-finals last evening, when Recreations eked out a narrow-margin of 10 to 14 victory over the London Lunch entry while Simpsons downed the Ontario Intelligencer's in the same time 24 to 12 to 3 Each team had won a game in the Recreation's game, Doyle in last night, the losers in each case facing elimination, which resulted in the "printers" and the "munchers" being counted out and the Recreations and Simpsons earning the right to continue into the league finals.

At the Alamite Ground Cy Barriage's Recreations clouted three big runs in the eighth inning to win the hard-fought battle of the play-offs. The London Lunchers proved worthy opponents of the locals and battled practically even terms until the hectic eighth, when the Recreations got the jump and held grimly on during a hectic ninth inning. The London lunchers managed to get sufficient men aboard to have the tying score and the winning counter, but in between, Carson hurling for the Recreations, bore down in the last inning and was given splendid support by his batterymate, Jack Palmer and his other team mates and won a well earned victory.

Pete Morgan with two triples hit well for the winners while Jack Palmer, who always registered the only four base clout of the entire game, headed the visitors batting. Carson helped his team mates to victory with a double and two timely singles, while Ronsky hit safely three times. Elongated Art Cole was Manager Barriage's pitching choice, but due to wildness was replaced by Carter. Both London Lunch hurlers were wild as they issued no less than eleven free passes to the initial mark. Carson, on the other hand, issued but three.

The line-ups—London Lunch—Wickerson, Ronsky, Semark, Cole, Phillips, Vowinkle, Hall, Carr, Kilkes and Westfall. Recreations—Carson, Palmer, Hall, Morgan, Lackey, Pointer, Haslip, B. Morgan, F. Hall and Gordon. Umpires and Score by innings r. h. e

HOW TO BUNT

by Travis Jackson

Travis Jackson, old "Stonewall" of the New York Giants infield, knows that the most important offensive strategy in baseball is to get on the base paths; and the bunt is not the least of the methods used for that purpose.

In this interesting series illustrating the perfect bunt, the gentle tap that sends the ball trickling down close to the third-base line, Travis and the magic eye camera have collaborated in providing a graph that "be-----" might study with profit. It is interesting to note that the ball is shown in five of the six pictures. Despite the fact that the action takes place in the twinkling of an eye. And notice how carefully Jackson manoeuvres his bat, swinging mostly with his wrists and forearms to send the ball trickling down along the route to third base.

CHAPTER XXII

Howe listened in silence. His notebook was open beside him, but he did not once consult it, nor did he make an entry. He did not speak till Brian had finished.

"That all, sir?"

"All! Isn't it enough, Howe?"

"It does seem plenty," said Howe. "But I can understand, for the lady's sake, you'd sooner have kept the story to yourself. But there's no hushing up a murder. Now sir, first question:"

"Did you, in the course of your quarrel with Mr. Cook, say to him 'I'll kill you!'"

Brian looked up quickly.

"Where did you get that? Ah, I see—from the Selby woman. I'd forgotten that, Howe; I dare say I shouted it loud enough to be hear."

"Then you did say it?"

"I won't swear to the words I used. The man was in a blind rage. I was so mad at the way he'd insulted Miss Neil that I said—after I'd shaken the breath out of him and slung him into the chair—'If you say another word I'll kill you.' That's straight, isn't it?"

"Next question: When did you leave the Ring O'Bells?" . . . . .

"Eleven o'clock."

"Sure of that?"

"Yes. And drove straight to London. First stop, Derby, for juice, forty miles, eleven-fifty."

Howe leaned forward a little.

"You came to the inn with Miss Neil before that. You're sure it's that you didn't leave before eleven?"

"After eleven—say, or fifteen minutes past—I heard the clock strike as I went out."

He saw Howe note the answer down. Then, after a pause, and he walled for the inevitable question; he was ready for it. It came at last, and what he expected.

"Mr. Chalmers, do you carry a gun?"

Brian stared at him. . . . . .

"What the devil's that got to do with it? What's this about guns?"

"I'd like you to answer me. It's just a formality."

"I've a pistol, and a permit for it; I only wear it in tough places and when I've valuables to protect; seldom in this peaceful land."

"And you haven't one on you now?"

"No!" Brian laughed. "D'you want to 'fan' me?"

Howe's eyes twinkled.

"So you know what 'fanning' is—if you'll stand up and raise your arms I'll show you how we do it."

Brian obeyed. Howe ran a pair of light deft hands under his armpits, down the sides of his jacket, and over his hips—and at that moment the door opened and Sonia came in. She gave a little gasp.

"What are you doing—you're not arresting Brian?" she exclaimed.

"No gun," said Howe. "No Miss, I'm glad. Just goin' over him for a revolver, that's all."

"A what! Was that necessary?"

"Stop in the best," chuckled Howe. "Its invited me to." He closed the door, and set a chair for her. "You needn't go Miss Nell; sit down a minute if you don't mind—you might be able to help."

"I need all the support I can get," said Brian. "Sonia, this man's making me feel like a Chicago thug!"

"What are you holding Brian for?" said Sonia. "I know that he's as innocent as I am. Hasn't he been through enough lately? Has he told you everything?"

"Everything," said Howe quietly.

A chilly little tremor crept along Brian's spine. How knew any talking that the one thing which was undeniable had not been told: that knowledge which he and Sonia shared, or, at least, would try to evitable. He looked at Howe, and felt sure that Howe knew nothing.

"Did you," said Howe, "tell the lidies that Mr. Coote had a date at ten o'clock with Barber at the Stannary Mine—that he was going to keep it?"

"A date with Barber! How could he keep such a thing; still less that he'd be fool enough to keep it . . . Maybe he hadn't any choice but to keep it, because Barber had the whip hand and he took Selby with him. Samuelson Coote was murdered."

"Can you prove he was murdered?"

"I shall prove that murder was done."

"By whom?"

"You're going a little too fast sir. Before I've done I shall lay my hands on the man that did that job and I'll be for him to defend himself. It may be he'll be able to plead what they call extenuating circumstances That won't help him much with a jury."

"The dead man was found on the metals; how did he get there? Mr. Chalmers, I'm running no secret of that; he was slung over the edge on to the track. He was living when he went over. There's been no post-mortem yet, but Doctor Crisp, says the cause of death was a broken neck. He was more or less cut up by the trains that went along in the night; but it was no train that killed him. The first train that went by was the 10.7 night express. But he was dead when the wheels hit him. Not dead, sir, but—that."

"Could he have fallen on the metals, that way, when he went over the edge?" interrupted Brian.

"He could; I demonstrated that myself by a very simple experiment."

"Aren't you overlooking a possibility, Howe? That some one unknown, to the man who put him over, and unsuspected by that man as he was on the track and left for dead or living—but we'll say that he was living—crossing the metals, leaving the trains to finish him?"

"What would be the good of it sir? We know by Crisp's evidence that—"

"But my dear Howe, assume that it was so; that this man I'm suggesting to you, didn't know Coote was dead. The night was dark. The body was still warm, let us say. He meant making sure . . . for the benefit of any doctor's evidence, as you have; Take into account the deluge of rain that followed, later in the night; even a doctor can be mistaken. We've got to cover all the possibilities, for fear we're not on to the wrong track. I put it to you, in a case like that, how can you plan out the actual moment to be sure the right man doesn't slip through your fingers?"

Howe smiled.

"I'm monumentally sure he won't. Come sir, you don't believe that. Nor you, Miss."

Sonia was silent.

"No jury would for that matter. Besides sir, don't you see that in a case like that, even if the second man were guilty of the actual murder, it wouldn't help the first man. He'd be an accessory, both before and after the fact. Lord help him, when the Law got hold of him. No, there'd be no escape for him. But anyway Mr. Chalmers, aren't we rather straying into theory now? What I want is facts."

"Surely. Well, one fact is that Selby accompanied my cousin last night, and hasn't been seen since. Where's Selby? It isn't likely he could have killed Bannister!"

"I wouldn't say it's impossible, Selby's an ex-convict by the way. So far as we know Mr. Coote's death is the last thing on earth that Selby wanted to see handy either. Possibly, after last night's job he didn't dare come back. Decided he'd got to slide off the map and lie low if he could."

Sonia looked quickly at Howe.

"And it's a game he's always been pretty good at," she said. "I think that might be Selby's motive."

"I don't see why?" said Brian.

"Because I replied Howe dryly. "Im keeping my reasons to myself. So we have the ex-convict wherever he is and you the next man—the big one. Barber, spy and blackmailer."

"Barber seems the king-pin to this job, Mr. Chalmers," said Howe "We've got to pull together. We're going to help each other . . . . . as much on your account as on anybody's. Understand?"

"Of course, Howe! I'm with you."

"I too!" said Sonia.

"Just so," said Howe. "I mean in pinning down the man who killed Bannister Coote; running the truth to ground. Cutting out what's guesswork . . . . . lies. He pulled his wiry moustache, looking attentively at Brian. "As you've come back here and laid all your cards down the way you have, I'm goin' to do the same. A square deal."

He took Barber's letter from his pocket and handed it to Brian. "Read that—Miss Nell's seen it already. This was in a desk in Mr. Coote's bedroom; it explains why he went to the Stannary Mine last night. Barber's finished with that Coote didn't take it with him. Here it is in black and white. Barber's own words . . . . . That'll be all the notice he'll get."

"And yet, sir, that's not enough, by itself, to hang Barber."

Brian looked up, puzzled, back.

"It's pretty black evidence, isn't it?"

"Against whom, sir?"

"Against Barber! Do you think he's a man whose denial is to be believed?"

"The man will lie to save his neck, Mr. Chalmers. It doesn't entirely help him but he always does it. As for Selby, I'm sorry I'll give you his record. I sent his fingerprints by express today; that didn't take headquarters long. Answer came in half an hour."

He smoothed out a telegram.

"Saul Burton, alias Samuel Brough, alias Selby, alias Shand . . . . . etc. Three years Caporoon. Warwick Assizes. 1.D.B. (that means Illicit Diamond Buying) and robbery with violence. Prison, New York, blackmail. Three years Parkhurst, 1921, attempted burglary."

"A very pretty record, sir. You'll notice that he started in business on the big scale, but couldn't keep it dropping down the crook ladder all the time. An' there's an addition: 'Suspect,' murder Bannister."

"This on the top of the letter should fix him as the man who was in the garden with Barber. He's every motive for killing Bannister Coote if he could get away with it after—money. He's gone so far, committed himself so deeply, that he must either get it quick, or silence Coote for ever. That way he could. He wasn't the man to stick at that. If he thought there was a trap set for him, he'd be very likely to smell the job down he was out for the big stuff and ready to take all chances.

"You'd think Mr. Coote would realise that, when he went out to meet Barber. Of course he did. You'd say, sir, that Mr. Coote wouldn't be an easy man to scare. Plucky or pluck; and clever—real clever. You times the brains of a Stannary Mine Barber, who would be single-handed against two Selby is no fool either, though he was a rough-hewer, which Mr. Coote was not.

"Mr. Coote of course wouldn't resort to such raw stuff as goin' alone from his own gates by night to kill a crook who's threatened him. That wouldn't be clever; especially with Selby, the ex-convict, for a witness. It would be disastrous. Now Selby would have let Selby do it. You'd find a brainier way of getting rid of a nuisance than that and I think I'm on a pretty good guess at the way he'd do it. But the brain-man thing first himself beaten when he's up against real tough stuff.

"To sum up, it looks obvious from that letter, that Barber meant going to the Stannary Mine at ten . . . . . that he actually went there. Mr. Chalmers, we don't know that. It could easily be a trick to steer Bannister Coote up against trouble. We must take that chance into account.

TARZAN THE UNTAMED— (Metropolitan Newspaper Feature Service)

Tarzan drove his blade into Numa's tawny hide behind the shoulder.

With a roar of pain Numa wheeled again, the personification of bestial rage. Now, indeed, would he exterminate this presumptuous man-thing who dared to thwart the king of beasts. But as he wheeled, his intended quarry wheeled with him.

Tarzan's brown fingers locked in the heavy mane on the powerful neck and again the blade struck home to the lion's side.

In the same instant the ape-man leaped full upon his back. Fully before had Tarzan locked his legs beneath the belly of a lion, so he clung to its long mane and stabbed and stabbed . . . . . to ends the frenzied beast.

But this he was unable to do, for the quick movements of the lion prevented him. The ape-man realised that he was swinging inevitably beneath those frightful talons. With a final effort he threw himself to one side of the beast, and scraped, by his quickness to elude the frenzied beast.

If he could do this for a fraction of an instant, it would permit him to regain his feet. But this time Numa was too quick. Tarzan was not partially upon when a great paw struck him on the side of the head and bowled him over, dazed and staggering from the impact of the terrible blow.

Little Benny's Note Book

Sunday afternoon me and pop and me went to the Hewses house for dinner and I started to drink my glass of milk and quick stopped myself on account of seeing a fly swimming around in it trying to find a way out. Just nearly it is time and thinking. O, good nife, what a narrow escape.

And I kept on eating the rest of my dinner, being stuff chickin and things, and after a while Mrs. Hews said, You're not drinking your milk, Benny. I shawt all boys were fond of milk.

Benny is no particular exception to that general rule, I assure you, ma said. Drink your milk, Benny, I wouldnt have any of Mrs. Hews to get it especially for you, she said, and Mrs. Hews said, Why no, as a matter of fact yes I did.

And I was busy looking at Pa and me and I started to drink some more after careful so as to be sure there was no fly, and ma said, Ah, my, why you hardly touched it, you usually consider it a treat to drink milk without spluttering except the time I take it out in the hall and drink it.

And he went out with it and shut the dining room door and came back again with the empty glass wiping his mouth, with his handkerchief and wishing me a private wink and after dinner I opened the door to the side yard just for curiosity and saw a white splash on the fence.

Almost a uniform are those three piece suits that we wore all spring and early summer for travelling. Now we will wear the three-piece again this Autumn. A new model is in men's suiting in a grayish tweed with light blue lines. The jacket is a short cutaway style with the very full sweeper coat tape notched lapels. Scarf, buttons and hat are of brown velvet.

He ready for a surprise when you see some of the new coats prepared for early Autumn showings. A coat that is different has a sleek part of black woolen,— while the body and sleeves are of black faille with line stitchings. Two enormous rosettes of black seal form the lower part of the sleeve.

Decoration Day At Frankford

Frankford—The Frankford I. O. O. F. Rebekah and Orange Lodges as well as the Veterans and Citizens' Band held their annual Decoration Day on Sunday, August 18th. The order of the parade headed by the Frankford Citizens' Band was as follows:

The Veterans led by H. J. Madill; I.O.O.F., in charge of N.G. Blake Tripp; Glenford Rebekah Lodge, led by Sister P. Patrick followed by the Glenford-Elzie Pipe Band and the Orange and L.O.B.A. Lodges.

The parade proceeded first to the Anglican cemetery where the different organizations formed up in a square and after prayer by Mr. Kenneth Stewart, the graves were then decorated. During the decoration ceremonies the Citizens' Band played fitting sacred music.

The Roman Catholic cemetery was visited next, where flowers were placed on the grave of Limerick Mannley, a veteran of the Great War.

The Bandsmen also placed flowers on the graves of two ex-members of their organization buried there.

Forming up again the parade proceeded to the Cenotaph in the Memorial Park, halting on the way while the Bandsmen decorated a grave or two in the old Methodist cemetery.

In the Memorial Park, different organizations formed a square around the Cenotaph, accompanied by the band the hymn "Oh God our help in ages past" was sung. Rev. J. F. Rose was called on by Mr. Blake Tripp to address the gathering.

Mr. Knox who was a great worker in the interest of Memorial Park during the war and who helped a great deal at the time the cenotaph was proposed and erected, delivered an inspiring address. Wreaths were placed on the Cenotaph by the Veterans, I.O.O.F. and Orange Lodges.

The singing of the National Anthem brought the memorable occasion to a close.

The names on the veterans' graves on which flowers were placed in the Anglican cemetery were: F. R. Keech, Albert Lawes, M. Smith, A. Casement, S. Hall, Wm. Smith, S. Wagenbach, A. Bowen.

In the R.C. cemetery the grave of Limerick Mannley was decorated.

Current Attractions at Local Theatres

What Local Theatre Managers Have to Say About Current Offerings

AT THE BELLE

"A NIGHT at the Rits"
Romance, Thrills in Comedy, Sensation
Double Feature Program

The first feature production, "Evil Dogs of the Alps" released by Warner Bros., opens at the Belle Theatre today for a two day engagement.

The picture deals with the romantic and daredevil exploits of members of the aviation corps of the U.S. Marines and is said to be a smashing follow-up of "Here Comes the Navy."

The same inimitable trio head the cast of this new service picture. James Cagney, Pat O'Brien and Frank McHugh. Margaret Lindsay is the leading feminine role while there is a strong supporting cast with hundreds of marines in extra roles.

Many scenes were taken for the most part at the U.S. Naval base at San Diego, California, and at the flying field on North Island. It was produced under special arrangements with the U.S. Government and marine officers acted as technical advisers.

Thrilling air stunts, with planes crashing in mid-air, bursting into flames and spinning to the ground, while pilots leap for their lives in parachutes, are some of the many thrills in the picture.

The story concerns a fresh kid who joins the Marine Corps and tries to tell the officers what it is all about. Of course, he doesn't get very far to what the service means after a thrilling incident which involves a smashing climax.

"Devil Dogs of the Air" tops its predecessor, "Here Comes the Navy" in thrills, laughs, action and romance.

AT THE CAPITOL

"The Scoundrel"
A night of Comedy, Romance, Thrills in Comedy, Romance and Suspense

A new star has been revealed on the screen of the Capitol Theatre in a play called "The Scoundrel", and that star is none other than the brilliant playwright, composer, author and dramatist and producer, Noel Coward.

A brilliant and devastating picture of New York society and a poignant sub meeting love tale are deftly blended in "The Scoundrel" with the brilliant Coward at his blithe and debonair best.

Coward in the leading role, plays a literary Lothario who preys on impressionable females, effecting conquests without love, leaving hatred in his wake. Into his circle of vicious and parasitic friends, comes one genuine, emotionally honest girl, Julie Haydon, who falls victim to the Coward charms.

In the course of events he tires of her and seeks to escape from her importunities in an airplane trip. He is reported killed. But just as his friends are indulging in sardonic witticisms at his expense, he returns to stone to Julie Haydon. From this point, the picture proceeds with gripping intensity to its dramatic climax, where the grim and eerie secret of this man who had returned from the dead is revealed.

Coward is ably supported by an exceptionally fine cast including such excellent players as Martha Sleeper, Hope Williams, Romaine Bruce Cabot and Lionel Stander.

"Old Man Rhythm"

For the other half of the program there is a snappy and fast moving musical comedy that embodies the last word in modern mirth and witty dialogue. It is called "Old Man Rhythm" and enables Buddy Rogers the good looking juvenile to step to the front and achieved considerable success as a band leader.

Here is college romance with all its trimmings the story of a father who is inclined to enter the school where his son is studying so that he might be able to prevent his son from falling in love with a winsome young gold-digger. The escapades that beset the parent are worthy of many laughs. This delightful comedy is lavishly interspersed with catchy musical numbers and there is some extraordinary dancing among the members of the large cast.

Besides Buddy Rogers, there is George Barbier, who plays the fathey, Barbara Kent, Grace Bradley, Nella Walker and John Arledge and Eric Blore.

The engagement holds until Wednesday night, when a piece of unusual interest will be presented.

Lewis Cleave left on Friday to spend a few days with friends in Picton enroute to their home in Gananoque.

Mr. Carmen Hobson and Mr. W. Holmes spent a few days last week in Toronto.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Walters spent Sunday in Consecon with Mr. and Mrs. J. Thompson. Master Horrer Walters who had spent the past week with his grandparents returned home with them.

Mr. Edward Smith, of Belleville, is spending this week with Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Cleave.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Foster were in Belleville on Monday of last week attending the funeral of her grandfather, Mr. E. Calnan who passed away on Saturday after a long illness.

Gananoque.

THIS MAN MAY PLUNGE WORLD INTO ANOTER W AR

This layout shows scenes from the life of Benito Mussolini, dictator of Italy for the past 13 years. He is the man behind Italy's absolute refusal to date of proposals to bring about a peaceful settlement of the Italo-Ethiopian crisis. Always has Mussolini declared himself for force and during his "reign" he has built up one of the world's most modern and efficient armies. This modern counterpart of the Caesar of ancient Rome is frank in declaring that Italy must expand and looks if not largely to Africa. Meanwhile other nations of the world led by Britain and France and the League of Nations strive vainly to avert the war Mussolini declares he will wage.

NEWS BRIEFS AND ODDITIES

Buffalo, N.Y., Aug. 21 (CP) — Shirley Finn, Mark Twain's famous barefoot character, has two rivals in Erie County's hill, but both are going barefoot because of poverty, not choice.

John Regan, 13, Brooklyn, and Floyd Chetland, 12, Lisa Mountain, newly arrested days ago on charges of stealing shoes, today they pattered about their cells bare feet, their shoes confiscated as evidence by detectives.

Houston, Aug. 21 (CP)—W. A. Harris rejected to police yesterday his head recently was crushed and bandaged around a wide-open safe.

Burglars said the parcel was sent through the mails. The safe stolen he had "five days to live," inspectors are investigating.

San Francisco, Aug. 21 (CP) — Reclaimed on unusable new territory from the sea, Holland will abandon.

Dr. Howard L. Elder, staff physician at the Santa Barbara, Calif., clinic reported to the American Chemical Society the experiments showing rod-haired, fly-bodied if persons can be transformed easily, can get a new tail with safety after using iron therapy.

Iron treatments will improve physical conditions of persons and cure the most unwholesome of the sex, he said.

Syracuse, Kan., Aug. 21 (CP) — No Federal export 160 miles away is going to fail. Fly Creek, two south 85's raised in Syracuse.

Brown, official weather observer in Syracuse for 30 of his 52 years, quit in a huff when the United States government meteorologist at Topeka rejected his report that July rainfall in Syracuse measured four inches.

New York, Aug. 21 (CP) — The police of former Mayor James "Jimmy" Walker and Tammany Hall's other wards beat night but Baltimore used to beating the police of Chicago's gangs, yesterday bested by an unmistakable British accent.

Bad the announcer said it with a plummy and as he spoke, all but a bit haughtily, and with an air as if bound to Buckingham Palace, where he went to meet royal dignitaries. The occasion was a special broadcast from London.

Detroit, Aug. 21 (CP)—Theodore M. Hash, 45, Detroit, who made up his mind 41 years ago to give his bride a Niagara Falls honeymoon.

They drove a few blocks and decided to walk, and when their new machine was wrecked.

They left it on the road, so, we'll catch that night boat for Buffalo. We'll have that honeymoon anyway, and we'll cut another car on the way back.

St. Louis, Aug. 21 (CP) — Debutante balls again will have bartering to remind of those days when marriages of those of social prominence. Caterers are looking forward to the biggest winter in years, with debutante parties in the story today told at the convention of the Hotel International Stewards and Caters' Association.

St. George, Ont., Aug. 21 (CP) — Five-year-old Ronald Wilson, son of Orval Canada's youngest milkman, carries on the traditions of her Tuscarorian ancestors as she milks three cows every morning. Born in Lethbridge, Alta., she showed her aptitude for work early in life and could milk the three cows when her parents moved to a farm near here a year ago.

Glace Bay, N.S., Aug. 21 (CP) — Captain Jimmy Nolan and his crew of the fishing schooner Alpha got a young bank deer swimming with a rope, off shore. A crew-member deftly lassoed the terrified animal and hauled it aboard. Captain Nolan delivered the deer to the Royal Canadian Mounted Police who later learned it had been wounded by wild dogs and hidden under a cliff into the sea. A veterinarian treated the wounds and the animal was released.

Glace Bay, N.S., Aug. 21 (CP) — The feud was to responsible for the shooting here, in the opinion of Magistrate A. B. MacGillivray.

Three sweltering young couples laid their grievances before he informed the court that eight days, intimating to each husband and wife in turn all the end of that time they probably would be reconciled.

"It will likely rain before the night days are up," he added with a twinkle.

BRITAIN TO TAKE DRASTIC ACTION AGAINST ITALY

General Support of Britain In League of Nations is Forecast

SPEEDING UP LEAGUE

League Circles, at Geneva, See Serious Issue of Dispute

(By Roger D. Greene, Associated Press Staff Writer)

London, Aug. 21 (AP)—Disturbed by the mounting threat of a European crisis, precipitated by Mussolini's defiance of all efforts to prevent war in East africa, British statesmen today reported seeking an emergency session of the League of Nations prior to the Sept. 4 meeting to deal with that danger.

Such a move is aimed at the speed up of the League's possible "restraint" on Mussolini before the rainy season in Ethiopia ends in June for the League to forestall Italy's Fall Accompli.

Britain is expected to act in that direction if the decision is made later tomorrow's emergency meeting of the cabinet, called by Prime Minister Baldwin in the wake of the collapse of the tripower conference in Paris.

Every Day Counts

Every day counts now, it is felt, particularly in view of reports from Addis Ababa the rains are lifting weeks in advance of expectations. Meanwhile advices from Paris indicate "drastic" steps been put on Italy's proposal that would give France a safer feeling regarding Germany. The proposal tentatively is for a British guarantee to maintain tranquility in Central Europe, replacing the waning Italians on the side of France in return for France's unqualified support of whatever stand Britain takes at Geneva.

PAYS PENALTY FOR HIS WIFE'S DEATH

William Hawryliuk, Hanna, Alberta, Refused Mercy Before Execution

Edmonton, Aug. 21 —(CP)— For the murder of his wife near Hanna, Alta., in June, William Hawryliuk, 43, was hanged at Fort Saskatchewan jail early today. Hangman Arthur Ellis sprang the trap at 1:40 A.M. and the body was cut down 10 minutes later.

Hawryliuk walked to the gallows quickly but refused to say anything. He remained composed when pinioned and when Catechers are beside him. Hawryliuk is the biggest winter in the story today told at the convention of the Hotel International Stewards and Caters' Association.

At his trial at Hanna in June Hawryliuk was alleged to have pursued his wife three miles with an iron bar and left her.

She escaped him by cleverly and dashed on into the snow, rolling in it to put out the flames.

Then, according to the Crown's charges at the trial, he beat her unconscious with an iron bar and left her.

She froze to death.

DOCK SHEDS AT PORT HOPE BURN

Also 100 Feet of Dock With Damage Estimated at $10,000

Port Hope, Ont., Aug. 21.—(CP)—Heavy property damage was caused early today when the sheds on the middle of the east dock were destroyed by fire. One hundred feet of dock was destroyed with damage estimated at $10,000.

With the destruction of the building, about 90 by 20, an old landmark in navigation circles is removed. It was used as ticket office and baggage room in the days when passenger boats plied the harbor.

Origin of the fire is unknown. Fanned by a strong southwest wind it was impossible to save the structure. Firemen placed lines down the docks and prevented the flames from spreading. Two piers were destroyed for about fifty feet on each side of the burned sheds.

POWERS' PEACE EFFORTS FAIL

The recent League of Nations discussions of the Italo-Abyssinian trouble, that was unproductive of results, brought these three world leaders together—LEFT to RIGHT—Premier Laval, of France; M. Litvinoff, of Russia and Anthony Eden, the British cabinet's League of Nations Minister.

Ruthless War on Drivers, 400 Will be Prosecuted

Toronto, Aug. 21—Determined to smash allegedly widespread violations of Ontario's motor vehicle and trucking laws, Hon. T. B. McQuesten, Minister of Highways, is now employing special investigators and prosecutors to aid the regular departmental staff in the run-down of offenders.

More than 400 prosecutions of various types have been launched during the past three weeks, in an extensive drive by the highways investigator, and 70 of these prosecutions resulted from one night's investigation in Cobourg by Hamilton and eastward toward Toronto.

"The laws are going to be enforced on our highways," declared Mr. McQuesten, last night. And people who have been deliberately ignoring them had better realize it at once.

Mr. McQuesten in his clean-up campaign is very bitter toward truckers who have been working their drivers for longer hours per day than regulations permit. He is also out to get motorists who ignore suspension of their licenses, permits and continue driving without them. Over-weighting of trucks, and the use of unlicensed motor vehicles without licenses are two other forms of offense, which, judging from the investigations of the past three weeks, have been quite common in this province.

The present clean-up is reported to be a long string of complaints to Queen's Park during the past year. These complaints allegedly boil down to a charge that that hundreds of people take vehicles without licenses for hire or less, as a joke and make no bones about their ability to operate the law, Mr. McQuesten has, as a result, demanded that only increasing supervision of the situation from the house departmental staff, but has now launched the special prosecutor campaign that undoubtedly will be extended unless recent prosecutions have a salutary effect.

ELMER SMITH OF HILLIER, KILLED

Trying to Stop Runaway, Becomes Entangled in Harness

Picton, Aug. 21.—Elmer Smith, 23, died in hospital here of injuries sustained when he was dragged by a team of horses he attempted to stop when they took flight and bolted. The team was being driven on a wagon by Wesley Smith, the father, on their farm at Hillier, when they started to run. The young man grasped at their heads and his arm becoming entangled in the harness he was dragged some distance and hit by the Harper bridge, suffering a fractured skull, fractured thigh, broken arm and internal injuries.

Surviving are his parents, two brothers, Harry and Carl, at home, and his sister, Mrs. Fred Taylor of Hillier, and Miss Daisy Smith at Ottawa.

Edmonton, Aug. 21 (CP)—Crashing in scrub brush when his airplane engine stalled at 50 feet above the ground, 24-year-old pilot of the Edmonton Aero Club, escaped with a scratched knuckle.

The fresh cockpit was ended but he was in the rear seat.

U. S. NEUTRALITY IS SAFEGUARDED ON SEVEN POINTS

Senate Adopts Resolution to Protect Neutrality in Foreign War

PRESIDENTIAL FIAT

Mandatory Embargo on Export of Arms And War Implements

Washington, Aug. 21 (AP)—A seven-point resolution designed to safeguard United States neutrality in event of a foreign war was adopted today by the Senate.

Attempts already were under way to amend House action.

President Roosevelt was reported in favor of the move, coming as it does at a time when the Italo-Ethiopian situation is going grave questions for European Governments to contend.

Stirred into action by ominous signs abroad and a filibuster by Munitions Committee members, the Senate speedily endorsed the Foreign Relations committee compromise resolution.

Representing a compromise between a drastic program advocated by the Special Munitions Investigating Committee headed by Senator Nye (R., N.D.) and the State Department attitude. The resolution provides:

Authority for the President to proclaim United States citizens calling on ships of belligerent nations cannot at their own risk with 90 days allowed for citizens to return home from war areas.

Authority for the President to prevent ships, foreign or American, from carrying munitions or implements of war to belligerent nations at sea.

A mandatory embargo on exports of arms, munitions and implements of war to all belligerents in a foreign conflict.

Munitions

A system of licensing munitions manufacturers and export as a permanent policy of this government along the line of the Geneva Arms Treaty of 1925, ratified earlier in the session by the Senate.

A ban against American ships carrying arms or munitions under embargo to any belligerent port or to any neutral port for reshipment to belligerents.

Authority for the President to restrict or prohibit the entry of belligerent submarines into American waters or ports.

A special munitions control board to administer the program, consisting of the secretaries of state, of war, navy, treasury, and of commerce, and the chairman of the Senate and House Foreign Navy relations Committee.

The resolution prohibits travel on belligerent ships by United States citizens, but Senate leaders say it is only "partially" met the problem.

"If a citizen goes on a belligerent ship," said Borah, making republican on the Foreign Relations Committee, "in certain cases he involves his nation and produces a controversy that should not be permitted."

Nation is Concerned

"Not only does he involve the entire nation is concerned," Borah added.

He made the only reference to the Italo-Ethiopian situation, in referring to the danger of allowing American citizens to travel into war areas because it may involve the United States in war.

Adoption of the resolution materially improved adjournment prospects.

It was the first legislation of the kind approved by either branch of Congress since the dark days of 1917.

SPEED MERCHANTS ON WAY TO U.S.

Sir Malcolm Campbell Will Try to Break Own Record

Southampton, Aug. 21 (AP) Two British speed merchants, Sir Malcolm Campbell and Captain George Eyston, sailed on the liner Majestic today bound for the flat Flats at Utah where they will attempt new automobile speed records.

Campbell will try to beat his record of 276.816 miles an hour at Daytona Beach, Florida.

Eyston's objective will be to raise the world speed record for one hour and then he plans to go out for the 24-hour record held by Joan Chinetti, of England.

Spaniel Saves Its Terrier Pal

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., Aug. 21—(CP)—If a man bites a dog it's news. If a dog saves a man's life it's news to some extent, but when a dog saves the life of another dog it's one for the book.

That's exactly what happened here when Mrs. Robert Dale's brown spaniel, Teddy, prevented the owner's other dog, two-year-old Mickey a white terrier, from drowning in the St. Mary's River.

Jake Yacobock, who works on the Algoma Central Railway docks here, disclosed the story to Mrs. Dale, his sister, when he arrived home from work and found two dogs and no sleeping.

They had been dashing along the pier after some gulls and, failing to notice the end of the dock, toppled into the water. Teddy swam to shore but when he arrived there was no Mickey. The pal was prowling in the water.

Dashing in again, Teddy grabbed hold of Mickey's ear, towed the pal a distance, barked to follow and swam to shore. Mickey followed, trembled, wet dogs got to shore and climbed into a sleep that lasted well into the next day.

TO BE SUMMONSED ON ASSAULT COUNT

Charges Arise Out of Accident to Kidnap Suspect

Toronto, Aug. 21 (CP)— Arthur Carty, Attorney-General's department will be summoned on a charge of assaulting Detective Frederick Archibald, in which Michael Mackenzie, K.C., was broken, as he arrives at the Court House, Mr. Carty announced today. He said he would be made shortly to restore the Habeburg line to royal power.

The young Archduke, Felix, of Hapsburg, son of Archduke Rudolph Zita of Austria, and brother of Archduke Otto, heir to the throne, is pictured on the golf links at Vichy, France, where he is an amateur visitor. Reports persist that a move will be made shortly to restore the Hapsburg line to royal power.

LEAGUE COUNCIL MAY TAKE ACTION BY CONCILIATION

Council Member Says "We Must Gain Time" in Crisis

DOMINIONS INFORMED

Laval Negotiating With Il Duce to Limit War

(Copyright 1935 by the Associated Press).

London, Aug. 21—Seven leaders of the cabinet today tentatively approved a policy demanding financial and economic action against Italy if that country attacks Ethiopia.

Geneva, Aug. 21.—(AP)—League of Nations' officials claimed the suggestion today the League Council itself might attempt to settle the Italo-Ethiopian dispute by conciliation should other methods fail.

Said a council member: "We must gain time. As long as hostilities have not opened there is always hope of achieving a solution by patient conference. There can be no question of penalties for the present."

Baldwin in Grave

London, Aug. 21.—When Premier Baldwin arrived at Downing Street, he appeared tired. His face was grave.

Although nothing officially was said to the Americans concerning the British-Italian-French conference quarters indicated Great Britain would welcome an invocation of that pact by the United States.

Unfounded Rumors

Neville Chamberlain's statement in the House of Commons, apparently in deep thought as he walked slowly, was heading to the inner chambers where the Privy Councilors' meetings usually are held. Sir John Simon whisked over from the Home office.

Many rumors circulated. One found to be without foundation, was that all leaves in the army and navy had been stopped. A similar rumor was current in London years ago, was the naval reserves were being called up.

London, Aug. 21.—(CP Cable)—A procession of statesmen and representatives of the Dominions visited the Foreign Office today as the Government heads conferred preliminarily in two critical meetings of the Cabinet tomorrow when the next step in the Italo-Ethiopian crisis are to be defined.

Dominions Informed

The Canadian Press was authoritatively informed that meetings with the Dominion representatives was in accordance with the well-established practice of keeping the Dominions fully informed of the Imperial Government's policy in matters of inter-Imperial moment.

Britain has yet made no formal move in the Italo-Ethiopian situation in preserving the peace but it is believed a way will be prepared for this following tomorrow's Cabinet meeting.

Addis Ababa, Aug. 21 (CP-Havas) —Ethiopia is waiting to see whether the world will keep its pledge to fight aggression, Emperor Haile Selassie told Havas in an interview today.

"But the world shut its eye, to escape the responsibility of the imminent violence and scorn of the victims of the aggression," continued the Ethiopian peoples?" he asked.

BELLEVILLE PEOPLE HURT IN CAR CRASH

Hamilton, Ont., Aug. 21—(CP)—Four persons were rushed to general hospital this morning following an accident on number two highway when William Pearson, Hamilton, lost control of his car which turned over on the road. Charles Brant of Belleville suffered a fractured collar bone and Thelma and Clifford Brant, children of the city were bruised and shaken up.

31 MUNICIPALITIES BENEFIT BY CUT

Eastern Ontario Hydro System Given Dividends of $220,000

Toronto, Aug. 21.—(CP)—Consumers in the Eastern Ontario Hydro system had before dawn today the prospect of cutting into a melon in the shape of dividends of more than $220,000, recommended by the Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario.

The Commission recommended yesterday reductions of 1853 rates to be charged to domestic, commercial and power customers in 31 municipal municipalities. A refund to customers in certain cases is also recommended to the municipalities. Refunds, to be made in cash to the extent of $35,000 have been authorized to the municipalities themselves in connection with the supply of power to municipal purposes.

In the affected municipalities consumers will be benefitted by more than $220,000. In this amount, $90,000 would be deducted from the new municipal level in rate reductions; $130,000 will be handed back by a credit in refund in the consumers' accounts. Refunds and rate $35,000 will go to the municipal governments.

In 40 cases the Commission's interim bills to municipalities will be reduced because of a surplus of revenue over expenses was expected.

The Commission approved also a reduction of rates in North Bay and the hamlet of Nipissing.

CAB OF TRUCK CUT OFF CHASSIS

George Dodds, Driver, Is Held After Crash Against Pole

George Dodds, local truck driver, appeared in the police court today before F. S. Deacon, J.P., charged with driving a motor vehicle while intoxicated. He was taken but Dodds was remanded in custody until Thursday.

The charge arose out of a motor accident that occurred on Cout Valley Road, last night, when the truck, which George Dodds was alleged by police to have been driving collided with a pole breaking the pole of all the load and badly damaging the truck. Local police were notified and Provincial Constable was patched to the scene of the accident, where it had been reported a man was seriously injuries. Upon the arrival of the authorities, however, the man could not be found uninjured and was placed under arrest.

The cab of the truck was cut clear from the chassis during the impact and found lying near the wreckage. The driver had been hurled clear of the broken pole.

WEATHER

The weather has been mostly fair and warm over most parts of the Western Provinces and decidedly warm from the Lakes region eastward. Thunderstorms have occurred in many parts of Ontario and the North Shore.

Lake Superior: Fresh northwest winds; partly cloudy and cool; probably light scattered showers over east portion at first.

Saskatchewan: Mostly fair and warm.

Alberta: Partly cloudy; probably local thunderstorms.

HYDRO POLE IS BROKEN IN CRASH

Pole of abandoned and unused line, a broken hydro pole on automobile, believed to be the property of Thomas Bros., Ltd., Belleville, of Sidney, was discovered near the intersection of Highway No. 2 and Dundas St-by-P. C. Thompson about 7.30 a.m. today. The vehicle was apparently struck by the hydro pole breaking it off at the base, the pole and the wire lying across the car and the wrecked car.

When found the automobile was parked with the right wheels on the Dundas St. boulevard and with the right fender damaged, while the left rear tire rim was off and the tire flat and one window was broken. It is thought it believed by police authorities to have been the result of the vehicle striking on the left rear wheel. Later Mr. Babcock was found in a local jazz endeavoring to locate a local garageman, who could remove the wrecked vehicle. The hydro pole, which was broken at the socket, it is believed, while the matter of participation of the pole was presented by Mr. Babcock. The matter was quite accidental, the police have the circumstances.

PICTON TRIPPERS TO VISIT WINCHESTER

Pictonians will invade Rochester to the number of over 1,000 on Thursday afternoon on a special excursion train that has been arranged for Picton Civic Holiday.

ANOTHER BICKLE IS SENT TO ST. JEROME

A Bickle fire pumper of the same model as the one now owned by this city passed Belleville yesterday afternoon, after a brief stop over on route to St. Jerome, Quebec, where it has been purchased. The machine was last driven from the Woodstock factory by John D. Bain.

SUDAN GRASS UP SEVEN FEET

Sudan grass, which has attained a height of well over seven feet in spite of the fact that it has had very little moisture for over two months, is one specimen of over-size yield on his farm, being displayed at the Exhibition Ground, R.R. No. 2 Belleville.

CREEPING GRASS FIRE CONTROLLED

A creeping grass fire which alarmed residents of that section when it awakened by the glare reached in an alarm being sent in to the local fire department to a grass fire on the Glenmore at Lake Ontario, and the station shortly after two o'clock this morning. The blaze had burned itself out with the arrival of the department.

30 POUND 'LUNGE' HOOKED IN BAY

A beautiful specimen of 'lunge' was the prize of Dr. Wm. Spankie, of Ann Arbor, Michigan, fishing in Moira Bay on Tuesday afternoon. In company with Jay and Clarence Sprague, at Big Island, the party were about to return home, when Mr. Parkin fell a tug and the fight was on. For twenty minutes, the boat was zig-zagged around the bay until the fish was brought to the side of the boat. The fish weighed 30 pounds and measured almost five feet, when it was exhibited in Clarke and Wallis' store today. The party were using a number nine Williamson Spoon and at the time of the strike was on the north side of Mimico Bay near the reed bed. Mr. Parkin was quite jubilant over his catch and intimated the "lunge" was going back to the bay as soon as he has finished all he could see, the kind they catch up in Canada. Incidentally Belleville Bay, it may has just started, the fish taken yesterday having a coil pat of tooth, they being quite sharp and hard.

COPPER FLASHINGS BEING PUT IN PLACE

Sheet copper flashings in natural color are being put in place to cover the decorative gables and turrets of the city hall tower this week, workmen engaged in reconstruction work on the building. A large area has now been cleaned and wooden trim is undergoing needed repair. The dangerous condition of the upper portion of the tower is liable to undergone a complete rebuild of masonry that have been removed, Parge piece concrete had been hanging by the merest thread of support.

POLICE BLOTTER

One of the three bicycles stolen in Belleville recently was recovered at Tweed early today, according information received from Chief Hayes. The bicycle is believed to have been the one stolen from Harry Lee, local laundryman.

Local police were asked to be on the look out for a Ford coupe, 1932 model, stolen at Oshawa last night. It was painted black and born Ontario license plates which were V-178. No sign of such a vehicle was observed locally however.

A rather peculiar accident occurred on Front street, last prior to 5.00 p.m. leaving a car driven by Mrs. Kilde of Chesley, New York, was proceeding northward in her new sedan, when another motor car, being driven by Harry Wong, Prince Edward county, attempted to pass Mrs. Kilde and in so doing collided with the left side of the lady's car, and after investigating found that Harry Wong was quite willing to assume the cost of any damage, which he was quite responsible to either vehicle. When P. O. Evans boarded Mrs. Kilde's automobile in order to direct to the nearest garage, however, another vehicle bumped into them, which car, during a traffic congestion.. No damage resulted in the second collision.

Ralph Flintin, Toronto motorist, was taken into custody by the Provincial Police last night on a charge of speeding. According to the officer in charge, Flintin was requested to "slow down" while proceeding at an excessive rate of 65 m.p.h. The motorist flatly refused to do so and was locked up until the minimum fine under the H.T.A. in open court. The fine was paid.

CONSERVATIVES IN THURLOW TP. ARE CONFIDENT

Organization is Effected For Approaching Election

C. A. PAYNE SPEAKS

Candidacy of W. E. Tummon is Advocated by Speakers

First move toward complete organization of Thurlow Township Conservatives was taken on last occasion of a special meeting held in the interests of the local representative and Conservative candidate, Mr. W. H. Tummon, ex-M.P. for South Hastings at Cannifton Town Hall last evening. Although hot and the busy period being experienced at present throughout the rural areas had its effect upon attendance the rally was a most enthusiastic one from the standpoint of view.

As chairman of the evening, Mr. Fred Mitchell, president of the junior men's organization, following a brief welcome to those present introduced Mr. Bruce Martin, past president, who spoke the necessity of confidence in their local representative, Mr. Tummon, was voiced by Mr. Martin. Referring to the large attendance, Mr. Martin pointed out that the real interest is to be shown by the vote that may be expected in this township. Thurlow could have been known as the choice pick of Hastings, and it is up to us now to prove that this liability has been always possessed."

Mr. C. A. Payne, of this city, president of the South Hastings Association in logical sequence and with the aid of facts and figures which he submitted to the interested audience, traced the progress of Canada during the Bennett regime as contrasted with conditions of the country under the leadership of Mackenzie King.

Answers Own Question

Answering his own question: "What has Bennett done for Canada?" Mr. Payne pointed out one of the strongest arguments was the fact that prior to the last Dominion election Canada had a favorable trade balance of over 100 millions of dollars. Figures for the 1934 show, he continued, a favorable balance in this country of something over 40 millions. Preference in the markets of Great Britain under the Ottawa agreement had made this possible, it was stated. From a chart, Mr. Payne drew to show that exports of farm commodities from this country were strengthened by the increase in prices with bacon, poultry and livestock reporting the greatest.

"Canada during the years of depression attained and is maintaining a credibility until today she has gained the distinction of being the second leading trading country in the world in point of foreign commerce," declared Mr. Payne, this government that can pilot its country to that acclaim through such a time as the present one deserves much commendation. That, it appears to be, would be the most conclusive answer to the question, "What has Bennett done?"

The Central Bank for the control of Canada's credit in open money markets; the Farm Loan Act, established for the purpose of relieving the distress of the country material assistance in holding their properties during the pit of the economic conditions; the Farm Products Marketing Act with which to stabilize prices in the country and protect producers from the whim of speculators were only a few pieces of actual legislation, that has been a most important factor upon Canada, it was maintained by the speaker. This, he pointed out, contrasted with the lack of action displayed by the Hon. Mr. King during his past years of office and his unsatisfactory platform, that is now being offered electors of the country by him.

"A government that has weathered a worldwide depression and established a credit such as this country has is to be much preferred over that of an untried party seeking power without a concrete suggestion to offer," concluded Mr. Payne.

Great Statesman

Mr. Roscoe Robeson, president of the Thurlow Association in a brief address affirmed his faith in the Hon. Mr. Bennett as being the greatest statesman, that Canada ever had. Referring to the added billions in debt to this country trying to make a big impression on the people, but has gone quietly about ruling this country with sane care and real intelligence. He is hopeful for the top of world nations, he said. The Hon. Mr. Bennett, Mr. Robeson, all another point, "are men who have done their best for Canada that they are of Mr. Bennett and his party."

T. L. Hill, M.P.P. for East Hastings declared, that Mr. Hepburn was "after Mackenzie King's job." The present term at Toronto have not hurt the Bennett government, but have hurt the Liberal party, Mr. Hepburn doesn't regard, an honest man, any more than a "scrap of paper." He has no consideration or anything other than for himself. He has proved and is proving this all the time," declared Mr. Hill.

"We are facing one of the most important elections ever held in this country. Any prime minister who can set aside his party as well as Mr. Bennett has shown he can do even in times of unparalleled difficulty is the man to choose to bend you again for the next term. He has done it in the years when conditions were worse than they are today. Never was there known as the man to whom the country turned in the past, five years has done nothing for me personally and I am satisfied in an attempt to win votes. The Liberals might have had a fine platform if they had picked some ex-Cabinet Minister, but with King at the head people have no trust or confidence. He talks of the Bennett administration as the doing away with Section 98 of the Criminal Code, yet boosed people from the platform. He is not that either. There is, however, quite a change in the way would be better interested in both these questions. Let them be aims these statements".

King Not Concrete

Mr. King's radio addresses and speeches addressed so far have not contained one essential item or concrete suggestion, declared Mr. Hill. "He has been content to bring rest for the consideration of the people. Not one word has he said would like to take office to guide the affairs of this country." Mr. Hill concluded his remarks with the warning, that at the coming election the people would not be bamboozled through organization be ready for any eventuality. A Conservative Government would be returned with a big majority was also given by Mr. Hill.

Mr. C. A. Payne, candidate for South Hastings in a brief conversation with the audience declared the fight just starting to warm up. "I have never seen such enthusiasm and keen interest displayed as I have noticed throughout the riding during the past few days. Warning his hearers that much work was to be done, Mr. Reid pointed out, that a great responsibility rested upon them, and they would not be found shirked, or, laid over for the other fellow to do.

"Organize every poll and sub poll in your territory. You have a leader in Mr. Tummon with the courage of his convictions, one to be proud of," cautioned Mr. Reid.

RAINFALL EQUALS EIGHTH OF INCH

"We Need About Three Days of It" Says Farmer

Heat stricken citizens and happy farmers of Belleville and district joined in unison today in offering thanks for the fine rainfall which since 2 a.m. has been received here for nearly one month.

The steady drizzl; that has been seeking into the sunbaked ground since early morning, marked the first break in a heat wave that has held the section in its grip for the past three weeks. Record temperatures again began the slow descent to more normal levels as the cooling showers continued.

Up to noon no inches of precipitation had been registered at the local pumping station.

"It's a million dollar rain all right, but we need about three days of it before we can get the dry wells filled and the country really soaked as it should be," was the general opinion of the majority.

"Even a shower like this just now, though, is worth a lot."

MANY PICNICS HELD AT LAKE

Oak Lake Affords Pleasant Surroundings For an Outing

Stirling, Aug. 21—Picnic seasons from all parts of the district still find Oak Lake a more attractive picnic ground than other years. With the proprietors of the two well known pleasure parks offering a very generous amount of free accommodation to the many visitors, who come daily. No greater means of advertising could bring quicker results than the hearty welcome offered by these people and the willingness to satisfy the wants of every organization, who visit the lake whether the group be large or large. There is displayed at these two parks a social hospitality that is typically rural in character everyone is made to feel that they are spending a day with friends. This spirit of friendly co-operation has left to the hospitality of the place. In the last ten years it has grown from a little known lake of seclusion to a greatly crowded pleasure resort and by showing co-operation by the owners of these resorts have established a summer trade, that is paying large dividends. Last Wednesday at Crescent Beach, The Peet's family re-union was held with an attendance of over a hundred and on Saturday evening at Oak Lake, an equally large attendance took place, when the Alcazar family gathered near the waterfront for their annual gathering. In the evening of the same day a large group of Belleville people gathered for an evening of fun and joyed a very pleasant evening. On Saturday evening the members of the staff of the Provident Life Insurance Co. and their families with their guests at R. H. Beadle's at a splendid chicken dinner and a fine evening of sports. After the dinner there was a display of fireworks, which lasted for an hour and a half, illuminating the shores and waters of the pretty lake. In addition to the many other attractions there has been added this year a bowling concrete. Next Sunday it is expected that concerts will be given by the Stirling Band, the Stirling Band and also the Belleville Band. South Hastings citizens have just cause to be proud of this spot so close to home that is gradually becoming known throughout the province.

Leadership Camp Opens

The first Young People's Executive Leadership Camp of the Montreal and Ottawa Bay of Quinte Young People's Conference Union held its opening session on the Boys' Camp Summer School grounds on Sunday August 18th, with several of the campers arriving on the day previous. The objective of the camp is to develop and train leadership among Young Pople's officers of the local society's auxiliary and Conference Unions. With Rev. C. D. Daniel of Petersboro as dean of the school and Rev. R. H. Rickard of Colborne as director. They have associated with them as leaders of the school Rev. C. H. Ferguson of Northport, Rev. Gordon Maxwell of Oshawa, Rev. W. J. Riding of Brantford, Rev. John MacKay of Ottawa, and Rev. S. L. Osborne of Napanee. Classes are held in meeting in intensive studies relative to Publicity, Citizenship, and administrative Departments of all Young People's Societies, and in Biblical interpretations.

The School is exceptionally fortunate in having secured two specially trained leaders in musical appreciation and in recreation. Miss Esther Thornton and Mr. Arnold Spencer are particularly qualified in these departments. Mr. Stephen Sayvell, who is president of the Bay of Quinte Young People's Conference Union, and upon whom the major work of organization and promotion of the school has descended, is also in attendance. Along with Miss Hazel Horton, of Corbyville as registrar, the officers are complete. The School was visited on Sunday afternoon and evening by Rev. Principal Bert Howard of Albert College Belleville, and will be taking part in the vesper service brought to the groups a very inspiring message on "Dependability". With this admirable commencement the school while not large in numbers, was assured of success.

Mrs. Roy Richard of Colborne, and Miss Irene Chatterson, Reg.N., of Belleville, Camp Mother and Nurse, are looking after the comfort and health of those in attendance. The School will continue its sessions throughout the week, closing with a communion service on Sunday morning August 26th.

WILL DARK RACE HAVE CHANCE?

Will an African nation, Ethiopia, be permitted to develop itself and to make its own way and its own contribution to civilization or is that unconquered Empire to be carved up and directed by another race?

That land-hunger has a share in the present political tangle is evident to the most casual observer. Japan expressed that feeling some years ago when she left the League of Nations. Today Ethiopia and China seem about the last uncaptured territory which would prove advantageous to the extension of empire.

Present outlook is not clear. If it comes to war some believe Italy cannot triumph over natural barriers of climate and terrain, but Italy is prepared to throw in all modern resources of engines and materials and men trained to the last word to mop up the country. What fate will be is to be determined. To others it looks as if this last unconquered land is not to be left to the darker race to develop in its own way. It looks like the finish for Ethiopia, which will be making its contribution to the world, not the native product. Who knows? Life has a real way of surprising men and nations. The last word for peace has not been said, even if parleys break down.

WHAT PREACHERS SAY

The new morality is based on selfishness which proclaims that anything is right if you can get away with it, declared Canon Paul S. Atkins at the Church of the Heavenly Rest, New York. "Our task is not to stress the shortcomings of man, but to reveal to him the rich resources of God adequate to his need if only the world will seek the spiritual and material dedicate drums into which many believe it has fallen."

The will to rule was held as the cause of many ills by Monsignor J. F. A. McIntyre, chancellor of the archdiocese of New York, reaching at high mass in St. Patrick's Cathedral. "Even with the evils of the world as plentiful as ever, has the world been in want and destitution for the past four years? It is because man has spurned the grace of God and set himself up to rule the world alone. He has been a colossal failure." The monsignor defined grace as a supernatural gift that accounts for benevolence, love, comradeship and honor, which differentiate the human being, aside from his intellect and will, from the animal. "The intellect and will are powerful gifts to man's state in life, without which he would be deficient. Grace is a supernatural gift without which men can exist with ease, but which he needs to overcome the natural law and attain the end God has ordained for him."

We are afflicted with dishonesty in almost every relationship of life" declared Rev. Dr. W. H. Greever, secretary of the United Lutheran Church in America, preaching at the Lutheran Church of the Advent. "We meet it among all classes of people. We are prone to close our eyes to the unwelcome facts of life. Everyone finds himself at times by what we are facing of these facts as he has to meet them."

War is imminent in Ethiopia not because the peace plans of the last fifteen years have been insincere, but because men lack in their hearts the resources to carry out their good intentions, said the Rev. W. W. Adams at Baptist Church, Jersey City, New York. "The influence of the League of Nations seems to have come to naught. And why? Because the people who are supposed to carry them out are not right in spirit." He added that before continued peace can be guaranteed to the world there must be a return to the worship of God, a revived realization of its vital importance.

"We stand aghast at what is happening under the eyes of the world in Abyssinia. We see gathering a storm which is contrary to all sanity of mind, contrary to the very meaning of life. Yet we are powerless to avert it as long as the hearts of men are hardened by self-satisfaction, worldliness and confusion."

"When a man tells me that his duties to his family or his obligations to society or business, keep him from attending church, I know his religion is a flimsy, pale thing that cannot hold water. We must not allow family or social ties to rob us of the time we should devote to worship. For that voice is man to make to the inner voice of hopes, fears and aspirations except through worship and prayer," remarked Rev. F. R. Wilson of Hyde Park, N. Y., preaching in the Cathedral of St. John the Divine.

"The fact is that the healing hand of Sunday was never more needed than in this day of mechanical invention, which while releasing man from a certain amount of physical drudgery, increases the stress at the centre of his mental and spiritual life. The burden of our life today is on nerves, not muscles. And so it is more evident than ever that the law of rest cannot in the long run be disobeyed with impunity," said the Rev. Dr. Paul Warren at West End Presbyterian Church attacking the legalizing of Sunday theatrical performances.

The passion of acquiring riches in order to support a vain expense, corrupts the purest souls.—Fenelon.

THE MARCH OF YOUTH

The hosts of youth are marching
In the day-spring of their life;
They are mounting up the highway,
And they face the rising goal;
They cry praise to God for joy
As they gird them for the strife
But their cry goes up for ever,
"Give us freedom of the soul."

The hosts of youth are marching,
They have broken down the bars
Of the world our fathers left us
Which we cherished for our own,
For they found earth full of beauty,
And the night ablaze with stars,
And the spirit sweeps them onward
In the lure of the unknown.

The hosts of youth are marching,
And their hearts are all aflame
With the glory of the sunrise
In the land that gave them birth.
No leader goes before them
And their wayward feet can name,
But they go to take possession
Of the Kingdom of the Earth.

ROME IN ITS DECADENT DAYS was satisfied with "Bread and Circuses", the wily Caesars saw that the people were satisfied with much circus and as little bread as it was possible to subsist on. Belleville citizens have been in the entertainment business all his life states that the show business is the first to feel depression and the first to show the sure signs of better times. Last night, for one, we take Belleville—the Circus does capacity business with a take of between ten and fifteen thousand dollars for two performances! Outside of David floodlight baseball game packed the exhibition grounds, with an estimated attendance of about 5,000, the Shrine Circus, which has just spurred the films and breaks all records for attendance at the Belle Theatre, covering a period of years. All this took place within the space of a few weeks. Not much sign of depression in that or fear of a hard winter. Shows that confidence, the chief ingredient of good times, has returned.

CROWS HEREABOUTS HAVE CAUSE FOR ALARM, the big crow hunter we spoke of here the other day has been on the prowl again and we Massassaga added another twenty-five dead crows to the number of several hundred. And the foolish old crows still come when he calls. Talk about your hog callers, your moose callers, and all other callers but Wellwisher's crow caller has them all stopped.

GO EASY ON THE EATS, counsel some wise guys, this hot weather, good advice too, meaning don't overwork the human machinery while it is busy enough working to keep cool. And the wise folks have the idea that cold food is the best for hot weather but Toronto's Medical Officer of Health says not, and says he thought to be "summer flu" to the eating of cold foods. Sez he: "I am inclined to believe that such a sickness is a mild form of indigestion compared largely by a too steady diet of cold foods and drinks. If people would take a little warm food each day, along with their cold meals, and had hot soup or a little warm meat, I am sure they would avoid this summer illness."

JUVENILE CRIME IS INCREASING, according to police records, and the question is raised as to the responsibility of parents. Home life is not as important or sacred as it used to be when nine o'clock or ten o'clock were zero hours when all members of the family must be in the house and the younger ones in bed, when the door was locked and another day officially brought to a close with evening prayers. Now there is no zero hour in most homes — bridge and the heads of the home out until all hours or keeps the family up at home — or the many other attractions and distractions which drag out a busy day until midnight at least. Result, kids roaming the streets at all hours and finding all kinds of company and opportunities for mischief which generally leads to crime.

MOTOR MADNESS

"Is this the speedometer?" asked the pretty girl, tapping the glass with her finger.

"Yes, dear," he replied.

"And that's the clutch?"

"That's the clutch, darling, he said, jamming on the brakes to avoid a fast approaching truck.

"But what on earth is this?" she inquired, at the same time giving the accelerator a vigorous push with her foot.

"This, dear," he said in a soft, celestial voice, "is Heaven." And picking up a harp he flew away.

REVOLT IN THE DESERT
by T. E. LAWRENCE

So he forgot his most important news, how on September the sixth Allenby, with a new Inspector-General and a Bartholomew, "Why bother about Mesopotamia? Let the cavalry go straight to Aleppo, and Nazareth", and so the whole plan would have been changed, and an enormous indefinite advance substituted for the fixed objective. We got no notion of this; but by cross-questioning the pilot, whom Salmon had informed, we got a clear statement of the resources in hooking machines. They had the most of our minimum for Deraa; so we asked for just a hamper-bombing of it while we went round it by the north, to make sure of destroying the Damascus line.

The next day Feisal arrived with, behind him, the regular troops, Nuri Said the spick and span, Jemil the gunner, Pisani's cousin like Algerians, and the other items of our "mess and bodyguard" effort. The grey-flies had now two thousand camels to fatten upon, and in their weariness gave Feisal's camps and his half-trained mechanics.

In the afternoon Nuri Shaalan appeared, with Trad and Khalid, Auda, Jazi, and all the Abu Tayi. Auda abu Tayi arrived, with Mohammed el Dheilan, Sheikh of the Ad Dhilan, and Adhuh, the Zebn leaders, with Ibn Rami, the chief of the Serahin and Ibn Gemil of the Beni Sakhr, the Ad Dhilan, or the Adwan near Salt, rode across to Jemil on the south of our attack on Amman. Later in the evening there was a battle of rifle fire in the Wadi Hadhal el Hareddhin, my old command, Jemil nothing else doing for us, with forty or fifty mounted peasants behind him. His ammunition ran out with joy at the long-hoped-for arrival. Druzes and town-dyrtans, lawyers and farmers rush swelled the company. Even the barley crop for our animals was forfeited to possibility we set Jemil down as the most important single leader. Jemil was dismissed and in health.

Enough small. The crowd had discovered my pleasure in Auruk, and I went down the valley to our remote Ain el Emad and there spent the day in my old lair among the tamarisk, which grew up in the dust. Sparrow branches played with such sounds as it made in English trees. It told me I was tired to death of these Arabs; petty incarnate Semites who attacked heights and depths beyond our reach, though not beyond our sight. They realized our absolute in their unrestrained capacity for good and evil; and for the first time I had completely shammed to be their companion!

Joyce meanwhile shouldered the responsibility which my defection endangered. He had returned with the Egyptian Camel Corps, now a sapper party, Scott-Higgins with his fighting Ghurkas, and two armoured cars as insurance, went off to cut the railway by Dhaira.

The scheme was for Scott-Higgins to rush a blockhouse after dark with his nimble Ghurkas—nimble on foot that was to say, for they were little sacks, on camels. Peake was then to demolish until dawn. The cars would cover their retirement southward in the morning over the plain, upon which we, the Arab Army, would be marching north from Azra for Umtaiye, a great pit of rain-water fifteen miles south of Deraa, and our advanced base. We gave them Rualla guides and sent them off, hopefully for this important preliminary.

Just at dawn our command received, on the Umtaiye road, Ali ibn el Hussein continuing; three hundred more Shaalan arrived, and more horse. He had also two thousand Howeitat camel-riders there to assist him to keep in Wadi Sirhan. It seemed not wise, before the Damascus line was cut, to disturb the Howeitat, disturbing Beduin among the villages, and Howeitat horsemen were sheiks, or sheikhs' servants, men of substance, under control.

Meanwhile Joyce had handed me the whole day in Azrak, but Nasir, Nuri Said, Jemil, and Ali Bluz Mist, by which on the following morning I overtook the column. Many of them were dismounting among the grass-filled roughness of the valley, to unburden their camels, joying to be out of the barren circle of Azrak, were packing their camels and saddling their best of food.

Ali had had news. Peake had rejoined, reporting failure to reach the line, because of trouble with the encampment of the Ghurkas in bourhood of his proposed demolition. He had been shot at by patrols of the Afhman railway, and the check had cost him a day. Also he had lost a load of guncotton, and mounted my camel, to push in advance of the column, to overtake Peake on his tour to avoid harsh tongues of lava which the Romans scattered inwards the railway; but we, Aqyl and others of the well-mounted, cut straight across in a shower rain to the open plain about the ruined Um el Jemal.

I was thinking hard about the Amman demolition, puzzled as to what would happen if it succeeded and best, and the puzzle of these ruins aided me. My camel, which seemed evidence of bluntness of mind in these Roman frontier stations. Um el Jemal, Um el Surab, Umtaiye, Such incongruous buildings, in what was then and now is desert cockpit, accused their builders of stupidity. Possibly rather a vulgar assertion of man's right (Roman right) to live unchanged in the midst of changing things—only to be paid for by taxing more docile provinces—on these ruins of empire.

Peake and the Ghurkas rejoined the column, and we pushed on, Peake was then to demolish until dawn. The cars would cover their retirement southward in the morning over the plain, upon which we, the Arab Army, would be marching north from Azra for Umtaiye, a great pit of rain-water fifteen miles south of Deraa, and our advanced base. We gave them Rualla guides and sent them off, hopefully for this important preliminary.

Just at dawn our command received, on the Umtaiye road, Ali ibn el Hussein continuing; three hundred more Shaalan arrived, and more horse. He had also two thousand Howeitat camel-riders there to assist him to keep in Wadi Sirhan. It seemed not wise, before the Damascus line was cut, to disturb the

OLD CITY FOUND IN N. SYRIA DIRT

Royal Palaces Uncovered, Syrian-Hittite Capitol Indicated

Chicago, Aug. 21 — Discovery of an ancient city-site in North Syria, believed to have been a local capital of considerable importance in the Syrian-Hittite world about the period 1000 B. C. to 500 B. C. was announced today by the Oriental Institute of the University of Chicago.

The discovery was reported by Dr. C. W. McEwan, field director of the Institute's Syrian expedition, who recently returned to this country. Trial excavation has uncovered a royal palace and has given indications that there are other public buildings on the site. One of the finest examples of Hittite art yet found, a double-lion column base, has already been unearthed.

Dr. McEwan, whose expedition has been excavating two ancient mounds about midway between Alexandretta and Aleppo in North Syria, his report relates, did three months of the discovery of this lifted mound in the district.

The native foreman of the expedition was going to Antioch on his monthly day off, and when he noticed two carefully cut blocks of basalt in the dirt which beside the highway," Dr. McEwan reports. "They were on the edge of a long, low lying mound called Tell Tabtab. The foreman was experienced enough to know that it was safe to recognize them as important clues.

"When the members of the expedition investigated the mound they found huge column bases of a type characteristic of royal buildings of the Hittite period—after 1000 B. C. The natives of a little village near by had been digging into the mound, not for antiquities, but for sandstone brick to fill depressions in road building.

"These clues were so striking that they demanded further investigation. In the late spring the Oriental Institute party undertook a two week dig at Tell Tabtat, in cooperation with the Department of Antiquities of the District of Alexandretta which was represented by M. Claude Frot. The trial excavation proved very successful, uncovering a fallen column base, palace, which showed three construction periods, ranging from 900 B. C. to 500 B. C. There is promise of further buildings for future digging.

"The Syrian-Hittite culture was a composite of Hittite, Aramaean, Phoenician and Assyrian elements. Inscriptions of North Syria from about 1100 B. C. like those of Alexander the Great. The discovery of a lost capital of the Hittite period is being new light to bear on a most interesting period. The Oriental Institute hopes to return to this site for a fuller season for further excavation of the mound.

"The most striking single find in the palace was a double-lion column base, two crouching lions whose backs supported a column at the entrance to the palace. While column bases of one kind or another are, of course, common in archaeological excavation, the is the first object of its kind found in this civilization, and it has been pronounced one of the finest specimens of Hittite art yet recovered."

Morgan Honored, Is Master Sergeant

Washington — Aug. 21—(AP)—Tactical Sergeant Stanley R. Morgan today was promoted to Master Sergeant, highest non-commissioned United States Army rank.

Secretary of War George Dern said the advancement was "in recognition of his initiative, resourcefulness and fine judgment in organizing and directing the recovery of Rogers' and Post's bodies," adding them to the only Native village and transmitting to the outside world a detailed account of the Arctic tragedy near Point Barrow, Alaska.

THREATS MADE TO THELMA TODD

Janitor Denies Writing of Notes Demanding $20,000

New York, Aug. 21—The Federal Bureau of Investigation announced today special agents had arrested early Saturday a man who they charged attempted to extort $20,000 from Thelma Todd, motion-picture actress, under the kidnap statute.

He is Harry Schimanski, 34-year-old superintendent of an apartment house at 21-18 Newtown Avenue, Astoria. Schimanski, the father of two children, has never been arrested before. When taken into custody at his home in the apartment house, he denied the charge.

The threats against Miss Todd's life were contained in letters sent to the actress in Hollywood and to Abe Lyman, orchestra leader, and the Lyman offices. In the letters to Mr. Lyman and the Lowe offices the writer asked that they have their good offices to get Miss Todd to pay the money demanded, warning that she would be killed if she did not.

The Department of Justice men were at a loss to explain why either Miss Todd's or Mr. Lyman's offices should have been called upon to act as intermediaries, unless the writer thought the orchestra leader a friend of Miss Todd and the Lowe offices the best medium to reach him.

Miss Todd's specialty in the movies has been comedy roles. In addition to her acting she operates a chain of lunch rooms on the West Coast.

The first threatening letter sent to Miss Todd, on Feb. 4 demanding only $10,000, but ultimately the sum was raised to $20,000. The last threat was written on a postcard and mailed to the Lowe offices last Monday.

The first and only clue came from a note sent to Abe Lyman. It told how to get in touch with the writer and bore the name of a Detectives person supposedly living at 21-18 Newtown Avenue, Astoria, the apartment house where Schimanski was employed. Federal agents questioned the house janitorial of the superintendent, they compared his handwriting with that of the sender of the notes, noted a similarity, they said, and arrested him.

Schimanski was taken to the Federal House of Detention. A complaint will be made out against him today in the United States Southern District Court charging him with attempted extortion through the mails.

TEXAS COWS LIKE TO HAVE DRINK

Science Service Advises Water Flavored With Liquor

Give your cows a drink if you want them to return lots of milk.

That's what T. E. Woodward, specialist for Texas Agricultural and Mechanical College, told a group of farmers meeting in Houston recently.

Obviously, however, cocktail hours for cattle are impractical. Cocktails would be too expensive.

The thing to do, therefore, is to add cows water flavored in liquor says Science Service. This is because they like such water and will drink more of it than water of the Volstead era. And when cows drink more they give more milk.

Mr. Ruddy has connected a special "brew" for cattle. It is simply fermented beer, such as the trenches. Its alcoholic content is less than one-tenth of 1 per cent, but cattle relish it, the writer Mr. Ruddy says.

It's made in this way: Into a trench, about five feet deep, green corn, maize, sorghum or other food stuff is placed. Water is poured over it to drive out air, which would destroy the beer. Forty pounds of black strap molasses is poured over each ton of the stuff. The foodstuff is then covered up with dirt, and with keep indefinitely. Rain seeps through, keeping the silage wet, and fermentation sets in.

When water from such a trench flowed into a stream in New Waco, Texas, recently, it made the fish drunk so that they came to the surface and could easily be caught.

KANSAS CITY COPS CLEAN-SHAVEN

Rule Passed When 'Cops' Started Fight With Those Who Laughed

Business boomed for barbers recently in the vicinity of Kansas City's City Hall, says the Associated Press.

Otto F. Higgins, Director of Police, had dictated:

Hereafter in the future all members of the Police Department will be required to keep their faces clean.

Mustaches have objectionable features, Higgins said. Besides, he added, they encourage carelessness.

Lawrence is 34. He rides a motorcycle. More to the point, he had one of the silliest little mustaches in the whole force.

So what?

So Lawrence had more fights than Dempsey the Mauler—and, Higgins said, all because of the patch on his lip.

The trouble was, as Higgins saw it, that when somebody said something about birds nesting in the mustache, Lawrence would climb out of Mrs. Lawrence's bed and fight them.

Other policemen with mustaches reacted similarly.

So all in all, it took up a lot of Higgin's time. Finally he got to thinking the mustaches should not be worn by all-clean-shaven policemen if they are undignified, unsightly and in violation of the auxiliary law.

VOLUNTEER FIRE FIGHTERS SWELTER

Heat Wave Causes Loss as Orchards Show Drought Signs

Halifax, Aug. 21—(CP)—Sweltering in tropical heat with no sign or relief more than 2,000 volunteers were fighting fires in the forests of the Maritimes provinces today.

The weekend death toll of eight in the three provinces was swelled to 13 as three more drownings were reported—two in New Brunswick and one in Nova Scotia —and Capt. Bruce Farnum died from the effects of sunstroke.

The highest temperature reported since the heat wave began last week was at Milford Station, N. S., yesterday, 107. Antigonish, N. S., reported 105, New Glasgow 102, and North Sydney 102.

WOMAN PASTOR BARRED IN CHURCH

Rev. Emma Musaung Preaches From Side Window to Them

Louisville, Ky., Aug 21—Barred and victualed for a siege, the Rev. Emma Musaung preached out the side windows of Sunnydale Reformed Church to a spokesgrape, yes, reporters and ten worshippers who stood in a drizzle. The collection of $1.85 was handed in the back door.

Three guards, who accompanied Mrs. Musaung to the church and two county patrolmen stood by to prevent possible disorders. A hundred odd persons were strung out along the highway. They included neighbors, part of the local Boy Scout troop, congregation and ten of the church executive committee. Sightseers came to watch the fun. Mrs. Musaung make good her boast that she would remain service in the church which ousted her as pastor because of her sex three years ago.

The woman pastor claims the church building on the ground that she is still president of the corporation which built and owns it. She contends that she erected the building in obedience to a vision in 1926, when a voice whispered thrice at night, saying, "Go to Sunnydale and build a church."

CENTRE

The August meeting of the above society held at Centre Church on the 15th with a good representation of sister societies, Massasaga and Ameliasburg in attendance. The President opened the meeting with the call to worship, and all joined in singing "O Worship the King" after which Mrs. Titus led in prayer. Arrangements were made concerning the bale which is to be ready for the September meeting. Used and new clothing is asked for, and Mrs. Lo Belcher will be the hostess for the meeting. A letter of thanks was read from Mrs. W. H. Redner, Mrs. Fred Townsend then read the Devotional Leaflet, and Mrs. Darling gave a reading based on the story of the 3 loaves and five small fishes. Mrs. Wilford and Jus's Dehaney sang "In Our Dear Father's Garden." An interesting temperance reading was given by Mrs. Titus. All joined in singing "There is Work to do for Jesus." Mrs. (Dr.) Lindsay, the guest speaker of the afternoon then gave a very interesting talk about her life in China, and some phases of her husband's work, he being a dental missionary, Mrs. (Dr.) Lindsay also had some very interesting exhibits and pieces of beautiful embroidery work, which added further interest to a delightful and profitable day.

The thanks of the society were conveyed to Mrs. (Dr.) Lindsay. Lunch was served by the Centre ladies

A large white ball overhung the table decorated with pink and white, from which pink candles and pink and white crepe paper bells were hidden about the room with the honored guest being the bride-to-be. Many lovely gifts were received. Miss Ethel Nurse pouring the iced beverage with Mrs. L. Wells and Mrs. M. Wilson serving. Miss Cook, although surprised, thanked all for their kindness to her and extended an invitation to visit her in her new home.

Weddings

McALLISTER—WILLIAMS

A wedding of beautiful appointment took place in St. Mary's Roman Catholic Church, Marysville, on Monday, August 12, at ten o'clock, when Anne Catherine, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Williams, Lonsdale, became the bride of Mr. Wilbert Douglas McAllister, son of Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm McAllister, Kingsford. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Father O'Connell.

To the strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march, played by Mr. Bill Power, the bride entered the church on the arm of her father, wearing a model of white crepe with mashlin veil. She carried a white prayer book, through which were white streamers, caught with pink rosettes.

Miss Mary Williams was her sister's bridesmaid and wore a pale green and white ballerina length model. She also carried a white prayer book, with white and pink streamers. Mr. Mr. Spence Jarrell, Canniton, was groomsman. Edward Murphy was usher.

After the ceremony the guests returned to the bride's home where the wedding breakfast was served to the immediate relatives.

Slenderize Shape!

That's the Word of Dame Fashion Who is Designing For Svelte Figures

(The Beauty Box)

By HELEN FOLLETT

MADAME FASHION is producing lovely duds that require the svelte and slender shape. Women who delight after the plans and specifications of a dress print are having a time of it these days. Styles just weren't made for them.

One doesn't need more than a shadow of a curve in the hips and thighs. The bust must be of normal proportions and the chest athletic. At least, the chest should look as if it were a full-sized packing case for healthy lungs.

How does one get that way? By cultivating the queenly pose, having a backbone that is a real support for the body, holding in the tummy muscles and packing hips back and under. Breathing exercises taken twice a day help to turn the trick.

Flushing the lungs with fresh air, washing them clean, brings many benefits. One right step in ventilation which reacts favorably upon the complexion. Vegetables is stimulated, and that means better skin conditions, healthier hair and fingernail nails.

Fresh air puts the glittering polish on the soul windows. It performs miracles with the girlish, peaches and cream complexion. Fresh air is the world's best and cheapest cosmetic.

A simple and harmless bleach for face, neck, hands and arms is made by combining four ounces of alcohol, two ounces of lemon juice, and a few drops of simple tincture of benzoin.

Apply with a pledget of cotton at bedtime and let it dry off. It helps whiten the skin and tan and does not belong to the class of bleaches that flays. It works slowly but surely.

Clear vegetable soup is good food for the woman who would start on a reducing campaign. It contains almost all the elements that are necessary for nutrition and doesn't fattening.

The old maxims that put on add pounds, cauliflour are fats, starches and sweets. Cut them down, and you'll soon be able to take in the seams of that little new model that it's so out of balance.

Ferry Years

She has cultivated the queenly pose with exercises.

hard to squeeze into.

Ten minutes of exercise in the morning will give that freshness, complexion and brightness to the eyes.

Fling the arms in wide circles, lift up on the toes, come down slowly. Stand erect, hands on hips, swing the legs in circles. Bend forward and back, turn from side to side. It's the middle that needs muscle toning.

Lift and lower the chin. Turn the head from side to side. Then run the shower.

MAINSAIL RIPPED IN LAKE STORM

Motor Vessel of Owners Reaches Belleville After Twister

Now a Lake Ontario "twister" travelling toward them across the water with the speed of a hurricane, easily signalled their small boat, Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Mackay observed the outside equipment of their craft and threatened to sink beyond sight of land on Monday morning. Their boat was rescued that evening afternoon by Mr. Bertram Wolfe and two companions of Oswego, who made fast their own twin-powered small launch the instant they sighted anyone in distress, while some repairs were being made.

Lake "twisters" not quite equal but always dreaded by fishermen and sailors alike are miniature cyclones whirling on the water with terrific force, and at times combining with waterspouts in solid vertical spout. Small boats caught in their path are tossed high into the air, being carried into the air by the force of the maelstrom of air and water. Many have been sunk or wrecked by the whirling cone-shaped "twister."

"It must have been somewhere near the centre of the disturbance when we first sighted this one off the Ducks," said Mr. Mackay, "for a large black cloud toward the water and sank some of it up. It was about a mile away when we saw it first, but we didn't pay any attention to it for a minute or so and never seen one before. Then it got bigger and bigger and seemed to be heading our way. We had just been filling about but we put on full speed and then I went out on the patch. It seemed to follow very close behind us for the next few minutes a live thing. Now it was on top of the water, and again high up in the air. The tip of the funnel was about the fastest thing I ever saw move.

Before we had time to batten down it was all around us, apparently the actual cone didn't touch the boat, but the force of the wind from it. There was the most terrific roaring noise and the mainsail falls seemed to be spouting all around us. We were too paralyzed to move. It was over in a flash, the boat, it carried off a lot of spare gear, including the mainsail and the hatch cover along with it.

But time we got the engine going we were well on its way to heaven with a lot of room for some other loose stuff for company."

It left us almost as soon as it had come, and was gone on from port side and then.

Mr. Wolfe and his two companions, who had come to the boat's assistance in spite of such cyclones of their own, said this afternoon that they will make their way down the St. Lawrence to the Thousand Islands and proceed at a leisurely pace down the St. Lawrence.

LEAGUE COUNCIL MAY TAKE ACTION BY CONCILIATION

Duty Paid.

Paris, Aug. 31.—(AP)—Premier Laval is negotiating personally with Premier Mussolini in an effort to settle war debts with Italy, it was learned today.

Laval hopes, if the worst comes to the worst, military action can be confined to Ethiopian mountains and policing of frontier strips.

The new Italian ambassador, representative at the abortive tripower conference in Paris, took to Rome with a new line of French appreciation of Italy's friendship.

Addis Ababa, Aug. 31.—(AP) Terrifying war cries rivalling the yells of the early American redskins dinned from thousands of tribesmen's throats today as Emperor Haile Selassie's Oromo-ranged warriors staged a sham battle in preparation for imminent hostilities with Italy.

The Emperor himself, arrayed in a scarlet military uniform and a lion's mane head-dress, directed the mock clash, which made up in vocal ferocity for its lack of gunshot—occasionally imposed a cartridge fashion.

Secret Pact of Gold

Addis Ababa, Aug. 31.—(AP)—The British Legation today took steps to construct a bomb proof shelter for the small British force that will protect the legation in the event Italy attacks Ethiopia.

The British purchased 6,000 square yards of heavy, corrugated, galvanized iron sheets for the shelters. These also will provide quarters for British civilians.

Addis Ababa, Aug. 31.—(AP)—Reliable sources reported today that Emperor Haile Selassie has a large secret hoard of gold and silver to pour out in fighting Italy in the event of hostilities.

TORONTO STOCKS CLOSE

Toronto Aug. 31—An upward tendency prevailed in the limited industrial board with action bulking in the oils and liquors. Distillers Seagrams added more than a half point and Walkers Common at 37 1/4 had 3-4 to the good by early afternoon while in the oils gains of 1-4 to 1-2 appeared in International Petroleum, Imperial Oil and British American Oil.

Golds also responded to the scaling up of prices in London, Consolidated Smelters advancing 5 points and International Nickel to 29 1/2 where it stood at a new high for the year. Ford A, C.P.R. and the leading steels were higher. Gains came out for the rail and investment stocks while the building issues were heavy. Cement pfd. lost 1 1-2.

NEW YORK CLOSE

New York, Aug. 31.—(AP)—The stock market retained most of its forenoon firmness during late trading today.

At the beginning of the final hour steels and other pivotal industrial shares collected a sheet's leadership strongly seconded by copper and utilities. Prevailing issues selling 1 to 2 points higher included Bethlehem Steel, U. S. Pipe and Foundry, Vanadium, U. S. Steel preferred and common, A. M. Byers, Gulf States Steel, Chrysler, Auburn Auto, Kennecott Copper, Cerro De Pasco, Westinghouse and Montgomery Ward. A scattering of 1-16 points in American Telephone, following authorization by the directors of the regular quarterly dividend of $2.25 was a feature of the late dealings. The list closed firm. Sales approximated 1,850,000 shares.

TORONTO MINES, CLOSE

Toronto, Aug. 31.—Base Metal shares had an upward flurry in the early morning today but failed to keep to stand up under profit-taking and by early afternoon prices in the speculative share group had lost most for the day. Noranda and Hudson Bay Mining were exceptions with the metals on the New York board, the former showing a gain of nearly 3 points. Sherritt Gold and Base Metals Corporation dropped about 3 points.

Silver stocks failed to hold their morning gains and the group weakened with few exceptions. McWatters pushed higher in the afternoon trading while Mayo, Beaver and Wright Hargreaves sold off.

WALL STREET FINANCIAL

New York, Aug. 31 (AP)—The Stock Market threw off its lagging late worries today and got back into a forward stride with steel and other pivotal industrials in the vanguard.

Dome was a bit easier among Canadian shares, while Internationals, Nickel advanced sharply and Canadian Pacific rutied steady. On the curb Hiram Walker gained a point, fraction but Lake Shore yielded slightly. Dominion Government bonds were narrow. Canadian funds were 1-32 of a cent higher at 99 13-16 cents.

Declines in stocks ranged from small fractions to well over a point with most of the steel shares grouped together in the higher brackets. The Preferred Stocks of both U.S. Steel and Bethlehem made new high for the year along with Coca Cola, Chrysler showing striking distance of the old top in 1937. National Steel, Republic, U.S. Pipe & Foundry, U.S. Steel Common, A. M. Byers and American Steel Foundries.

Graded Egg prices

Toronto dealers yesterday were paying the following prices for eggs, delivered to Toronto: "A" large, 25 to 26 1-2c; grade "A" medium, 24 to 24 1-2; "B" 20 to 21c; "C" 17 1-2c.

Board Room Gossip

As supplied to Bigger and Crawford by Financial Service.

The price of copper in London has been advancing steadily for some time and in the past few days touched the highest level in more than three months. In New York domestic copper was advanced half a cent pound on Monday bringing the price of the red metal for domestic consumption half-way between the Blue Eagle nine-cent level which prevailed for over a year and the present price of 10c a pound.

In London, electrolytic copper sold at $38 a ton yesterday, the best price since May. With sterling at $4.94%, the Canadian equivalent is 8.3 cents a pound, the best price since April 1934.

On the Torbrio and other Canadian exchanges several stocks responded to the rise in copper the past few days, and Base Metals and Sherritt Gordon have been features at Toronto. Reports of much improved gains recorded in these and other copper issues.

Upon his return from a visit to the property, President Robert Bowman of Coniagas Gold Mines stated that the 150-ton mill will be in operation some time in September. The program in preparation for placing the property on a producing basis is well ahead of schedule, from the company's own past is being turned on, who will shred 6-8 cents, bring the mine is being completely electrified both on the surface and underground and the 1,000 foot level stations the company will have a cash balance on hand of approximately $300,000.

The Trader in Barron's states that a good deal of water has gone over the dam in the last month or two, and it now looks as though the utilities will probably escape any legislation in this session of Congress, whether a bill is put through or not. Recent weeks have seen a revival of utility speculation, plus the usual power of the seconds quarter, plus steadily improved prospects for fall trade, and a few deep quotes. There are eager buyers the skeptics of early 1938. Their doubts are too high on the current and immediately prospective earning power, however, but on the assumption that what has occurred is just what was predicted—a temporary setback in a speculative psychology which has begun to discount recovery prospects instead of realities — inevitably a sidemark in the career of any stock market.

Commercial Seeds

Canada continues to be the chief source of supply of tomato ketchup and sauce to the United Kingdom, increasing her shipments in the 1935 period to 96,857 cases from 39,798 in 1934. The tomato soup trade also is almost entirely in Canadian hands.

The figures of imports of wheat into the Scottish ports of Glasgow and Leith for the first six months of 1938 show that Canada had taken more Canadian wheat than in the corresponding period of the two previous years. The shipments of Canadian flour also were greater than for several years previous.

The Ontario Approved Turkey Breeders' Association inspection work has been completed for 1938 with 2,000 turkeys eligible for approval inspection in 1935 against 1,600 in 1934.

The Ayrshire cow, Cnslow Lass, bred and owned by Miss Mary Hooper, Pictou, N. S., has recently completed a second record of over 30,000 pounds of milk, 30,541 pounds to be exact. The previous mark of seven years of age she gave 30,886 pounds of milk.

The estimated short apple crop in the United Kingdom for 1938 should stimulate a larger demand for Canadian apples which have the Northern Hemisphere to themselves by reputations of carrying with them a certificate of freedom from disease.

Livestock

Toronto, Aug. 31 (CP)—Continuing the week's trend, the cattle division of the Toronto livestock market again was very dull at the opening today with only a few bologna bulls and stockers traded. Holdovers numbered 2,400 head. Lambs were firm while sheep and calves held steady. Hogs were unsteady, unsettled with bids another 25 cents lower.

Receipts reported by the Dominion Livestock Branch were:

Cattle, 170; calves, 160; hogs, 450; sheep and lambs, 360.

The calf division was steady at $7 to $8 for good vealers and at $5 to $6.50 for medium to medium kinds.

Lambs were firm with a few picked lots off easy at $7.75 a good deal extra and others out of truck at $7.50. Culls and bucks ranged from $5.50 to $6.50. Sheep were steady to 25c lower at $3 to $3 cwt.

Hogs were unsettled with bids down 25 cents at $9 f.o.b. for bacons, $9.25 off truck and $9.75 off car.

Cattle and sheep quotations were unchanged.

Hogs, cattle and lambs—No quotations.

JOHNSTON PORTER CONTRACTOR, DIES

One of The Best Known on The American Continent

St. Catharines, Ont., Aug. 31—(CP)—Funeral of the late Johnston P. Porter, contractor, who died after a lengthy illness will be held Thursday afternoon at 2.30 o'clock from his residence to Victoria Lawn cemetery.

Mr. Porter, born in Halifax, N. S., was one of the best known contractors on the continent. At one time he was engaged on the famous ship railway across the Chignecto Canal in Nova Scotia and from then on was built many different states and the prairies, then in the heyday of railway construction.

COOLER WRASHER

Cooling breezes swept over Eastern Canada today and brought temporary relief from almost record-breaking heat of the past few days.

Winds, increasing in velocity off the Atlantic coast renewed the danger from raging fires in the Maritime Provinces.

INDIANS PLAY REAL BASEBALL UNDER O'NEILL

Crowding Boston And Chicago For Fourth Place

YANKEES WIN

Both The Giants And Cards Win Fixtures in National

(By Andy Clarke)
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Cleveland Indians are playing a better brand of baseball since Steve O'Neill, their former coach, took over the managerial reins.

Prior to Steve's accession their win percentage was less than .500, since then they have been galloping along at a percentage tilt of .667, winning 12 games, losing six and tying one. They have won six of their last seven encounters and are hard on the heels of Chicago White Sox and Boston Red Sox, the third and fourth place clubs. The latter-clubs are in a virtual tie with the Indians about a half-game behind.

Playing heads-up baseball, the Indians capitalize on two fumbles and a wild throw in the opening stanza to defeat Washington Senators 4-3 yesterday. Galaragga was safe on Lewis' error, advanced a base and went to third on Hollbrook's wild heave. Trosky then banged out a double to score Trosky and then Hale, after advancing on an infield fly, scored on Knickerbocker's single. That was the end of the ball game so far as victory was concerned.

Yanks Beat Reese

The Yankees made up for a measure for the Indians. They have defeated the hands of Schoolboy Rowe by tallying in the fifth inning of the second game of this third inning to defeat Detroit Tigers 7-6 and split the series. Rowe, this third inning to Tigers now has won 15 games this season.

Ben Chapman got a homer for the Yanks in the first inning rally and Hank Greenberg hit his 32nd circuit clout in the 3rd. Johnny Allen as the Tigers counted four times in the sixth.

The Browns looked their heads out of the cellar long enough to take one game of a doubleheader from the Red Sox. The Browns won the first game 7-3 and lost the second 7-5 as three hurlers allowed 14 hits.

Little Jocko Conlan hit safely several times in earlier times at bat, twice for two bases, as Chicago White Sox moved out of Second Place Red Sox into third place by defeating the Athletics in both ends of a doubleheader 13- and 11-. The A's doubleheader 13- and 11-. The A's got 32 hits including a pair of homers by Jimmy Foxx but the Sox collected 27 blows and converted them to high run totals.

National League

The Giants were forced to go ten innings to gain a 6-5 victory over Brooklyn Dodgers. They went into the eighth with the score 5-3 against them. Parmelee came to the fourth straight game in which he has started, Fitzsimmons finished the game when Moore was forced out in the ninth. After the Dodgers had scored once in the 10th Hank Lieber hit a home run into the left field corner and Jackson drove in Critz with the winning run.

The Cardinals beat Boston Braves 4-3 as Joe Medwick's single to the rock hit homers with a man on base. Pittsburgh Pirates walloped Brooklyn Dodgers 9-0 as Jim Weaver turned in the fifth game in a month and a half allowing five hits.

Grayed Veteran Of Sulky Again Earns Plaudits

Charlottetown, Aug. 31.—(C.P.)—Where he once had been a perennial favorite with the crowds, Billy, a favorite with the crowds, Peter County, grayed veteran of the sulky, was a background figure when the harness racing program of the Prince Edward Island Exhibition got under way. When fate took a hand and gave him the eagerly accepted opportunity of becoming once more the hero of applauding thousands.

The one time son of Maritime Speedways was watching the successive heats from the judges' stand in centre field. With knowing eyes he followed every move of horses and drivers. Came the third heat of the 2.36 pace with Martin-dell, Woodstock pacer, and Rob Oh Boy, Island-owned, each the winner of a heat, and Miss Hallfax and August Queen nursing two seconds.

The horses scored many times without being able to get away. A conference in the judges' stand preceded unsophisticated instruction a new driver be found for August Queen within five minutes. Somebody one spotted Peter County.

A driver was found, with the coat off, whip in hand, he was in the silky and when the word was given thundered down the stretch August Queen led them home a winner. This time he forced a fourth heat and when Peter County teamed August Queen to the front a second time, winner of first place and first money. The unsophisticated crowd went wild. Its cut timer had made good. He is almost sure to have the pacer behind something for the remaining two days of the meet.

BARRED FROM GERMAN OLYMPIC TEAM

Miss Greta Gergmann, ...woman high-jumping champion of the province of Westerniberg, and who had a fair chance to "make" the German Olympic team, who was excluded from the German field sports championships held several days ago. These games were the most important contests in preparation for the Olympics. However, it was then believed that the German Olympics committee has technically escaped violating its promise that Jews would have an equal opportunity to make the German Olympic team. It was explained that, as a Jew, Miss Bergmann could not belong to the German Light Athletic Association which put on the championships. Thus she could not compete in them.

CURRENT SPORT

DAY BY DAY

Tuesday, August the 30th proved allowed to score, when he ran fully seven feet off the base line to evade being tagged. Some are witnesses swear it was ten feet. At any rate, when Coach Meagher and Umpire Jack Barnes running off the line, Umpire Higgin replied "well, what you want him to do, run into the catcher?" And there's another one for the book, a clear admission from Barnes, ran off the line and more than the allotted three feet.

Today's early morning rain surely was most acceptable, but should it stay away interfere with the softball playoffs this evening, the rain assisting in the settling of the dust and clarifying of the air. Incidentally, Ally Wesker likes champagne as the Trenton and District League meet the Aajmaas in the second game of the best round O.A.B.A. in Central Park this evening, while the Recreations and the Bluenose nine tangle in the Mercantile League finals. The Aajmaas and Wooler standed a hectic battle in Trenton the other night, the Belleville league champions piling out a 6 to 5 victory but only after they had turned in their best effort of the entire season. Is it any wonder that feat tonight?" local fans are asking.

Although it is not exactly football weather the annual call for rugby football has gone out and Jack Ellis "We are holding our initial practice of the season at St. Cricket Field on Thursday night," announced Coach Dr. Kennedy early this am. A number of last year's players will put their shoulder to the wheel and resurrect Belleville city's high football team for the Lake Shore loop this fall.

Those in custody of the National Ballard Harter Jubilee Committee be given to the local senior player having the best batting average in the 1938 season, announced today that the cup was for the season and for the 1937 season. Holder at present Johnnie Kerr is over 30 runs ahead of Alex Weir, but Weir is about 30 points above Jean Ford. Today the Ponies are scheduled to play Bill Peterboro, for a win for the Kingston squad this evening, a semi-final play-off between Belleville and Kingston, will open immediately, however. In the meantime Jim Barclay's injuries are coming along nicely and pitcher Art Calhoun has returned to town, after visiting his parents, and says his middle finger on his right hand, from which the nail was removed ten days ago, is about ready to use. So things are looking brighter on the Radio's horizon after all. Maybe the rain washed all of their troubles away.

Belleville's annual entry in the Canadian National Exhibition professional swim, Tommy Pedder, is hard at training these days. Tommy got himself a job heaving coal at the C.N.R. early this spring and claims to be in ship-shape condition already. He trains nightly in the Moira river above Corbyville dam and also in the lower waters of the Bay of Quinte. "You see this year the race is only for five miles. During the past three years I've been able to keep right up with the best of them for that distance, but owing to cold water conditions I was always forced out of the race. Now that the race is over the five mile route, I think I have a better chance with these long distance plungers" added Tommy after a stiff workout in the bay the other day.

KIWANIS KIDS DEFEATED BY OSHAWA TEAM

Score is 7-8 With Locals Improving as The Game Progressed

POOR UMPIRING

Plate Arbiter Made Two Calls, That Really Hurt

Belleville Kiwanis Juniors, entrants in the O.B.A.A. playdowns threw a scare into the Oshawa Juniors last night at the Fair Grounds, when they came from behind and nearly overcome a lengthy lead built up in the early innings. The final score was 7-8 in favor of Oshawa with the return game in Oshawa on Friday and the prediction was freely made, that the series would likely go three games. The Oshawa club was materially assisted in their win by Umpire Higgins, he making two bad calls, when the locals were in the throes of rallies. He called Bennett out at the plate when the catcher had not touched him with the ball yet, while he allowed Barnes to steal when he deliberately ran off the third base line for a distance of ten feet to avoid being tagged, the latter the teams to play the ninth innings in total darkness. Aside from the pastime, that it would be no game if the teams did not play out the regulation nine frames. At least the O.B.A.A. should provide umpires who at least know the rules although their eyesight may not be as keen as required in this pastime.

Even taking the mistakes away from the umpire, the locals should have cinched the pastime in their innings. Poor base running caused the downfall, when a player tried to score from second on a single after a fly ball had been shagged and by the time he reached third on a double. Players should at least pay attention to a coach for the simple directing can certainly be more than the one playing. Johnny Bawden was sent to the home plate, Coach Meagher believing his fast ball would prove plenty of trouble but the Oshawa kids smashed the fast one to all corners of the field and when it fared from playing softball, he having pitched five games in seven days he had no fault to find thing in his replacer, that could feel the Oshawa outfield. He was derricked after two were out in the fifth inning, Coach Kelleher, who relieved him, literally stood them on their collective heels. He did not allow a hit for the remainder of the pastime and some of them will be ready to back their opinion with his "hook". He curved ballsd them to both sides of the plate and they had his effort was wasted.

Braid on the other hand was lucky to escape with a win. He struck out nine but allowed ten hits and walked eight. Oshawa was the bad hole in the sixth, when he filled the bases with three walks in succession. Umpire came to his rescue and he escaped without further damage, after the locals pecked away at his offerings and in the fourth, eighth and ninth scored a run each. Runs came within one short of knotting the count. Oshawa scored one run in the first two frames, the second on Bennett's double and four were tallied on solid clouting. The seventh run was handed them on a platter by Higgins, Collins hit a double to score the first two runs of the game, while Bill Bennett drove in the others. Kidd was the big hitter of the locals, he getting out of three, while Gamble hit for three bases and one out trying to steal home, is honest. Both teams kicked in with a double killing but the locals and Oshawa in the ninth really hurt. The box score:

Displaying their most weird exhibition of baseball this season the Belleville intermediates dropped the first game of the Bay of Quinte intermediate play-off's to Picton Pirates "Blue Sox" by the score of 14 to 3 on Picton field yesterday. The Panning-led aggregation kicked in with no less than seven errors, a record for commission, while their errors of omission were equally as bad from the spectator's viewpoint.

The homesters blasted three local pitchers for a total of 19 blows including a circuit blow from the

Rorke Big Hitter

Roly Rorke, Picton's shortstop, was the big hitter of the day, when he had a perfect day at the bat, collecting two doubles and two singles out of four tries. Pete Cole, the home town initial sacker, followed in line with a mighty home run in the fatal sixth and a single. Prout had a double and a single, while McQuaide collected two one base blows as the homesters made merry and collected 13 safeties two one base blows as the homesters made merry and collected 13 safeties two one base blows as the homesters made merry and collected 13 safeties in all. Harry Morgan's two running catches in the "cow pasture" in the second and collecting the game deservedly, although Barriage's start of a two-by-play in the 1-hitter frame, proved sensational.

Two singles and a stolen base resulted in the homesters scoring in the second while two doubles and two singles, coupled with McKinnon's error, gave Picton four in the third. When Morgan dropped Prout's hand drive in the fifth Rorke scored, but in the sixth the Picton batting order batted around the inn and scored eight runs on four hits three errors and two walks, including Cole's mighty smash to deep left for a homer. This ended Picton's scoring. Belleville managed to keep away from the whitewash when they scored two in the eighth on three hits and a walk. In the ninth they also scored one more on two hits. Negotiations for the second game will be made by the locals in Belleville on Friday evening, are pending.

TORONTO LEAFS WIN FROM ROYALS

Error Paves Way For a Three Runs Rally in The Ninth

(By The Associated Press)

The league-leading Montreal Royals are flashing their best ball of the season but the burning pace of Buffalo Bisons is cutting into their lead.

The Royals have captured their last eight out of ten games and yet have seen their lead cut one full game by Bisons, now within 1½ games of the leaders. Buffalo has won their last 12 out of 13 games, their last seven in a row.

The Bisons chalked up their seventh straight at the expense of Rochester Red Wings as Ken Ash pitched steadily to notch up his 16th victory of the season. The score was 5-3.

Ollie Carnegie led the 12-hit attack on Tony Kaufmann, Red Wing hurler, as he belted his 36th homer of the campaign with a runner on base in the fifth inning.

An error by Second Baseman Eddie Montague of the Royals, in the ninth inning, paved the way for a three-run rally that routed Toronto Leafs a 5-2 victory over Montreal.

The game had been a see saw pitching duel between Jimmy Barton, of Leafs and Harry Smythe, each having turned nine batters.

Jack Larocca, Newark right-hander, dropped Syracuse Chiefs a game further behind Jersey City Royals and Bisons as he limited the Salt Kings to six hits in the first 8 innings for a 5-0 triumph.

Baltimore Orioles increased their hold on fourth place over Toronto as they took both ends of a doubleheader from Albany, 10-2 and 4-0.

SINISTER SHADOW

by JOHN GOODWIN

"Mitch the stropped point against Barton's stubble; ever that that letter—is that he's old. He died before you knew—that's to say before any of us knew, that Cosgrave dead." Brief pause. "Only last night between ten and eleven. That's our starting point. It's way he's what 'never learn any more about Rhel than we know now. And afterwards—that's another matter. I've set all the machinery working; my experience is that once started it doesn't take long to produce results."

"If he 's quit," said Brian, "you mean that's enough to presume him guilty?"

"Guilty of what, sir?" said Howe grimly. "Of murder, a murder? It would be the safest an' the simplest thing for everybody concerned. Couldn't fix it so we could bank on that."

He stopped short, as a step was heard in the passage; Mary Sunbittings tapped on the door and opened it, her eyes shining with suppressed excitement.

"Didn't know you'd got in here," she said to Howe. "There's a man wants to see you, sergeant. Knows somethin' about the murder."

"Knows something? That's what we want. Did he tell you what it is Mary?" said Howe.

"He seemed all excited. Won't see anybody but you."

"Send him up here." Howe smiled as he saw, his two companions sit up eagerly. "If every big case we get half-wits come to us with stuff that's no good. But I've a feeling," said Howe, "that this is going to be useful."

There was a shuffling of heavy boots, and a moment later a little man of about fifty appeared in the doorway, weather-worn and shabby. He wore an ancient khaki tunic corduroy trousers and muddy gaiters. He looked curiously ill at ease frightened. He glanced uneasily at Brian, and then addressed himself to Howe.

"About this murder of Squire Coote, Ben Coulter's my name. I'm shepherd an' caretaker to Farmer Brough up at Wendens, north of the old mine."

"That tell me Squire Coote's body was found on the line, an' that he was murdered. I hear you've arrested for some one that's missin'—gone west of airay. An' you've sent after this job."

"Mister—if I'm right in collin' you Mister—I've never had nothin' to do wi' the police an' didn't want to, I was out on the hill last night an' I see somethin' that was the queerest start ever came my way. I been thinkin' I ought to see the police. I didn't come sooner, because . . . well . . . because . . ." He stopped dead.

"Sit down, Ben and tell us now," said Howe pleasantly, "I want any news I can get about this case."

The man shuffled his feet.

"Before this lady's he said anxiously. "An' the gunnelman here?"

"Yes. This is Mr. Chalmers, Mr. Coote's cousin. The lady is interested too."

Ben Coulter hesitated. He had a curiously self-conscious, almost guilty air. He seated himself gingerly on the edge of a chair. Like a man on the defensive; he seemed to regret having come. He looked as if he was buried in the pocket of his old tunic, fumbling gently.

A shiver ran through Sonia. "Last night." the man had said. Here was an unexpected ray of light out of the darkness. His testimony might easily be fatal to Brian.

CHAPTER XXIII

"You going, Ben," said Howe. "If you know anything, I want it all. You're in good hands."

"I didn't think much about squire Coote," said Coulter, "cept he was up to no good. Some him with a bootstick once or twice, King's Elm is off my beat, see.

"I got back from Norchester marnin' about half-past nine last night; there was a lot o' thunder about. The master says to me, 'Ben get off with you an' shift them ewes down from the hill pasture, for there's storm brewin.' So I gets the dog an' goes. It was dark work, but I shifted your ewes safe down into the south fold.

"That's about half a mile or more above the ruins an' the railway, right up the hill side. Then I was done, I started back, goin' through the dew-pond where the sheep drink. There's a clump of rowan-trees near by the pond, an' I stopped under them a minute to fill my pipe. Now I never got it lit.

"I heard the dog give a growl; he was lookin' down the hill. I looked that, I've good eyes for see age, 'specially at night, an' I see somebody comin' up the path that leads from the railway. Nobody's got no right there, o' nights, cessin' our farm. This was him a sort o' shadder in the dark, but I could see he was a big man, an' he seemed in a hurry. The path is stony an' though he wasn't walkin' any too steady he didn't make no noise—like all the big man in boots would. But he was laughin'!

"I dunno why, Mister, but when I heard that it sort o' got me scared. He was pretty close to me, an' I never heard a man laugh like that. You wouldn't think any one would laugh, all by himself in the dark, with a storm comin' on, unless he was drunk, or a lunatic. He seemed to be swayin' about a bit.

"He hadn't seen me, an' I'd soon no didn't. I'm a little shaky, I could have smashed two like me, if he didn't like my company. I crouched down, an' he'd passed me I'd crouched down, an' we sat there under the bushes, mum as two mice, to let this chap go by.

"He'd just about passed me, way off on the path, when a shiny o' lightning came. I saw him for half a second as plain as day, quite plain. An' then all black again.

"Ah" said Howe. "Can you describe him? See his face?"

"Darkish sort of face, big nose. Had a sort of tarpaulin hat on, turned down all round so I couldn't see much on him; long tarpaulin coat below his knees, like sailors wear. He was in his socks. An' rubber boots that didn't make a noise. Not a bad lot for the weather that was comin'—he'd keep dry anyway."

Sonia held her breath, and her eyes narrowed. Barbel!

"Not a bad morning's work, shepherd," said Howe, picking up the great gun as unconcernedly as though it had been a pebble.

"A dandy start it is. When the bucket brought him up, I came near fallin' in the pond. D'mond—eh? I dunno much about 'em—don't like 'em little fal-lals I've seen in jewellery's windows. Thinks I there ain't diamonds as big as that—there can't be. But how could I tell? Wasn't much money—my money. Why should a chap drop a thing in a dew-pond that must be new, quite a farm? He could flat it up later on, same as I did, an' likely it was too dangerous to keep, if he'd been robbin' a house an' guessed the cops were after him . . . I couldn't make it out, either way.

"I was" replied the young officer. "I found the place." "Oh!" ejaculated Colonel Capell. "Where was it? Any signs of death?" "In a hollow scrub in the ground I ever saw, a bit inland. Narrow gorge. Saw the place all right, but couldn't find it again. There wasn't a sign of life about it; only could reach it or survive during the search.

"Wonder if the beast got the Lieutenant," mused Capell. He called two officers and with the assistance of the returned flier marked on the map the approximate location of the place which Thomson reported to have discovered. "It's a mighty rough country," remarked one officer. "I doubt if infantry could reach it or survive during the search.

"We can't leave a stone unturned until we have ascertained every measure to find that boy—or his body," said the Colonel. "Take motor lorries with rations and water. Detail a couple of planes also. Good luck." They saluted and departed. Already he almost hopeless search for their lost comrade.

Just before dark one evening, an almost exhausted flier entered the headquarters of Colonel Capell of the Royal Flying Corps and saluted. "Well, Thomson," said the superior, "what luck? The others have all returned. Never saw a thing of Lieutenant Barton's plane. I suppose you didn't pick up unless you were more successful."

"I was" replied the young officer. "I found the place." "Oh!" ejaculated Colonel Capell. "Where was it? Any signs of death?" "In a hollow scrub in the ground I ever saw, quite a bit inland. Narrow gorge. Saw the place all right, but couldn't find it again. There wasn't a sign of life about it; only could reach it or survive during the search.

The fourth annual reunion of the Way" family was held at Cobourg Beach, on Friday, Aug. 16th, when one hundred and fifty of the members were present. At one o'clock the family sat down to a basket lunch where a bountiful repast was enjoyed, accompanied by much social conversing and laughter. The tables were then cleared to be ready for the afternoon program followed. Mrs. Mocom of Campbellford opened with a reading, which was one of the outstanding sport of the program was the demonstration by the Masson Station on the subject an ant. Masson stated the vicinity Miss Ruby Masson stated the vicinity while doing all kinds of stunts were conducted by the members of her sister Shirley Masson gave a fine exhibition of dancing and was heartily encored. Mrs. Harold Reddick of Belleville sang a pretty solo and three sisters of the family were learned over to the family history. Jan. In the absence of the President, Mrs. Geo. Andrew, who is in Toronto attending the Grand Lodge of Orange, Mrs. Orvis presided over the meeting and was assisted by the Secretary, Mrs. E. Way. After the discussion of the minutes, new business was introduced.

Mrs. Fred Crewe in the chair to present the arranged program, which opened with a very excellent talk on the "Care of Infants". She talked on the care of infants in diet, cooking of cereals, the juice in which carrots, spinach and green beans have been cooked with a small quantity of vegetable steel, strained for the baby.

Care of the sick child. This requires care and attention of the ill illness itself but the ability to manage the child, during as it may seem such child is a law in itself. The child must be treated with gentleness and firmness. Firmness. He must know that he must obey. He must be taught to mind upon discipline and his ability to co-operate. The first thing to be gained is the confidence, respect and affection of the child. A sick child is more alone anything for one in whom he has confidence. Lose confidence and you have lost everything. Be confident and it is easily kept. Never deceive child sick or well, never promise them anything you do not intend to carry out. Even when giving medicine never tell them to believe it is something else. Tell him the truth, explain the reasons, give him confidence, and in this way he feels that he is a responsible individual. This is the securing his co-operation.

Always be sympathetic understanding, but never pity. If a mother spoils and pampers her child in health, how can she hope to conquer him during illness. Thus it is necessary not to rule with cruelty, but kindness combined with firmness even in health.

A birthday party for Crewe, lang pretty a lullaby song.

Mrs. Fred Golding of Ottawa was called on and she gave a pleasing talk, beginning with her privilege to visit in the beautiful country and she did not wonder why the children wanted to be out of doors from morning to night. Being so favored in such surroundings. A squirrel sits on the woodpile, a robin flies down from their nest pies, a toad makes his home in the yard and seems to understand when a human being stepped on, but having always escaped. She thought it a fine thing to teach children to love and appreciate the wonders of nature, rather than chasing or stoning them. Children are kind by nature, a natural cruelty, but this is not true, but as Science has taught us of the power to teach them to enjoy animals and birds, they find much pleasure in doing so. Above that, is otherwise denied them. It is surprising how the youngest can enjoy, that if nothing is done to harm them and children never lose interest in their surroundings.

The country has opportunities for development that are not found in the city, and the future happiness, as the child has time to notice, to think for themselves and a feeling of pleasure in the present time but a million dollars had been spent by the Federal Government. # CONSERVATIVES OF TWEED ASSEMBLE

Prominent Speakers in Riding Discuss Issues

Tweed, Aug. 21—An enthusiastic meeting was held in the auditorium at Tweed on Monday evening in the interest of Mr. W. R. Thomson as Federal Member for South Hastings. The attendance was not large but this is accounted for by the fact, that the date of the election is still nearly two months distant and the voters are not yet so interested in the matter as they will undoubtedly be in a few weeks.

Dr. J. A. Thompson was chairman as chairman of the gathering, which was addressed by several prominent Conservatives of Belleville, Deseronto and other parts of the riding. After a few introductory remarks the chairman called on Colonel Bidwell Bond for a band number.

Mr. George Ketcheson, official organizer for the campaign of 1935 was the opening speaker. He referred to the unfortunate organization meetings that had been held in various parts of the riding during the past few days. He urged the local organizers to get behind the ticket and the election of every poll in the municipality of Tweed.

Lieut.-Col. H. J. R. Graham of Deseronto, secretary of the Committee of Management, and Mr. Thomson and urged the local organization to immediately get busy in order to overcome this handicap to Mr. Thomson. He referred especially to the necessity of lining up the younger voters, many of whom are voting for the first time.

Mr. Thomson, the speaker, then landed Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett as Canada's leading statesman, and discussed briefly the many serious problems which Canada in common with other countries had to face in the past five years, chief among which was the opening of the Trent Canal to the present time but a million dollars had been spent by the Federal Government. No government has been fixed for the future. The late Premier and the Bennett administration has handled it well. Mr. Crawford Gordon, the prominent orator, then addressed the meeting.

Naming 17 Anonymous Animals Perplexes Children at N. Y. Zoo

Pencils Are Scarce, Zebra is Called 'Hot-Cha' And Buffalo 'Toots'

New York, Aug. 21—Manifold perplexities confounded children assembling the seventeen anonymous animals at the Central Park Zoo. The contest, which opened Friday, went into its first Sunday under bright skies. The zoo population youngsters from places as far apart as Binghampton, N. Y.; Bergen County, N. J., and the Bronx.

At opposite ends of the sunken enclosure for the seal pool, under carseals suggesting sidewalk cafes, they pored, puzzled, over the entry blanks signed by the Parks Department Commissioner Nicholas and, perhaps Gray-eyed Winifred Diskin, whose father, Thomas, is a police captain at the Kingsbridge police station, regarded the south pool. Lillian Gorman, blonde and sun-tanned, presided over the north station.

Roosevelt's Voice Matched By Face, Says Investigator

Clear Resonant Voice Accords With Sharply Defined Features

MATCHING FACES

New York, Aug. 21—Dr. Hiram D. McDowell, Professor of Speech at Teachers College, Columbia University, has had his voice types, just published, search that the vocal mechanism of President Roosevelt, the relationship of his mouth, throat and nostrils, is responsible for his "clear resonant and warm type of voice."

Matching faces and voices, after a series of experiments which Columbia College, Dr. McDowell found that "clear resonant voices belong to persons whose faces are clear-cut in type, such as that of President Roosevelt." Others who were "built for sound," she said, were Patrick Henry and Daniel Webster.

"A beautiful voice and not much brain behind it is the worst handicap the elocutionary voice," Dr. McDowell said. "The poor shows it off and thinks more of it than the nose he is trying to convey."

Declaring that speech is a vital part of man's social existence, she advised those who would be "harmonious and agreeable" to develop an ability to think in social terms. "Learn to like people, to be 'sociable' she urged. "Learn to like people, many different kinds of people. Don't be a snob, a prude, a prig, harmoniously developed, forward-looking man or woman is the ability to talk to many different kinds of people."

"Such ability comes from wide experience in living. It involves also the ability to listen as well as take a point of view quite different from your own. Such experience may possibly can to widen your outlook and add to your speech will improve."

Several of the last Eagles used to provide tests for children, were made public by Dr. McDowell. When a child could not say a word quickly without difficulty, she said, his speech was "out of gear."

Are our ears here?

Many a wit is not a whit less witter than Whittier.

The mend is not less important than the rend in a garment.

His suit showed spots of neat and cleanness.

Speech is as much a part of our personality as looks, according to Dr. McDowell. Some of the words used frequently and universally employed means of making a social

DROUGHT RUINED ANCIENT PEOPLE

Fall of Nation in West is Told to Geographic Society

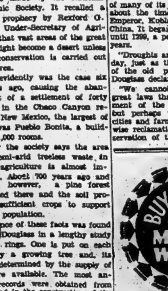
Washington, Aug. 21—Drought was blamed today for the decline and fall of an ancient American nation.

A determination by Dr. E. Douglass of the University of Arizona of weather prevailing centuries ago has been made by the National Geographic Society. It recalled a recent prophecy by Rexford G. Tugwell, Under-Secretary of Agriculture, that the time was coming when planes might become a desert unless proper conservation is carried out in the area.

Such evidently was the case six centuries ago, causing the abandonment of a settlement of forty houses in the Kayenta section of Arizona, the largest of which was Pueblo Bonita, a building of 112 rooms.

Today the society says the area is a semi-arid treeless waste in which agriculture is almost impossible. Ruins of houses and earlier, however, a pine forest flourished there and the soil produced enough crops to support a large population.

Evidence of these facts was found by Dr. Douglass in a lengthy study of tree rings. One is put on each year by a growing tree and, its width determined by the supply of moisture available. The most recent records were obtained from logs used in the construction of the pueblos.



Some of the old logs overlap in age with living trees and series of rings from the two, dating back 1,200 years, can be matched. "The old logs," Dr. Douglass said, "and the others still older so that yearly rings may be counted backward for 1,200 years.

Dr. Douglass this determined that wet years and dry years occur in cycles with a major drought occurring once every 23 years and minor droughts happening in the intervals. His work in part corroborates findings made by Dr. Ellsworth Abbot, secretary of the Smithsonian Institution, who recently announced new evidence of a twenty-three year cycle of weather caused evidently by increases and decreases in sun spots.

The drought which caused the abandonment of the large Indian settlements about 1300 A.D. in northern China, 11 began in 1276 and lasted until 1299, a period of twenty-three years.

"Droughts are wrong have today, just as they did in the days of the old pueblo people," Dr. Douglass declared.

"We cannot change nature's great laws that govern the movements of the sun and the atmosphere, but perhaps we can protect our cities and farms to some extent by wise reclamation projects and preservation of the forest cover."

Read In Wheat

Word has been received from Mr. Albert Empey, who left Toronto a month at his old home in Durham, Ontario, that he is now motoring through the farming district of the Red River Valley in Minnesota, Dakota and Western North Dakota. He says they found that the rust had nearly ruined the wheat, but it will only be about 25 per cent. normal. As they came into Western North Dakota, the wheat was chiefly a variety called Marquis, a soft wheat which does not rust. North and west of the boundary, the wheat is almost a new variety, called Reliance, which is hard and ripens in windrows to burn. They saw the Marquis Silver, Julie Haydon, Rosita Moreno, Hope Williams, Ginger Rogers and Dorothy Ridges.

"The Scoundrel"

Last Times Tonight to See Noel Coward's First Picture

In spite of the heat and unheatrical weather prevailing in Belleville, it is quite evident that the people of the town know their pictures and the luminous of their literary world. For large crowds have attended the motion picture debut of Noel Coward in "The Scoundrel" now showing at the Capitol Theatre.

The consensus of opinion among those witnessing "The Scoundrel" is that it rates with the finer productions that have been shown here in Belleville the past season, and it realizes the first successful debut of this world-famous dramatist. It is a brilliant and skilful treatment of the New York's smart set and its people, too wise to love and too forward upon the art of literary Casanova who makes many conquests but finds love. Mr. Coward plays the part of Clive Dexter, a sly supported by Martin Sheper, Julie Haydon, Rosita Moreno, Hope Williams, Ginger Rogers and Dorothy Ridges.

AT THE BELLE

"Going Highbrow"

Guy Kibbee, Zasu Pitts, Bette Davis and Genevieve Tobin are Now Twin-Bill

"Going Highbrow", a rollicking Warner Bros. comedy, which is scheduled to open the Belle attraction at the Belle tomorrow and Friday, matinee and evening, is based on the stage play "Social Parasites", by Ralph Spence.

There is an all star comedy cast, which includes Guy Kibbee, Zasu Pitts, Edward Everett Horton, Rose Alexander, June Marlel, Gordon Wescott and Judy Canova.

Spencer's play was replete with amusing complications and ribtickling dialogue, which is said to have been transferred to the screen with even more laughs.

The plot centres about a bucolic Kansas farmer who suddenly rises to riches by the discovery of natural gas and his wife immediately goes highbrow and wants to crash into New York's Four Hundred.

Guy Kibbee, who is a simple assuming soul, engages a butler, who promises to introduce them to society through an impoverished artist, who is played by Hugh Herbert. They adopt a waitress as a lady friend and she plays a big scoring out party.

Although the picture is strictly comedy, romance enters the scene when the son of the impoverished artist falls in love with one of the pretty waitress. This winds up in a hilarious fashion with much scheming and unusual climax.

Guy Kibbee as the type of the Kansas farmer who suddenly gets rich, but doesn't know what to do with his money, gives a fine performance. He plays the part of his socially ambitious wife. Zasu Pitts, as usual, is the bungling pathetic maid, who gets everything mixed up.

The supporting cast is graced by Rose Alexander and lovely June Marlel.

"Front Page Woman," Dramatic

"Front Page Woman," Warner Bros. fast-moving comedy-drama, which opens at the Belle tomorrow, is a romance of newspaper publication on the screen.

Bette Davis, according to the moment the heavy dramatic roles she has portrayed in the past, and Frank McHugh, the comedian actor, are shared in the picture, which includes a supporting cast comprising popular players such as Roscoe Karns, Whitford Kane, Walter Walker, Harold Huber and others. Dave Appolon and his Band and the pert "Broadway Scenes" will also be screened.

To Preview Tonight

"A Night at the Ritz" will be previewed for the first time at the Belle tonight. A swell show.

Giornale d'Italia Warns That Sanctions Mean War

(By Harold P. Braman)
(Associated Press Staff Writer)
London, Aug. 22 (AP)—The cabinet decided today, in an emergency meeting, to take a strong stand in the League of Nations for economic and financial action against the aggressor in the dispute between Italy and Ethiopia, if such action is found necessary as a last resort.

The cabinet decided to make new efforts to settle that dispute peacefully through diplomatic channels and at Geneva, and joint action by other nations with Great Britain in the event of aggression will only be proposed if all peace efforts fail.

Gesture of Peace

It has been recognized all along the temporary arms shipment ban affected Ethiopia more than Italy. The Ministers decided to continue it temporarily for the purpose of making a gesture of peace still waits to settle the affair peaceably.

However, it was learned the arms question will be subject to constant consideration and the ban may be modified at any time.

The cabinet decided there was no reason to change the well-known attitude of the British government toward the League of Nations and collective security.

The decisions were reached today at the close of a three and one-quarters hour meeting during which the Ministers solemnly reviewed the whole question. The United States viewpoint, as indicated by yesterday's neutrality resolution of the Senate in Warszington, was considered but kept in the background.

No Arms Here Yet

The cabinet remained firmly opposed to singlehanded action as far as sanctions against the nations are concerned in order seriously to threaten British strongh old as the policeman of European peace. Great Britain will continue to work with the League for peace efforts.

The cabinet is of "very close mind as to the gravity of the dete." That was the description of the four and three-quarter hour conference made by Ramsay MacDonald, Lord President of the Council.

London Deputation Waits Upon Premier and Welfare Chief

Toronto, Aug. 22.—(CP)— Policy of the Ontario Government in relation to relief will be defined fully before the first of next week, Premier Hepburn and Hon. David Croll, Minister of Welfare, today told a London deputation headed by Mayor Wenger.

In the meantime the Ministers laid down two principles that will be followed:

In the first place there is to be a reduction in municipal grants and the non-relief policy for single employable men will be unchanged.

The work and no relief was the dictum.

"We are going to give you a lump sum of money and you can blow it as you like," said Mr. Croll. "We will recommend you raise the present system of cash relief under the reduced scale."

Reduction in Grants

Premier Hepburn told the deputation only sheer necessity forced cabinet to make a reduction in relief grants. He said it was estimated $12,000,000 was the limit that can be raised under the coming Provincial income tax plan.

"We won't put all of that in the Treasury. We will share up to the limit of our ability with the municipalities," he said.

Both Ministers emphasized of the province, bearing already the largest share of relief burden, went bankrupt the municipalities would have no place to turn.

Cuts in the schedules have been made only as an economic necessity.

Said the Premier: "Some men are going to suffer one lota from our new policy. It is the extravagant municipalities that are going to feel the pinch."

The maximum per capita relief cost of all Ontario municipalities is reported at $10.30 by the Minister of Welfare.

ACCIDENT IN WOODS

Official Rome Knows No Details of The Accident

Addis Ababa, Aug. 22 (AP)—Baron Muzzi Falconi, an Italian Consul, was in a hospital today suffering with bullet wounds and Ethiopian authorities alleged he shot himself accidentally while on a hunting trip. The Italian legation termed the shooting an accident.

Accompanied by his wife, daughter of Sir Sidney Barton, the British Minister to Ethiopia, the Consul was on his way by caravan to his post at Debre Marcos in Godjam Province. The alleged accident occurred in Surullo Forest. One of the bullets struck and injured the Baron's lungs. When the shots were fired, he was examining a revolver. Doctors said they were hopeful of his recovery.

The alleged accident caused excitement in Addis Ababa in view of the strained situation between Italy and Ethiopia.

Ethiopia Orders Probe

The Ethiopia government ordered an enquiry.

Baron and Baroness Falconi left Addis Ababa last Tuesday on their journey to the northwest. The Baroness said they camped Wednesday on Bulloula Plain.

The Baroness went into the forest, she said, leaving her husband sitting on a rock. When she returned she found him lying in a pool of his blood.

She added the Ethiopian servants told her Baron Falconi died by "accident."

The wife was given to understand the Consul was practicing with his revolver. He pulled the trigger and the weapon failed to fire. He turned the gun around to examine it and it exploded.

Rome, Aug. 23 (CP-Havas) — Official circles here said they have no information on the shooting and wounding of Baron Falconi, Italian Consul at Debra Marcos. Ethiopia, so could not say whether it was an attempted assassination or accident.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 22.—(AP) —Anson G. Carter, prominent Fort Worth, Texas, oilman, one of the intimate friend of Will Rogers for twenty years, disclosed today the humorist-actor's will to two favorite organizations amounted to thousands of dollars.

Carter said he was with Rogers in Fort Worth in 1915 when he started broadcasts for an oil company. The comedian, he said, received $50,000 for his appearances on the air—and of the sum gave $25,000 to the Salvation Army.

In 1930 when Rogers' publisher recalled, he raised over $275,000 for the Red Cross, Carter said, almost for the benefit of humanity. Will paying the expense of the tour, over $12,000, personally."

Monkeyshines at Zoo Serious, One Monkey Endangers Power Line

Massapequa, N.Y., Aug. 22.—(AP) —Weary attendants took stock today of one monkeyshines at Frank Bucks' Zoo on the Sunrise Highway.

Of the 175 Rhesus monkeys which marched to freedom in Long Island's Woodcocks yesterday (he keepers reported—dead: one. He tried monkey-shining on the third rail of the Long Island railroad.

Captured: two. They thought they were a match for the electrified policeman.

Surrendered: An uncertain number, probably about thirty. They got a quart of ice cream and coaxed back into Long Island's rhesus residence for Montana.

Still at large: About 140.

Led by "Al Capone" — the nasty little fellows had marched single file to freedom on a plank which a workman had laid across the moat that kept more than 500 monkeys on Long Island's Monkey Island.

Shoppers and shopkeepers were on guard and the Long Island railroad patrolled its track after the shatterhorn hoot stopped a train.

From nearby Massapequa came a report that one monkey, mounting a pole to high tension wires, was interrupting the power until a keeper was dispatched to cope with the situation.

Offers in compromise, consisting of bananas, were rejected today by one group of the insurgents who executed a flank movement on the zoo from across the railroad tracks.

In reply, the Zoo administration called for stern measures in the form of fire ladders when the rebels refused to disperse.

A representative of the Zoo, a golden Gibbon monkey "with a voice like an opera diva"—or so the Zoo said—will be sent to the woods tonight or, treat, with the monkeys still at large in an endeavor to obtain their surrender.

From Frank Buck himself, en route to his country, came disturbing news—he is bringing back 2,000 more monkeys of the same strain as those who partook in the rebellion.

World Bows in Grief As Last Rites are Paid Will Rogers, Wiley Post

Body of Interpid Flier Wiley Post in State Capitol Rotunda

FELLOW PILOTS TRIBUTE

Blossoms Strewn From Airplanes at Capitol Entrance

Oklahoma City, Aug. 22 (AP)—Oklahoma bid Wiley Post a sad farewell today.

A place of honor was prepared in the rotunda of the State Capitol for the body of the intrepid flier to lie from 10 a.m. until noon (Central Standard Time).

Gov. Marland and other dignitaries chose noon to pay their respects to the world flier and stratosphere explorer who fell to his death with Will Rogers in Alaska just a week ago.

Funeral services were held at the First Baptist Church at 1 p.m. They were brief and simple.

Tribute from Air

Post's fellow pilots paid final tribute to him as his body was taken from the hospital to the church at noon. National Guard planes droned overhead in "missing man" formation as the funeral cortege began moving toward the south entrance of the Capitol.

The body will be placed in a crypt in Fairlawn cemetery to remain until the widow decides whether his final resting place will be Arlington cemetery or Oklahoma City.

Gen. Buzner Attends

President Roosevelt directed an officer of the General's rank to represent him at the funeral. Brig. Gen. E. W. Buzner, commandant of the Field Artillery School at Fort Sill, was selected.

Wiley Griffin and Jimmy Mattern who unsuccessfully attempted to break Post's globe circling record arrived here yesterday for the services.

Most downtown stores gave notice they would remain closed during the afternoon.

Post's body was returned here last night from Marietta, Okla., home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Post.

Canceled in Rural Church

Flanked by a military guard of honor, it lay in state yesterday in the little Landmark Missionary Baptist Church where friends and acquaintances who live in the little farming community passed by the casket.

Accompanying the body was Joe Crosson, the "second best pilot in Arctic," who flew the remains of Post and Rogers from Point Barrow to Seattle. He had known Post well and had assisted him in his record-breaking solo flight around the world.

FAMILY SERVICE

Eulogy Pronounced By George Jessel at Rogers Home Lot

Glendale, Calif., Aug. 22 (AP) —Massed salute in salute deep on three miles of Forest Lawn Memorial Park, thousands of automobiles bringing persons from everywhere in Southern California for a final glimpse of Will Rogers created a major traffic jam before the big iron gates to the cemetery swung open early today.

The crowd began assembling at 8.15 a.m. Many persons brought their coffee and sandwiches and sat in their automobiles.

A special detail of 600 policemen of the first squad were directed to the parking.

When the gates swung open at 9 a.m., the thousands began filing into the cemetery in orderly manner.

90 Pace Casket a Minute

Rogers' casket was placed a short distance from the main gate. It was situated near a small pond, at one end of which cascaded a jet of water.

Approach of the crowd to the main gates was in three roped lanes. Spectators filed by the flower-banked casket at the rate of 90 a minute.

No one was allowed to touch the casket and the floral piece was placed at the base of the bier, floats clamp with a single flower. Others brought costly wreaths.

The crowd, composed preponderantly of women, numbered about 30,000.

Los Angeles, Aug. 22.—(AP)—It was time for Will Rogers' formal exit today from the earthly scene he ruled so long as master of philosophy and wit.

A few more than 100 relatives and friends were bidden to private funeral services by the family. Among them were the personal representatives of President Roosevelt, Admiral William T. Tarrant and Commander Herbert A. Jones.

The Hollywood Bowl, seating 25,000 and the Community Presbyterian Church where friends and acquaintances who live in the little farming community passed by the casket.

Accompanying the body was Joe Crosson, the "second best pilot in Arctic," who flew the remains of Post and Rogers from Point Barrow to Seattle. He had known Post well and had assisted him in his record-breaking solo flight around the world.

12,000 Theatres Dark For Two Minutes During Rogers Service

Hollywood, Aug. 22 (AP)—Almost 12,000 theatres in all parts of the world will be dark for two minutes during the services, The Society Club of Minneapolis said today. Paul honored Rogers by arranging a theatre program and in the city of Ames, Iowa, Carillons were to toll while at the Iowa State College silent tribute was planned.

At the request of the family the casket was unopened as Rogers' body lay in state from 7 a.m. until noon within the gate of Forest Lawn Memorial Park in Glendale. And at their wish the private funeral

City and District News

ALLEGED COMMUNISTS TARRED, FEATHERED

Santa Rosa, Calif., Aug. 21.—(AP) —Two men were tarred and feathered and three others ordered to leave town by self-styled vigilantes who constituted an all night series of raids against alleged communists in Sonoma County.

The two tarred and feathered in an outgoing district said they were Jack Green, Santa Rosa commercial artist and Solomon Nitzburg, rancher at Two Rocks near Petaluma, whose residence was the scene of disorder and gunfire.

TRIP TO CLAYTON DELIGHTFUL OUTING

Over thirty members of the Belleville Kiwanis Club with their wives and guests enjoyed an outing to Clayton, New York, on Wednesday afternoon. The party left early and took a Yacht Club Line boat from Kingston for the delightful sail down the river and through the Thousand Islands, arriving at Clayton, dinner was served in Gregory's restaurant and a half hour more than an hour was enjoyed before the return journey. Weather out-down the attendance considerably, many of the members arriving at home before the rain storm was not over. The party, however, had most delightful weather for the outing.

TRAFFIC OFFICER RETURNS TO OTTAWA

Motorcycle Patrolman Sam Irvine of the O.P.P. today received an emergency call to return to Ottawa and reaching the motorcycle patrol escort that is to accompany the ace-to-Ottawa trekkers upon their return march to Toronto. Constable Irvine left his Belleville detail early today Ottawa bound, where he and other motorcycle constables will start the long trek assisting the marchers along the highway. The return march from Ottawa to Toronto will start one day this morning, early, press dispatches stated.

LUCK TOKENS GROW ON LOCAL LAWN

If there is any luck in four leaf clovers, Mrs. Wm. Kinsella of 34 St. Paul Street, this city, believes he should be entitled to his share. But he will do further that that and provide real five-leafed clovers upon demand. Proof of record rains the lawn of his St. Paul Street home and contains fine specimens of the latter leaf.

30 DEGREES RELIEF FROM HEAT WAVE

A drop of exactly 30 degrees in temperature in this district during the past 24 hours, from a record high and humid mark of 79 above registered at 11 o'clock last night to a low of 49 above this morning brought actual shivers and chills to an unprepared population. Today's fresh breezes and markedly lower temperatures ended the last two week's sticky heat wave.

P. E. COUNTY MAN RECEIVES HONORS

James H. Stitt, born in Picton, and former well-known resident of Prince Edward County, who has been a Conservative member for Selkirk, Manitoba, since 1930 has been appointed Commissioner of the Civil Service Commission, of Canada. He succeeds Chas. H. Bland who has been appointed Chairman of the Commission.

A seven foot exhibit of Sudan grass grown by Mr. R. Boland of this district is dwarfed by a display of the same variety of fodder 9 feet in height and grown by Donald Hawley, R.H. Hepaboo.

STIRLING SELECTED AS MEETING PLACE

Keating's County swine and calf club meet will be held in Stirling on Wednesday, September 18, according to announcement today by the Ontario Department of Agriculture. Northumberland county will show at Wooler on September 25, Prince Edward County at Ameliasburg on September 26 and Peterborough County at Norwood on October 9.

TO SHUT DOWN QUARRY FRIDAY

Stone crushing carried on for the past two or three weeks in the north side city quarry will be completed on Friday evening, according to a statement by the local department of public works today. The work of crushing the stone for the city's stock piles had provided jobs for some 9 or 10 men recruited from the relief lists.

DIVER EXPLORES BOTTOM OF BAY

A professional deep water diver attired in the conventional clumsy suit and lead-weighted boot soles is today exploring the bottom of the Bay of Quinte opposite the old Rechenville dock in search of a broken hull which, it is believed, that have lately become a menace to east and west water traffic. The diver sent from Prescott by the Dominion government is working from the dock of the government buoy carrier, Grenville, which entered port here yesterday. Complaints of boat owners over the obstruction led to the work being performed.

CAR TURNS OVER NEAR HAROLD

Occupants All of Stirling Shaken up But Not Injured

When the automobile in which they were riding turned completely over in the east ditch on Highway No. 14 at the village of Harold early today, four occupants of the vehicle narrowly escaped injury. Mrs. Wm. Armstrong and received numerous abrasions about the arms and lower limbs, when the driver of the automobile to turn over were—Gerald Armstrong, Glen Allen, Gordon Scott, Bernice Maloney and Annie Maloney, all of Stirling.

According to Provincial Police, who investigated, the accident was caused when another automobile being driven in the same direction, southbound by Malcolm McMillan, fifteen of Springbrook, suddenly swerved across the highway and directly into the path of the oncoming Armstrong car. Further investigation by the police disclosed that McMillan had previously passed the Armstrong car and then slackened off his speed, but when Mr. Armstrong allegedly attempted to pass the front vehicle again, McMillan suddenly turned slightly to the right in Harold, striking the Armstrong car forcing it into the ditch, where it turned over. According to police statements today, McMillan, failed to remain at the scene of the accident. Charges will in all probability follow.

The Armstrong car was badly damaged during the accident and the four occupants so miraculously escaped injury is mystifying, as windows, doors and the top of the vehicle were all badly crushed and crumpled, police stated.

ARRESTED BY NAZIS

Gerhard Moal, a London business man who is in the custody of civil police at Munich accused of being pro-Jewish. He was arrested in his father's house in Munich under the charge of writing of untrue stories harmful to Germany," the detailed charge however, reveals that he spoke against anti-Semitic propaganda in Germany in the private house of an acquaintance.

The President's Message

My fellow officers and I are proud of this year's Fair program. Nothing has been overlooked to make it the best ever. We invite all the residents of Belleville and district to spend Fair Week with us at Belleville. We'll do our best to make the week a memorable one for supreme enjoyment. If you cannot stay all week stay as long as you can.

WALTER ASELSTINE, President

SUPER-ARBITRATOR

NICHOLAS POLITIS.

Nicholas Politis, ABOVE, of Greece has been named super-arbitrator in the Italo-Ethiopian conflict. His formal appointment was deferred because of Italian objections. Politis will serve with the Italo-Ethiopian commission which for months has vainly attempted a peace settlement of the dispute. He is former president of the League of Nations council.

LODGE MEMBERS ENJOY OUTING

White Shrine of Jerusalem Picnic at The "Cedars"

Members of the White Shrine of Jerusalem to the number of 75, which included friends of the organization, held their annual picnic on Wednesday afternoon at the "Cedars" near Camnifton. The day was opened with a dinner served under the welcoming shade, while the afternoon was devoted to a sport's program in which everyone took part. Later a buffet luncheon was served and the evening enjoyed by dancing at the pavilion. The party all report a splendid afternoon, and the "Cedars" an ideal spot to hold such an outing. The winners of the various events were:

Girls' race—Sybil McKay.
Boys' race—Donald Marsh.
Knee Ball Race—Ruth Doig.
Plate Race —Miss Helen Doran and J. Lapp.
Ball Throwing—Lois Liddle, Mr. George Darrah.
Shoe Kicking Contest — Mrs. McKay.
Pop Drinking Contest—Mrs. Flossie Smith and Arthur Nayler.
Obstacle and Comical Race — Mrs. Lillian Law and Mr. Frank Wesson.
Pan Hitting Contest—Mrs. Flossie Smith and J. Lapp.
Sewing Button—Mrs. Essie Nayler and Frank Wesson.
Bag Punching Contest—Won by Mrs. Smith's team.

TWEED WINS 2ND PLAY-OFF GAME

Tweed—Under the inspiration of three-hit pitching by Bill Gowrell, Gordon Steel Works defeated Redenerville from further participation in the Eastern Ball play-offs in winning the second game at that place by the one-sided score of 17 to 3.

The start of the game may be told in one word — bunts. Manager Quinn instructed his men to bunt the opposition diney and the first six runs in the first inning batted safely—aided by two errors by Dempsey on the hill-top for the home team. Four runs crossed the plate in this frame and as events ultimately showed, the game was won and lost right there.

Tweed added three additional markers in the second with two down, Brandon timely batting driving in Rollins and Meraw. Three others were added in the fourth, when with one down Merraw tripled, and subsequent hits by Simpson and Gowrell completed the scoring and a bad muff by Thompson in right field on Gowrell's fly allowed three men to score. The seventh was an almost duplicate of events of the fourth, a cluster of three tallies again being registered. Two other runs were chalked up in the ninth.

Several batting averages were augmented by the Gordon Steel Works Sinclair was the only player who failed to hit safely, Gowrell leading with two or more hits. Rollins and Merraw helped themselves to four hits apiece and Quinn and each had three. Merraw scored four runs, Quinn, Gowrell and Tummon three each, and Gowrell and Tummon each stole a pair, Gowrell four in two games equally between them.

J. Farley, H. Farley, Dempsey were the only batsmen to solve Gowrell's delivery. The last triple was the seventh, and the only two were down scored the only run on Gowrell's wild pitch. The other man reached third base, Weese getting credit for the hit and error. Redenerville filled the sacks with two down. Only two balls bases with two down. Only two balls were driven to the outfield by Redenerville, Broad and Tummon making the outs.

May, left fielder, of the Redenerville team made spectacular catch on Tummon's hard hit in the sixth, driving in three runs and after rolling over two or three times after making the catch. H. Farley starred at first base and Weese at second. Tummon starred for Smith for the only double play of the game.

Gowrell retired nine on strikes and Dempsey ten. The batting lineups and the walk of the game by Orr. Gowrell fielded his position perfectly, handling all four at first.

By virtue of winning this series Tweed advances to the second round to meet Omemee or Campbellford on Monday.

Umpires— Wallbridge, Madoc, at the plate; Ethier, Belleville, on bases.

The line-ups!—

Redenerville— Farley 2b; H. Farley 1b; Wannamaker ss; Dempsey p; Walkam cf; Russell lf; Thompson rf; Taylor rf; May lf; Weese 2b.

Gordon Steel Works— Rollins 2b; Gordon ss; Simpson c; Merraw 3b; Simpson c; Broad lf; Quinn 1b; Sinclair rf; Orr as; Tummon cf.

POLICE COURT

Carman E. Weldon, 16-year-old Tweed youth, appeared in the local police court, held before F. B. Deacon, J.P., this morning charged with the theft of a bicycle, the property of Robert Amant of this city. Weldon was not asked to plead, his case being enlarged for 24 hours.

Weldon, it is alleged by local police, tried to dispose of Amant's bicycle to County Constable Jas. Lovelace at Bloomfield yesterday. Becoming suspicious P. C. Lovelace investigated the matter and later held the youth until Police Constable Officer Fred Izard proceeded to Bloomfield, where he not only identified the "bike", but arrested Weldon on a charge of theft. The vehicle, valued at $25.00 was offered for sale for five dollars, it is stated by police.

Two transients arrested by R. C. M. P. while trespassing on the right-of-way of the C.N.R. and were trying to get their prospect-

BELLEVILLE'S IMPROVED FAIR

Outlook for the 1935 annual exhibition of the Belleville Agricultural Society which opens here next Tuesday as a Class B. fair is very bright according to the statement of the Secretary, R. H. Ketcheson which appears in the news columns today.

The board has been greatly encouraged by the demonstration of interest in the show and predicts a bumper attendance.

This year Belleville fair attains the highest ranking it has enjoyed in history, in being one of the exhibitions honored by being classified just below the greatest exhibitions held in Ontario.

The fair next week will show clearly the signs of recovery which has overtaken agriculture in all its branches and is touching the various industries.

The need now is the greatest attendance in history to mark the auspicious occasion. In honour of the event an official of the Ontario Agricultural Association is to attend and declare the exhibition open.

THE FUTURE PLANE

Will that airplane be developed which will protect fliers against such tragedy as met Wiley Post's airship in the Alaskan country last week? Will planes be so constructed in such a way as to eliminate some of the hazards to which they are subject today?

Is the shape of the plane definitely set? That is, is there no other way of building the ship?

It must be realized that the plane is but an infant yet and with modern science and invention will see radical change in the years to come.

It has a great future. Will Rogers saw it in its first romantic days of danger, but it may become probably less dangerous through modification of construction when unrevealed laws are brought to light. Though the tireless Wiley Post strove like a Titan to open up stratospheric flight, currentless, serene, and did not quite succeed, it is clear he has pointed the way as the Columbus of flying in the upper layer.

Neither aviation nor anything else is static. Tireless and versatile mankind will not leave things alone. First it was Daedalus who tried in vain, to fly by fastening with wax, wings to his shoulders and then for centuries nothing was done beyond development of the balloon until the heavier than air machine was invented. Who dares say there are but two stages in flying—the daedalian stage, a complete failure, but showing possibilities, and the present plane?

TAX SALE NOTICES

Many times the question has been brought up of the publication of notice of tax sales by municipalities in the Ontario Gazette where few people ever look for information. Very few offices receive copies of the Gazette and for the bulk of the people publication in that journal has little or no publicity value.

Newspapers published in the municipalities where tax sales take place feel that revenue from this source legitimately belongs to the papers which can give the fullest publicity to the sales. The Sault Ste. Marie Star points out that the Ontario Gazette is a government advertising sheet and unless the law is not entitled to the newspaper use of the mails. "It has practically no subscribers and gets money for the advertising tax and in no way is giving any sort of value to the unfortunates who are forced to use its columns to advertise property on which they cannot pay taxes. Some racket!"

Ottawa Journal in comment on this says that "the law says tax sales must be advertised in the official Ottawa Gazette, which as the Star says, nobody ever sees. Municipalities then can advertise in the local newspapers if they so desire but by the time the Ontario Governments bills are paid there is a disinclination to spend more even in publicity that would bring together possible buyers of property and those in distress over tax bills.

"Attention has been called many times and by many newspapers to this unjust provision of the law, but still it stands in the way of any real effort to find a decent market for property covered by tax sales. Ontario does not need revenue so desperately that it must continue to exact this toll from municipalities, to block useful publicity that would be an advantage to those property-owners who must see their property sold under the hammer to the highest bidder."

As the Ontario Intelligencer pointed out some time ago in commenting on this matter, the time has come for the removal of this unfair provision. Publication in local newspapers has two advantages, it helps local industry in the newspapers, and it gives publicity to the sale. According to the present system the person who purchases property at a tax sale is aided and abetted by the lack of public knowledge and it is to his advantage that as few as possible shall turn up at the sale as bidders for property.

PARIS STENOGS REFUSE TO TYPE LOVE LETTERS

(A number of shorthand typists in Paris have announced that they will no longer take down the love-letters of their employers, as this is beneath their dignity.)

Cherie, do not give way to fear,
Nor disappointed be
Lest you in future should not hear
So frequently from me.
Despite my secretary's stand,
Despite her ultimatum,
My feelings are unaltered and
I'll do my best to state 'em.

The needful time I'll set apart
And sedulously seek
To send you duly all my heart
On paper twice a week:
Nay, further, starting from today,
You'll find me iterating
Those foolish nothings lovers say
But do not like dictating.

That secretary's help I'll wipe
Completely off the slate,
And let the girl confine her typs
To "yours of even date";
But when my letters come, designed
To set your heart a-swelling,
Don't blame your Harold if you find
They're wonky in their spelling.

BELLEVILLE FAIR OPENS TUESDAY, continuing until and including Friday. The officers have devoted a lot of time and energy toward making the 1935 exhibition the best ever, and all that remains now for complete success is the generous and loyal co-operation of every citizen of Belleville and district. This is not a fair for Belleville people only but represents the entire district and it can only be as big as the people who support it. Wholehearted support makes for success. Half-hearted support and hurtful criticism only weakens the Fair. There are things, of course, that can be improved and will be as time goes on, and constructive criticism is welcomed by the officers of the Fair at any time. Your presence at Belleville Fair with a smiling face is the best contribution any one can give to this institution which reflects the life and work of the community.

A CHAMPAGNE SELLER PULLED A PUBLICITY STUNT at the fashioable Savoy Hotel in London, England, which will go down in history as one of the most spectacular and expensive advertising freaks ever staged. The champagne salesman was a Yankee who wished to do something no one had ever dared do. He invited a large number of guests, potential customers, and reserved a large part of the Savoy Hotel including the courtyard. The wines and the eats prepared were magnificent but the big surprise was the courtyard which was filled with water to make a minature Venice. Then in the bright sun the hilarious guests sailed slowly and a Venetian gondola slowly entered propelled by a tall robust gondolier, singing in so-so but ever sung voice, in or out of Venice. The singer and gondolier was Caruso, engaged at an enormous fee to perform the first cabaret turn in his life. The whole banquet was a spectacular that the newspapers gave it almost unlimited publicity and the champagne salesman was satisfied he received ample returns for his expenditure.

WHILE THE DIONNE QUINTUPLETS will not appear at Belleville Fair there will be a splendid showing of the youth and beauty of Bay of Quinte district in the Baby Show where the future citizens of this city and country under and over six months will receive their friends and help to make history for Belleville Fair.

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

AUGUST 22ND, 1915.

Mr. P. A. Tripp, Grier Street, has left for Saskatoon where he will spend two months with his son and daughter.

Miss Margaret O'Connor of Marmora has the honor of calculating the largest fish taken from Crows Lake so far this season, she having caught a muskinonge weighing over 18 pounds and measuring 42 inches in length.

Mr. John Doran of New York City is home on a visit.

Lieut. John Downey of the 59th Battalion was home for a few days recently.

John Kennedy and Joseph Fox of the 59th Battalion were in the city yesterday.

Mr. and Mrs. Earl Reid of Detroit are the guests of Mr. and George Campbell, James Street.

30 Years Ago

AUGUST 22ND, 1905.

About the last visitors here for the Old Boys' Reunion will leave us today in the persons of Mr. Frank Lewis, Mrs. Lewis and Master Griffin Lewis of Vancouver, B.C. The two latter have been here for three months.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Wegman and Misses Aggie and Annie Fotis of Rochester, N.Y. are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Fotis, Grove Street.

Mr. A. McFee of this city is at present in San Francisco, California, and is remembering his friends here with picture post cards.

The Rev. J. P. Wilson, pastor of Bridge Street Methodist Church, is spending a few days with friends in Kingston.

Mr. J. S. Dyer has returned home after spending several weeks at Port Carling.

40 Years Ago

AUGUST 22ND, 1895.

Mr. H. Corby's steam yacht Oriola has been sold to Mr. W. L. Hogg of Montreal, and Jack Robins is fitting her out for the trip to that city.

Officer Stoneberg is the sporting member of the police force. This morning armed with a piece of iron he killed a mink which was in pursuit of two ducks in the river above the upper bridge.

James Grant, the three year old son of Mr. John Grant of the Queen's Hotel, fell into the bay last evening near Mr. Thos. Stewart's wharf, where he was playing, and would have drowned had not John Mitchell, a sailor, jumped in and rescued him.

Mr. Will Maisbenen is home from Montreal on a visit.

K. W. Holton, who has been a member of the staff at the G.T.R. freight offices here for some years left today for Quinsey, Ill. He leaves many friends in Belleville who wish him every success in his new home. "Ed", as he is familiarly called by his friends, takes a keen interest in all manly sports and will be an acquisition to any town.

50 Years Ago

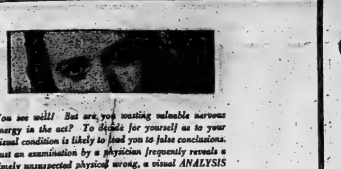
AUGUST 22ND, 1885.



The street parade of the Buffalo Bill Wild West Show yesterday was a novelty to the citizens of Belleville and Front Street was crowded. The famous scout of the plains, Buffalo Bill, headed the procession and was followed by the cowboy band and a long line of Indians in war paint and a number of western cowboys in their original costumes. The show was held at the race course in the afternoon and attracted an immense crowd of spectators. The events on the programme were numerous and striking, being well chosen and all of first class. The broadcast stage was a good feature and the attack upon it by the Indians and the rescue and rescue by the cowboys was very thrilling and realistic. The closing scene was the attack upon the settler's cabin by Indians and their repulse. The show gave universal satisfaction. During his visit here, Mr. Jas. W. F. Cody, better know as Buffalo Bill, stayed at the Dafoe House. His company was in camp upon the grounds at the race course.

A farmer in Thurlow township advertises as follows: The public is notified that I have set my mouse patch with spring guns and traps. I will take no responsibility for any person or persons trespassing that may receive injury from the same."

As the buffaloes with the Buffalo Bill Wild West show were being loaded onto the train at the depot last night, an old bull made a rush for liberty. He cleared the station yard and headed up the hill, hotly pursued by members of the show who finally succeeded in roping him. The buffalo was stubborn and it took some time to get him back to the train.

OPENS INVESTIGATION

— Brockville, Ont., Aug. 22.—(CP) — Provincial Fire Marshall Scotts today opened an inquiry into the Grand Central Hotel fire August first, which caused the death by suffocation of P. J. Tarpely, Montreal commercial traveller. Tarpely died when he was trapped in a third storey room

"Dear Sir,

"I would like to ask the assistance of the readers of your paper in providing books and periodicals or reading material generally, for the men in Relief Project No. 28. A number of citizens have made contributions and the personnel of the Air Force are doing all they can in this regard, but there is a pressing need for reading material to help the men of the Project occupy their leisure hours.

Most households have an accumulation of books and magazines which are no longer wanted and these would be eagerly read by those who care to assist. We please telephone Trenton 944 or Belleville 587, I will make arrangements to collect their contributions.

CARROLL INVITED TO DECLARE FAIR OPEN ON TUESDAY

Belleville's Class 'B' Exhibition Has Largest Entry List in History

PREMIUMS RAISED

Secretary Has High Praise For Vaudeville Acts to Be Put on Shows

Next Tuesday, August 27 at 2.00 p.m. the gates will swing open on a bigger and better Belleville Fair and months of concentrated efforts will be culminated. Mr. J. A. Carroll Secretary of the Ontario Agricultural Society, has been invited officially to declare the Fair open, and in all probability this distinguished leader of fairs throughout the province will be one of the principal speakers at the opening ceremonies.

Already the entry list for this year's fair is far in excess to that of previous years. This year's Belleville Fair is rated by the Federal Government as a class "A" fair and demands a prize list and premiums much larger than has been the case in years past in this city. Today is the final day for receiving entries in the pure bred livestock class while entries for other lines of livestock will be received up until Saturday. "At the present time we have a larger entry list of livestock than has ever been presented to the public at a Belleville Fair before," stated Secretary R. H. Hutcheson this morning.

Gates Open early

Although the fair will be officially opened at 2.00 p.m. the gates will be thrown open at 9.00 a.m. on Tuesday in order to allow exhibitors to place their goods and exhibits in order, prior to the grand opening in the afternoon. One of the first things to greet the patrons as they pass the gates will be the beautiful flower gardens adorning the Belleville Exhibition Grounds. These floral displays present nothing short of a kaleidoscope of beauty only to have the larger attractive water fountain as a colorful back-ground. No effort or expense has been spared in order to make the park one of beauty to satisfy to the eye of the most uninterested patron to enter the gates. Bands will play daily at the main bandstand and also in front of the grandstand for the mammoth free vaudeville acts that are to be presented daily at that point.

At Grand Stand

At the grandstand there is to be something doing around that centre every minute of the day, and at night under rich floodlights will be a gigantic performance of acrobats, clowns, musicians and many other features will all be blended together in one monstrous spectacle. Secretary R. H. Ketcheson personally visited the Ottawa Fair on Monday in order to witness the calibre of vaudeville acts that are to be presented daily at that point.

Miss Helen Walker, Reg. N. of Belleville, spent a few days last week with her parents Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Walker at Hoard's.

Miss Doris Rannie spent a few days recently with Mr. and Mrs. McGee, Tuffy.

Mrs. Alex Hume and daughters, Misses Kate of Burnbrae and Annie of Walkerville, spent a couple of days with the former's son, Mr. T. J. Hume of Colcough and other places enroute for home. Masters Donald and Clive accompanied them home for a visit.

Miss Margaret Milne, Reg. N. of Lockport, U.S.A. is visiting with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Alex Milne of Menie.

The many friends in Rawdon and Seymour will deeply regret to learn of the passing on the 22nd inst. of Mrs. Alex Johnson, formerly of Rawdon, but has for a number of years resided here and recently moved to Manitoulen Island to reside with a daughter Lettie, and Mrs. Robertson. Mrs. Johnson, nee Isabella Willan had been in poor health for some time. She leaves to mourn her loss, Mrs. (Dr.) C. Mellett, Seal Isle, Wash., Melville and Rev. Melburn in the U.S. and Mrs. Robertson, also one brother, Mr. James Williams who lives on where Mrs. Johnson was born. The the old homestead at Hoard's remains are resting at Mr. Williams' and the funeral will take place on Thursday, interment beside her deceased husband in Mount Pleasant cemetery.

Goodbye is Said To M. Blanchard

A signal honor was bestowed upon a fellow member by the local T's Men's Club last evening when twenty-seven club members and their lady escorts attended a special banquet at the Queen's Hotel to pay their respects to President Mel Blanchard upon the eve of his departure to Winnipeg, where he has accepted the position of superintendent of the Manitoba School for the Deaf. During the evening's repast Tarzan George Pauley, in a few well chosen words on behalf of the Belleville T's Men's Club, presented Past President Blanchard with a solid gold past president's emblem as a token of esteem from his fellow members. Mr. Pauley spoke eloquently of the fine qualities which during the outstanding efforts of Mel Blanchard during his many years of service in the Club. Mr. Blanchard being one of the charter members of the presentation came unexpected and completely replied in his usual talented manner, expressing his appreciation that would in the future separate him from his friends and fellow T'ymen. Following the banquet the club members and their lady guests adjourned to the summer camp of Dr. Jack Marshall where an evening entertainment including a corn roast and other features were thoroughly enjoyed.

PAINTER FALLS OFF SCAFFOLDING

Falling from a scaffold while painting the exterior of the Masonic Building, Front Street, George Madden, aged about painter, dropped some twenty feet crashing to the iron balcony that skirts the front of the building shortly after 2.00 p.m. today. Mr. Madden's plight was observed by passersby, who with the aid of neighbours soon rescued the injured man. Following emergency medical attention Mr. Madden was removed to his Albion Street home. Although Mr. Madden is confined to bed two weeks, it is not believed he is seriously injured, however, he received a slight cut in the painting of the front of the local Masonic Building and had erected a scaffold from which he was busily skirting the building this morning. Suddenly he lost his balance and crashed to the iron work below, the fall breaking fortunately the fall on the floor-work of the balcony and not on the perpendicular iron frame-work.

CAMP MEETING HELD AT IVANHOE

Revival services are being well attended at the Holiness Movement Camp meeting at Ivanhoe. Eloquent sermons are being delivered, well known speakers and singing is a special feature of the Camp.

The services would remind one of the old fashioned camp meeting. Altar calls are being given and many have found joy in pardon, in penitance and faith to the World's Redeemer.

A great number are camping on the ground and great interest is manifest in every service.

There was a great crowd last Sabbath, and the same is expected on this closing Sabbath. On entering the grounds it would remind one of a small village with its tents and cottages, dotted here and there.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By Beatrice Fairfax

If She Could Only Tell His Wife

Dear Miss Fairfax:

My mind is made up as to the course I intend to pursue. I'm in love with a married man—one for whom more than His Self. I'm 26 and he's 40. He tells me that he doesn't love his wife, but that he adores his two children, and as he has no grounds for divorce, he doesn't see how we can be wedded.

I hate the idea of having what I call a "back street romance," but there is no other way. This deep affection for my family, but I can't help that. If I could only go and see this man's wife and tell her how devotedly I love her husband, and that he no longer cares for her, I think she might be reasonable and give him up.

You must have had lots of letters like this. How do wives react under circumstances?

Mildred

They react and act according to their individual temperaments, but usually, husbands stand by pretty well and that the silly girl has just misunderstood. I must have had thousands of letters in the years I've been doing this column, and the men who've been willing to stand by the girl are exceptionally few.

It's so natural for a man to say he's not in love with his wife when a girl falls for a him and they make the children a sorry excuse for getting a divorce. Usually these triangular affairs are pretty disastrous for the girl.

You tell me your mind is made up so I suppose nothing can be said to you; but I don't believe, under the circumstances, I'd go to see his wife.

TRAILER IS UPSET AVOIDING CRASH

Police Allege Motor Car Parked on Public Highway

Swerving to avoid a head-on collision, after having to pass an automobile parked in the centre of the highway, the trailer portion of a large Metropolitan transport turned over on the south ditch on Highway No. 2 three miles east of Belleville at 1.20 a.m. today. Alex Gordon Long, 41 year old Buffalo N. Y. motorist, was arrested by Motor-cycle Constable Sam Ervine and lodged in the local police cells on a charge of the negligent operation of a motor car. Long being the operator of the parked car, that police say was, instrumental in causing the accident.

The transport, driven by George Humphries, Toronto, was proceeding eastward on the highway when suddenly on the south ditch on the highway parked fully on the highway and directly in front of the transport. The truck driver first swerved his vehicle to the left to avoid striking the parked car and then observed through the strong sun's rays another car approaching from that side. He again swerved the large transport, but this time to the right and towards the south side of the highway. The double swerving apparently proved too great a strain on the trailer portion of the larger vehicle, as the trailer left the highway and turned over in the ditch. The contents of the trailer were strewn for many feet in the vicinity of the accident, canned goods and other perishable goods being among the debris.

The driver of the west-bound car, Robert D. Cooley after questioning, materially assisted in avoiding a head-on collision with the transport as he applied the brakes of his car sufficiently to allow the large transport roo nto pass. Both Humphries claim that the heavy rays of the sun mitigated their driving qualities. Long claiming this medium to be the reason for his happening on the highway. A charge of driving while under the influence of liquor against Long and the case will be heard in Belleville court at Trenton this afternoon, Provincial Police stated today.

Midnight Bathing Reported in Fashion

Midnight bathing has been gaining in popularity in this district during the past week of hot weather. It is reported by many summer cottagers on the Bay of Quinte and other water resorts of the section.

For the past week or so it have noticed scene of the swimmers arriving at near our camp on the lake as one and all seek relief in the morning. Generally, though, they are quiet and only a little noise so we don't mind them so much. Some nights, though, there is a lot of yelling and yahooing, especially from the mixed parties. We've been camping here for years and we've never seen night bathing so popular as this year," stated the informer.

MUSK MELONS ARE OFFERED ON MART

Comprise Chief Trade at The Mid-Week Market

Musk melons, the first of the season, made their appearing for offering on the Belleville mid week market today.

Although prices are high early in the season, fruit being the choice fruit was eagerly snapped up by early housewives. A few smaller ones in the tag end of the lot found ready buyers at five cents each.

Corn "free from borers" according to the sales talk by other vendors was also plentiful retailing at 15c cents the dozen or two dozen for 25 cents. Onions, carrots and other bunched vegetables found ready sale at the many stalls on the bench.

Black rot, the scourge of tomato growers of the country is again in evidence in fields throughout the district and yields of tomatoes were smaller than previous loads. Farmers according to statements made has resulted in more black rot than in former years. "In the Prince Edward area of the factories in Prince Edward can't get enough tomatoes to open up for canning this year", stated one local resident who offered a few small lots of the vegetable. They sold 40 cents for 11 quart basket and 15 cents for a 8 quart basket.

RACETRACK FAST FOR FAIR EVENTS HORSEMEN STATE

Track Widened to The Full Width to Accommodate Racers

TRACK RECORD SOUGHT

Many Fine Horses Coming as Fair is Fortunately Dated

Everyone loves a good horse, whether he be hitched to a dray cart, drawing a load of hay and hooked to a light bike speeding around a race course. The Belleville Fair Board caters especially to the horse exhibit at the fair and move especially to the harness events before the grandstand. In former years Belleville horse lovers and those from the surrounding district, have witnessed over the local racing strip some keen competition and Harry Ketcheson, chairman of the race committee, believes this year one of the best programs have been arranged there will be two races each day starting on Wednesday and continuing till the last day of the fair.

In order, that the races may be contested over a keen track, the Parks Board have spent considerable money and time in putting the track in the best possible shape. The track has been widened out to its original width by cutting away all the weeds and other growth while ditches have been placed around the inside to take away surplus water if it should rain. The track has been floated and the rough edges taken off, while water has been freely applied to form a good springy "cushion". It is expected, that the track record of 2.07 will be broken at this meet. This record is held by Lou Ganot, once owned by Percy Morgan of Campbellford. Willis Grattan formerly held the record at 2.07 1-2.

The Events

The first day of racing will consist of a three year old colt race, the first one ever to be held in this city and the fast class will bring the 2.30 class horses together. This is a popular class and some of the best horses in training in the east will be on hand. Both of these races will be purses of $150.00. On Thursday the slow nacres will meet for a purse of $100.00 and the 2.18 class will also be raced for a purse of $150.00. The last day the bear cats will back up in the 2.14 class for $200.00, while the other class will be a 2.24 with a lot of speedy side wheelers in action. The extreme fee will be five percent with no deductions from money winners and free stabling and straw will be provided.

Belleville is fortunately dated with regards to other racing points. Ottawa is holding their exhibition the week, while Toronto follows with a week of racing after the Belleville fair week. The horsemen generally stop over in Belleville on their way to Toronto to pick up a little oat money and it is more than likely that some of the best drivers in the province including Vic Rowntree, Clifford Chapman, Dr. Kane, Sled Craig, Andy Kellam, Harvey Fraser, William Harvey, Wilmer Hillock will exhibit their driving skill. The races are conducted on a high plane, there is no tedious waiting between heats and everything is provided for the comfort of the guests. There is nothing finer than to see a bunch of pacers head into the home stretch, nostrils extended, drivers urging their mounts and the crowd cheering for their favorite to head the procession to the wire. If the rain holds off, the races at Belleville Fair should be the best program staged in the province this year.

Transportation Refused Trekkers

Ottawa, Aug. 22.—(CP)— Premier Bennett announced yesterday he would have nothing to do with the 400 Ontario trekkers, who have been stranded here for two weeks and want transportation to their homes. He told Mayor Nolan of Ottawa the government would not supply transportation for the men.

It was the second government to turn down the men today. Premier Hepburn of Ontario earlier announcing he would not supply transportation.

BOY SAVES MOTHER IN RIDEAU

Ottawa, Aug. 22—(CP)—A 12-year-old Ottawa boy, Keith Black, saved his mother from drowning in the Rideau River near Portland, Ont. She went out over her depth and sank into 15 foot of water. The boy swam out and towed her into shallow water.

Special Attractions for Belleville Fair

Chairman of "Attractions" for Belleville Fair is Chas. J. Symons, well-known chairman of Belleville Parks Board. With Mr. Symons on the committee are H. E. (Gene) Fairfield and L. E. (Cap) Walmsley.

Choosing of attractions each year is a serious problem but Chairman Symons has had so much experience in this line that he knows just how to go about it to get the best. This year the special attractions are the "Cream of the crop" offered by George A. Hamid, Incorporated, 1560 Broadway, New York, booking agents for the leading circuses and amusement parks.

Chairman Symons says that this year the special attractions before the grand stand, afternoon and evening will be even better presented in the past. In addition to the Hamid attractions are several high class numbers, making altogether a highly entertaining program.

Cooing and Gurgling Rows of Babes Feature Attraction at District Fair

Just babies!

Whole smiling, cooing, gurgling rows of them.

Babies from all parts of Hastings and Prince Edward Counties, as well as other sections of this district. They will be one of the attractions of the Belleville Fair on baby judging day at the Baby Show. Fond mothers beaming on their bright-eyed offspring; fathers beaming from the sidelines at the white-coated judges inspect and pass on each baby in turn.

For years the Baby Show has been one of the most popular institutions of the Fair. Rivalry as in the past has always been keen. This year a larger number of entries, a greater prize list and more interest in the event will assure one of the best shows yet.

Full details of the show will be given in advertisements connected with the Fair, but as in the past, with fair weather permitting, the show will be held as usual on the open grass in front of the band stand on the day set to be named. Local judges recruited from the medical profession of the city will be faced with the unenviable task of choosing from among the scores of babies, the best one of the show. They will be assisted, it is expected by nurses of the local Victorian Order.

The list of prizes this year is a substantial one. The following have been offered.

Baby Show Prizes

By W. S. Clarke—First prize, half dozen Photos, value $3.00, Best Baby Girl over six months of age and under twelve months. Second prize by Dolan the Druggist—Hot Water Bottle, $1.50.

By Blue's Marketeria—Merchandise, $3.00, Best Baby Girl under six months of age. Second prize by H. C. Hobson, Druggist—Merchandise $2.00.

By McCormick's Studio— First prize, half dozen Photos, $5.00. Best Baby boy over six months and under twelve months. Second prize by Cicert and Hollon—Merchandise, $3.00.

By Dominion Stores—First prize, 50 lbs. Sugar, $3.00, Best Baby Boy under six months of age. Second prize by McKeown's Drug Store — Merchandise $2.00.

Baby Exhumed After 2 Years

Simcoe, Ont., Aug. 22.—(CP)—The body of Mary, wife of John Neblenko of Townsend who died about two years ago in convulsions, was exhumed at Waterloo and certain organs and parts of organs taken to Toronto for analysis. The work was directed by Prof. E. R. Frankish of Toronto.

JOSIAH COWAN DIES

Peterbourgh, Ont., Aug. 22.—(CP) Josiah Cowan, former manager of the Home for the Friendless at Chatham, is dead here after a long thy illness. He died at his home in the Township of Otonabee. He was 87 years of age and is survived by his widow, two brothers and two sisters.

TRAPPED SKUNK BAFFLES CAPTOR

Cannifton Road Resident is Now More Puzzled Than Ever

Catching a skunk that had been making nightly raids on his chicken house and carrying off several fine broilers without leaving a feathery trace, was all in an evening's work for a well known Cannifton resident this week, but disposing of the trapped animal was a different matter altogether.

Aroused by the loss of his young hens, the resident attempted several times to catch the night prowler. But even his best efforts and the use of carefully constructed pitfalls failed to catch the furry thief. He was not until a simple box trap was baited at the hen house door that the prowler was finally nabbed.

At dawn the chicken owner awoke to find himself possessed by an addition to his livestock. Through the slats of the wooden trap could be seen a very formidable appearing skunk, now thoroughly aroused and scratching and clawing at the wooden walls of his prison. It held its tail in a defiant curl and glared spitefully at its captor. It made threatening gestures at his direction.

By noon of the same day the matter of disposal of the animal was still under consideration of the neighborhood. A suggestion that a large strike be laid on the hen and then towed to the nearby river was squashed with a cold stare.

A hint that the animal be subjected to a gas attack from the exhaust of the family car was also received with little enthusiasm.

"Once that stuff gets on the upholstery of the car.....", it was pointed out.

"Wait until he goes to sleep and then sneak up and stab-him" was the third useless suggestion advanced.

Up to a late hour yesterday afternoon reports indicated that the matter of disposal was still under consideration.

ne "Critical Series" to ollow Another in National s Season's Schedule Wanes

ats And Cubs Start Battle For Top Rung in New York

TIGERS ADVANCE

Lead to Seven Games By Winning Twin Bill

BY HUGH S. FULLERTON, JR.
Associated Press Sports Writer

As the Major League season nes near the finish, month the schedule calls for one important ries after another, almost without reprieve. The charts bear no division as the Cardinals chal- the Giants and registered a slight gain and like Yankees Tigers came out all square.

ll another "crucial" series opened today as the Giants and Chi- Cubs bring their guns to bear each other with the National ague lead again at stake. The two leaders have had a breathing e since their struggle with St. s, trimming the Reds four times Sunday despite a few close calls, winding up with a 3-0 victory Sunday.

Cubs, who have split even in ames on the road since the end their good home stand, that put in the running, timed up tackling eyes by capturing both hits and 21 runs against the ates, but they got only one run that just four games off ead and one game behind the who trimmed the Braves 11-5 ve Dizzy Dean his 21st mound ory. The Phils withstood a ly rally in the opener to win 13-12 ecumbed to a sixth inning which 18 men went to bat, and scored and lost the afterpiece o set up against that slugging Giants presented the hurling of Schumacher, who blanked the with eight hits in a seven cisel Cone Schott to gain his 17th victory of the year and the 11th his career over Cincinnati. The ntial victory built his margin over e the 11th had only two assists at Jim Collins at first handled ry one chance cleanly in the quiet.

With nearly all the clubs doing gs in a big way, Lou Gehrig of Yankees stepped in with another sword performance as his club ded a twin bill with the Browns. batted a home run with the es full to lead the way to a 14-3 mph in the opener, and then ed his 19th according to the elling scribes with the Yanks, 18th in 1934, in the nightcap. ding to Gehrig. A complete re- y of his every time at bat proves he needed to decide the issue at any rate he beat Babe Ruth's home mark of 46 established in ers crammed. Lou went on to ble with two on in the ninth ce but Johnny Murphy couldn't the lead and St. Louis won the 6-5.

Tigers Increase Lead

The Yankee split enabled De- it to increase its lead to seven ks over the Yanks, winning the Sox twice 4-1 and 3-2 with ssmen Al Crowder and Eldon ell in the opener. Meanwhile land broke even with the Ath- losing, winning the opener, 4-3 ded Lloyd Brown's four hit ching after losing the nightcap Thomas Foxx smacked his th homer and Jimmie Dykes his ner and the White Sox absorbed 15-7 licking from the Senators.

As a result of all these games ston went down to fifth and the ding moved into a virtual tie e Yanks. Those that only a fraction of a percentage point sep- ated them.

Brooklyn Dodgers, who are seek- to make it a three-cornered race the National League, also an upward step when they ssed the fourth place Pirates behind Georges Earnshaw's six- ng flinging to win their series 3-1.

INGSTON PONIES TIE WITH PETERBORO

Peterboro Aug. 22.—(CP)—King- ston Ponies moved into a tie for first ace in the Ontario Century Ball ague race here Wednesday when they took a 7-6 decision from Peter- oro after a 10-innings battle. The two teams will meet in King- on Friday and the winners will ave first place in the race and re- ve a bye into the finals.

The homesters spotted the invad- rs six runs in the first five inn- gs but five of them back in a big ghting sixth inning that drove St. ohn's from the mound. The second ston pitching in the ninth and saw ree batters banged back to the vi- ors in the tenth when Scriver, who ieved Kitchener after he had giv- n a single in the ninth, de- loped a wild streak that ave the game winning run.

SIMPSONS OPEN SERIES WITH WIN

Defeat Recreations in Play-offs For Mercantile Title

Simpsons opened the local Mercantile Softball League final play-offs with an 8 to 5 victory over the Recreations in the initial game of the series played last evening.

The closeness of the score indicates the play although a four run splurge in the second inning gave the Simpsons a decided advantage, one which they never relinquished until victory was theirs.

Amo hurled for the winners and pitched steady all while the Recreation pitcher pitched equally as good but two walks and three errors on the part of his team-mates, materially assisted the winners in victory.

Hits were rather scarce throughout, the Simpsons garnering seven, six blows while Recreations only collected six hits, Munnings, Cooper and Bowbotham all hit well in the pitches for the victors. The series will continue tonight.

The line-ups—Simpsons— Moon, Bowbotham, Bateman, O'Neill, Amo, Munnings, Bowbotham Cooper and Reynolds Dracup and White, Recreations—Thapp, B. Morgan, R. Morgan, Hurley, Pointer, T. Morgan, Chamfield, Cornell and Bailey.

AAJMAAS WIN FIRST ROUND

Defeat Wooler 6-3 in Two Straight And Now Meet Hudson

Making it two straight victories the Belleville Aajmaas A.C. won the first round of the intermediate O.H.A. play-downs when they defeated the Wooler Maple Leafs by the score of 6 to 3 at Citizen's Park last evening. Behind masterful pitching of Frank Farraro the Aajmaas played a fine brand of baseball to cop the first game and count into runs as the most opportune time. The Aajmaas blasted Wooler hurler "Soup" Fred from the mound after a two run rally in the sixth frame Farraro taking up the mound duties for the remainder. Belleville pushed three hits and two runs in the seventh while the visitors limited the Aajmaas to nine scattered hits.

Besides pitching a steady game on the mound Farraro was single in the sixth gave the Aajmaas a two run advantage and sufficient runs to coast through to a victory. Farraro also got credit with three batters while not a single Aajmaas was retired via the strikeout route. Fanning only two batsmen in the eighth after Redcliffe crashed a homer far into the trees, Farraro also hurled walked the next three batters, filling the bases. Dracup was then sent away to strike out the next two hitters and even the day as he leaped into the air and made sensational catch of Bert Ellis' line drive which was on its way for two bases and certain two runs. Dracup completed a total of 13 hits, including four for extra bases.

Cook Big Hitter

Cook, local short stop, was the big hitter of the game with three successive singles while Farraro notably assisted his own cause with three safe hits, one of which drove in what proved to be the winning run. Gray hit a triple while Bawden had double and Tuttle one two base blow.

Redcliffe crashed the only circuit blow of the night while Gray and Tuttle each got a brace of singles while Steinberg hit the only other extra base hit for Wooler, a double in the fourth that scored two and put the visitors into the lead for one frame. The Aajmaas played errorless ball in victory. The game was played in the record time of fifty minutes.

By virtue of their victory the Aajmaas now meet the winner of the Kingston City League in the second round of the O.A.S.A. playdowns, starting in Kingston on Monday night next.

The line-ups—Aajmaas—St. Denis 3b; Tuttle rf; Bean 3b; Cook ss; Kiser 1f; Hanna lf; Bawden 2b; Gray c and Farraro p. Wooler Maple Leafs—Putnam rf; Reid 1b; Fox c; Cook c, Simpson 2b; Redcliffe ss; Curry 3b; G. Ruttan, c; Steinberg lf; Frye and Mundy p.

CRITICIZES CANADIAN TENNIS OFFICIALS

Actor, showman and tennis star extraordinary, Fred Perry, world's No. 1 ranking player, threw a bombshell into Canadian official tennis circles by protesting their action in bringing Cliff Sutter to play against him in Toronto. He said he came to Canada's Dominion Championships as an individual. As a result, Canadian players were chosen for Ottawa and Montreal appearances.

CURRENT SPORT

DAY BY DAY

B. A. Fanning, guiding light of intermediate baseball in these parts encouraged today he had been offered a tempting price to play the second game of the Bay of Quinte finals in Picton next Wednesday. Skipper Fanning intimated, that he might accept the offer as interscholastic baseball has been anything but a profitable enterprise in Belleville for these many seasons back. Of course there are many different and distinct angles to the above proposition; first, there is little doubt but that Picton abhors the sight of the local diamond. Whether the local field is in good condition or not Wednesday, that is providing it is played in the morning Edward County seat. According to the latest O.B.A. bulletin the Bay of Quinte boys will be ready to meet the Kingston District winners on Aug. 31st, which will be the date of the intermediate "A" champions lie idle, thus drawn a bye into the second round.

With little chance of commencing the C.O.B.L. semi-final playoffs for at least ten days, the local Stewart-Warners, who have been idle for nearly a week, could do much worse than to arrange an exhibition game with the Napanee Shamrocks for Saturday next and providing the play-offs do not start until next week, arrange another exhibition game with Cobourg or some other power club Wednesday of next week. The Radios are sorely in need of games and if they are to keep their mid-season form, it's baseball games and many baseball games for them. Secretary Newt Thompson is out of town today and we could get no authentic information from the league pertaining as to when these meets would take place—but we're sure Newt will soon announce, however.

But getting back to that proposed "all-star" game between the winners of the C.O.B.L. and Picton, we learn from the league Umpire Woolsey that as soon as reason why this all-star team should not be played by the league champions. "OK. Harold, you pick ten and we'll gladly publish them." Recently we published our selection of the all-star team, pertaining to Belleville was the league honors,—today we'll name the selection if league manager to head the Central League polls at the end of the play-offs. In this selection naturally no Kingston players will be named as the Purples would be the defenders of the league's honor. At any rate here's a go: for pitchers we head the list with Jack "Chief" Williams of Belleville; then Mike Kitchen of Peterboro (remember that they hurler he hurled versus the Ponies) and perhaps "Lefty" Wolz, who has met with some success against Joe Daly's clan this season. Jim Barclay of Belleville, catcher, with Starr of Peterboro second string. Ash, Peterboro, first base; Jubenville, Oshawa, second base; Whalley, Peterboro, has the batting edge on Mellroy and May, so he gets that call, while Eddie Murphy, Peterboro, is the choice for third base. The outfield would be composed of Foley, Peterboro, Fay-Wez, Belleville, Mathews, Oshawa along with Hurst, Oshawa, as the league outfielder. The spare outfielder would be Dean Ford, Belleville, due to his versatile ability.

Behind the stellar pitching of F. Farraro the local Aajmaas made it two straight over Wooler in the first round of the O.A.S.A. playdowns when the locals won here 6 to 3 last eve. Incidentally the game was played in wet under the Lear and was packed with thrills and spills. The Aajmaas will meet with the winners of the Kingston City loop. Perhaps the feature film of the game was Carman Cook's flying jump into the air to spear Curry's liner drive in the seventh three were on at the time and Cook's spectacular play culminated a hectic inning. Farraro had walked the bases loaded with nobody out the next two and Cook's play ended the most exciting inning of the game. Farraro had fine pitching and superb fielding by the Aajmaas took its toll, although Wooler were in no way disgraced in either of the two play-off games always battling hard and were worthy opponents. It was as tough a game as the locals have experienced this season.

Simpsons drew first blood in the Mercantile final last eve. when they downed the Recreations 8 to 6 in a tardy struggle. The downing of the Recs indicates the play, so say both managers. The series is young and we'll see if anything may yet happen.

Joe Daly's Kingston Ponies moved into a tie with Peterboro for the C.O.B.L. leadership yesterday by virtue of their 7 to 6 win over Lindsay City. Now the "Sea Horses" have to return to Kingston for an all-important game between, tonight, the winner of which will have first place and the loser will have to meet the Radios and Jack Williams in the semi-finals play-offs. Incidentally the Peterboro pilot is no part of Williams and maybe he's not willing to let Peterboro present him with a "Peterboro-Peterboro". Tush, tush, me lads.

It took them well over three hours to play a play-off game in the South Hastings League yesterday and at the end of nine innings the count stood 12 to 13 and they decided to call quits, much to the satisfaction of Umpire Woolsey. "I've seen rabid fans in many parts of this province, but the local out around Latta are the most rabid I ever want to see," stated arbiter Woodley upon his return after umpiring the Tendonda-Latta play-off yesterday. Incidentally had Latta won they would have been league champions, but another game is on the books for Friday.

The first call for football practice was issued by Coach Dr. "Ernie" Kennedy recently and this evening, the pigskin chasers will lineup at the Cricket Field for their initial workout. "This kind of weather is just the thing for pre-season training and our squad will take full advantage of every moment from now until the season opens" stated Business Manager Bill Fry today. At any rate football will silently trudge along until the middle of September when a number of exhibition games that have been arranged, will usher in the season. All aspiring gridiron players are invited to the Cricket Field every practice, starting tonight.

LATTA TIED BY FOXBORO

Another day is awaited before the championship of the Eastern Ontario Baseball League can be decided for Latta, winners of the Tendonda-Latta series were held to a 13-13 tie Wednesday afternoon at the Latta diamond by the Foxboro nine. Foxboro finished on top in the regular schedule while Latta and Tendonda battled fought it out to meet the league leaders for the title. Latta won this series easily and on the first game to Foxboro had the honor of coming from behind to win this year's Foxboro defeated Latta in their only meeting until yesterday on the Latta grounds.

The game yesterday was a long drawn affair with the locals on the long end after being held to a single hit by Callahan, their pitcher, in the first inning. Foxboro went to the front and looked to have the game locked up but Latta staged a hitting rally in the ninth frame and tied the score. Tyner, pinch hitting for Callahan, singled in the first two runs and Arthur Hall shoved over the other one, when Johnston let his easy drive roll through his legs. Foxboro went into the league with the managers got their heads together and decided to end hostilities for the day with the game being replayed at Latta on Friday afternoon.

Fans Quite Rabid

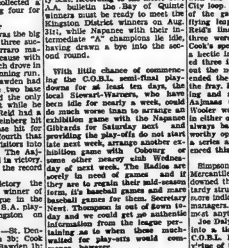
Fans in that section of the country are said to be quite impolite when a good fellow as long as the fans pickle issues it about but a "rotten" if the fortunes of war go against the team. On the play Latta should have won but slowly to open the eyes those directing the team left Callahan in the box. However, it was plain, that he had lost his stuff. The team proved equally as heartbreaking when they boiling away the last chances. Ashley, the starting hurler for Foxboro was master of all through the piece and he was responsible for driving in the fifth, which rode along nicely until the ninth when the Latta barrage was opened. Ashley issued three passports and allowed nine hits while he toiled on the mound. Foxboro made only six hit hard. The Latta team collected sixteen hits, while Foxboro went through the batter. Triples and home runs were common. The lineups:



Latta.. ab. r. h. po. a. e.
Hall 3b, Young c, Marsh ss, Vance 1f and p, Smith 2b, Shannon lf, Callahan p and rf, Tyner.

Foxboro—Ashley p, Seeley 1b, Hall c, Wm. Johnston ss, Gay 1b, H. Ketcheson c, Guay 2b, Bailey 2b, Ascott c.

Score by innings:
Foxboro ..... 000 120 121—13 17 2
Latta ..... 221 210 013—13 16 2

Batteries—Foxboro, Ashley, Peterboro, Marsh, Point Anne, bases.

CONGER CHAPEL IS 126 YEARS OLD

Referred to as "the cradle of Methodism in Prince Edward County", the old Conger Chapel, near Picton first built in the year 1809, and still in excellent state of preservation is given mention in a brief article, accompanied by illustrations, in the current issue of Canada Lumberman.

Th land for the site of the church was donated by Stephen Conger at one time magistrate of Prince Edward County. In 1809 the construction of what was then called the White chapel was begun. According to a minute book in which Mr. Conger kept a most extensive record of all doings of the Church particularly during the erection of the building, work was started in June, and "Although no direct date of the building is contained, entries indicate that it must have occurred early in July. One note in the minute book records the fact that "One barrel of beer was provided in celebration of the raising," according to the article.

The building was erected by contract with Wm. Moore being awarded the job at a price of 100 English pounds. Cash donations totalled 60 pounds. The names of the donors with the amounts given have been preserved in the minute book. One man, H. Johnston, is credited with a contribution of one fat sheep valued at 18 shillings which was later turned over to Mr. Moore as payment of that sum on account.

Associated with Mr. Moore in the building of the church were found the names of Peter Brown, J. Forsythe, J. G. Clute and John Goldsmith.

DUKE OF YORK GIVES HOLIDAY TO BOYS

The Duke of York plays the role of movie cameraman, at his camp at Southwold, England, where he is entertaining 400 public school boys and young industrial workers. He took his place behind the lens of the camera to snap action shots of his guests as they indulged in sports and athletic pastimes, in a set of games arranged for their pleasure by the Duke himself.

MUSIC URGED AS STIMULANT

British Health Board Advises Respirators For Dusty Trades

Music for workers, particularly those in mass turning out standardized pieces, warming the air supplied to pneumatic drills and special apparatus for detecting dust in certain industries are among the recommendations made in the fifteenth report of the British Industrial Health Board.

The reason for the music is that it would eliminate boredom and increase efficiency by rhythm; for the warm air that it would increase the efficiency of the drills; for dust detection, because it would diminish certain eye, nose and lung complaints.

Experiments to investigate the psychological conditions of industry, especially in repetition work have been carried out, and the results show clearly that where conditions are satisfactory the comfort and cheerfulness of the worker being studied and helped (e. g. by music in some instances), efficiency improves.

Studies of the causes of invalidism have produced valuable results, but existing evidence gives no support to the statement made by surgeons and others that bus drivers specially prone to gastric trouble. In order to settle the matter a special committee has been set up in association with the London Passenger Transport Board.

The well-recognized risks of workers in dusty trades have been carefully studied, and a new instrument has been constructed by means of which it is possible to take samples of air practically at the breathing point, i. e., the mouth and nose.

It has been proved that a stonemason's exposure to dust may be three times as great on a calm as on a windy day. Preventive measures have been suggested, including the wearing of "respirators," i. e., appliances resembling "gas masks."

HAMILTON MAN HELD RESPONSIBLE

George Bodner Faces Charge of Murder in Wife's Death

Hamilton, Aug. 22 (CP)— George Bodner, obce owner of racing stable was committed for trial yesterday on a charge of murdering his wife a week ago.

The former sportsman was committed by Magistrate McKay only a few hours after a coroner's jury had held him responsible for beating the woman to death. She was found on her bed, her skull showing signs of heavy blows.

Heddy Engleitel, held as a material witness, was released on bail of $500. He testified he was in the house when Bodner and his wife quarrelled and drinking alcohol. He said Bodner had kicked the woman as she lay on the kitchen floor.

PASSING OF THE FAIRIES

Sir James Barrie, who wrote "Peter Pan" with its oft-quoted line, "Do you believe in fairies?" recently entertained about seventy boys, all from eight to ten years of age, at Stoke-on-Trent, England, and wrote to The Morning Post, London about the encounter. A five minutes' chat with them convinced him that fairies are out of date. He talked to them about books and stories of all kinds. Another striking fact was soon evident in the type of stories they preferred. Six liked fairy tales and the others: animal characters, 8; the sea and ships, 9; engines (railway, motor, plane), 5; war stories 44; school stories, 2.

Average Man Uses 250,000,000 Words

The average man talks for two hours daily, which, reckoned at 100 words a minute, makes 4,500,000 words yearly. By the time he reaches the age of 60 he has spoken 250,000,000 words.

These calculations are made by Dr. Wilhelm Carls in the Berlin Illustrierte Nachtausgabe, commenting on the "basic English" plan of a vocabulary of 850 words.

He also finds that in moments of right speech is accelerated. German is not so rich as English in individual words, but has far more composites.

Little Benny's Note Book

Sam Cross was sitting on his front steps looking mad like he usually does, and I sat alongside of him saying, Hello Sam, what's a matter?

I'm tired of having to do everything I don't want to and not being aloud to do a thing I feel like, that's what's a matter, Sam said. I tell you what I got a good mind to do, I got a good mind to take a working trip around the world. And yeah thang if that's just exactly what I'm going to do just as soon as I find somebody to go with me. Why dont you come? he said, and I said, Where, around the world?

Sure, co you know any better place? Sam said. Holey smokes it'll proberly be the longest swellest working trip anybody ever took. You aint afraid are you? he said, and I said, Certainly not, good nite, what of, what about? Why should I be? I asked.

Well then will you come? Sam said, and I said, I mile, sure, all rite.

Nothing doing, you've got to sware it, the guy that wants to go working around the world with me has got to cross his breath and sware it, Sam said, and I said, Well, it seems like a pritty good lot of working.

Do you know any better exercise? Sam said Well, are you going to sware it or shall I ask somebody else? he said.

With just then his mother looked out the front window saying, Sam-uel I want you to take a little stroll to the drug store and get me some borick acid and 5 stamps.

And she threw down the money rapped in a piece of paper, Sam saying, Aw G, I'm tired and I'm just getting rested and that'll get me all tired again.

I'll give you 5 minnits to be back and no more, his mother said, and she took her head back and I said, O yea, wawk around the world how haw dont make me laugh, that just makes me change my money about going, at least with you anyways.

And I wawked away looking independent.

LIKE 'LITTLE MINISTER'

Glasgow—Real-life counterparts of the stern elders in Sir James M. Barrie's "Little Minister" have roused a controversy here. Still frowning on dancing as a "pastime of the devil," the elders have suspended from church rights for six months a Presbyterian lay preacher, John Murray of Dornoch because he allowed children to dance at a party at his home. "It was only a children's party," defended Provost Murray, "and you can't expect old heads on young shoulders. None of my family ever went to public dances. There is no alternative for me but to break with the church."

REVOLT IN THE DESERT

by

T. E. LAWRENCE

We settled to leave the tenders here, under cover. I transferred myself, with one hundred and fifty pounds of ammunition, fused and ready, to the armoured car; intending to drive passively down the valley towards the bridge, till its arches, sheltering us from the fire of the post, enabled us to try and light the demolition charges. Meanwhile the other, the active fighting car, would engage the blockhouse at short range to cover my operation.

The two cars set out simultaneously. When they saw us the astonished gunners let seven or eight Turks get out of their trenches, and, rifles in hand, advanced spun up in open order, moved either by cavalry by automobile understanding, or by an inhuman unmixed courage.

In a few minutes the second car came into action against them: white puff after Turks appeared beside the bridge and shot at us. Our machine-gunners ranged, and fired a short burst. One man fell, another was hit, the rest ran a little way, thought better of it, and returned, making friendly signs. We took their rifles and sent them up valley in the tenders whose drivers were watching us keenly from their cliffs. The blockhouse surrendered at the same moment. We were now free to have taken the bridge, and its section of track, in five minutes without loss.

Joyce rushed down, his face tender with more gunfire, and hastily we set about the bridge, a pleasant little work, eighty feet long and fifteen feet high, honoured with a shining slab of white marble bearing the name and titles of Sultan Abd al Hamid. In the drainage holes of the spandrils six small charges were inserted: zigzag, and with their explosion all the arches were scientifically shattered; the demolition being a fine example of all that finest sort which left the skeleton of its bridge intact: indeed, hardly tottering, so that the repairing enemy had a first labour to destroy the wreck, before they could attempt to rebuild.

When we had finished, enemy patrols were near enough to give us fair excuse for quitting. The new prisoners, whom we valued for intelligence reasons, were given place on our cloaks; and we bumped off. Unfortunately we bumped too carelessly in our satisfaction, and at the first water-course there was a crash beneath my tender. On our side of the car body tipped downward till the weight came on the tyre of the back wheel, and we stuck.

The front bracket of the near back spring had cut crystalline through by the chassis, in a sheer break which nothing but a workshop could mend. We gazed in despair for we were only three hundred yards from the railway, and the blood to lose the car, when the enemy came along in ten minutes. A Rolls in the desert was above reproach; and though we had been driving in top for eighteen months, not upon the polished roads for their maker intended, but across country of the vilest, at speed, day or night, carrying a ton of goods and four or five men up, yet this was our first structural accident in the team of nine.

Rolls, the driver, our strongest and most resourceful man, had ready mechanic, whose skill and advice largely kept our cars in running order, was nearly in tears over the mishap. The lot of us, officers and men, English and Turks, had crowded round him and watched his face anxiously. As he smiled at that he, a private, commanded in this emergency, even the stubble on his jaw assuming a harder, stronger determination. At last he said there was just one chance. We might jack up the fallen end of the spring, and wedge it, by bailing upon the running board, in nearly its old position. With the help of cross-the thin sections of the running boards might carry the additional weight.

We had on each car a length of sounding to place between the double tyres if ever the sand in sand or mud. Three blocks of this would make the needful height. We had no saw, but drove bullets through it cross-wise till we could snap it off. The Turks heard us firing, and hailed cautiously. Joyce heard us and ran back to see help. Into his car we piled our load, jacked up the spring and the chassis, and then, with the wooden baulks, let her down on them (they bore splendidly) crashed and away drove off. Rolls eased her to walking speed at every stone or bump, while we, prisoners and all, ran beside with cries of encouragement clearing the track.

In camp we stitched the blocks with captured telegraph wire and bound them together to the chassis, the spring to the chassis, till it looked as strong as possible, and we put back the load. So enduring was the running board that we did the ordinary work with the car the next three weeks, and took her at last to Damascus at the end. Great was Rolls, and great was Rosery. They were worth hundreds of men to us in these days.

This darning the car delayed us for hours, and at its end we slept in Umtaipe, confident that, by starting before dawn, we should be much late in meeting Nuri Said on the Damascus line tomorrow, and we could tell him that, for a treat, the Amman line was sealed, by loss of a main bridge. This was the side of quickest reinforcement for Deraa and its death made our rear safe. Even we had helped poor Zeid, behind them in Abu Lissan, to rifle Turks massed in Tafileh would boil up that attack till their communications were again open. Our last campaign was becoming magnificently easy.

CHAPTER XXXI

WE CUT THE MAIN LINES

Duly, before dawn, we drove upon the track of Stirling's cars, eager to be with them before their fight. Unfortunately the going was not helpful. At first we had a bad descent, and then difficult flat ran jagged dolerite, across which we crawled painfully. Later we ran over ploughed slopes. The soil was heavy for the cars, for with summer drought this red earth cracked upward wide and two or three inches wide. The five-ton armoured cars were reduced to first speed, and nearly stuck.

We overtook the Arab army about eight in the morning, on the crest of the slope to the Jordan, as it was deploying to attack the Turkish force guarding redoubt between us and the mound of Tell Arar whose head overlooked the Damascus line.

Ruala horsemen, led by Trad, dashed down the long slope to cover the liquorice-grown bed of the watercourse to the line. Young bounced after them in his Ford. From the ridge we thought the railway also was empty for a shot, but while we gazed, suddenly from the neglected Turkish post came a curious spitting fire, and our braves who had been standing in splendid attitudes on the covered line were ordering privately what on earth to do next) disappeared.

Nuri Said moved down Pisani's guns and fired a few shots. Then the Ruala and Joyce rushed the redoubt easily, with only one killed. So the seventeen ten miles of the Damascus line was freely ours by nine in the morning. It was the only railway to Palestine and Hejaz and I could hardly realise our fortune; hardly believe that we were to Allenby was fulfilled so simply and so soon.

The Arabs streamed down from the ridge in rivers of men, and swarmed upon the round head of Tell Arar, to look over their plain, whose rimmed Dalzaan the early sun speciously relieved, by yet throwing more shadow than light. Our soldiers could see Deraa, Sahnib and Ghasale, the three keystations, with their naked eyes.

I was seeing farther than this, northward to Damascus, the Turkish base, their only link with Constantinople and Germany, now cut off, southward to Amman and Msan and Medina, all 'cut off'; westward to Lizan on Sandars detailed in Nazareth, to Nablus, to the Jordan Valley. Today was September the seventeenth, the promised day, forty-eight hours before Allenby would throw forward his full power. In forty-eight hours the Turks might decide to change their dispositions to meet our new danger; but they could not change them before Allenby struck. Barrholonew had said, "Tell me if he will be in his Aujs line the day before we start, and I will tell you if we will win." Well, he was, so we would win. The question was by how much.

I wanted the whole line destroyed in a moment; but things seemed to have stopped. The army had done its share: Nuri Said was pushing machine-guns about the Arar mound to keep back any sortie from Deraa; but why was there no demolition going on? I rushed down, to find Peake's Egyptians making breakfast. It was like Drake's game of bowls and I fell dumb with admiration.

However, in an hour they were mustered for their rhythmic demolition by numbers; and already the French gunners, with their field guncotton, had descended trenches upon the near bridge. They were not yet ready but at the second try did it some hurt.

From the head of Tell Arar, between the mirage had begun to dance we examined Deraa carefully through my strong glass, wanting to see what the Turks had in store for us this day. The first discovery was disturbing. Their aerodrome was alive with gangs pulling machine after machine into the open. I could count eight or nine lined up. Otherwise things were as we expected. Some Turks were already doubling out into the defence-fired towards, in which we were four miles off. Locomotives were getting up steam, but the trains were unarmoured. Behind us, towards Damascus, the country lay still as a map. From all that I could see right there was no movement. We held the initiative.

Our hope was to fire six hundred charges, fully fashioned, pulling out of commission six kilometres of rail. Tulips had been invented by Peake and myself for this occasion. Thirty ounces of guncotton were planted beneath the centre of the central sleeper of each ten-metre section of the track. The sleepers were steel, and their box-shape like an air-chamber which the gas exploding filled, to blow the middle of the sleeper upward. If the charge was properly laid, the metal did not snap, but humped itself, bud-like, two feet in the air. The lift of it pulled the rails three inches up, the drag of it pulled them six inches in together; and as the chairs gripped the bottom flanges, warped them inward seriously. The triple distortion put them beyond repair. Three or five sleepers would be likewise ruined, and a trench driven across the earthwork: all this with one charge, fired by fuse so short that the first blowing of one other third was being lighted, cast its tulip-flower.

Six hundred such charges would take the Turks a fair week to mend. This would be a generous reading of Allenby's "three men and a boy with gelignite." I turned to go back to the troops, and at that moment two things happened. Peake fired his first charge, lit on a poplar-tree of black smoke, with a fine explosion; and from the first Turkish machine got up and came for us. Nuri Said and I fitted admirably under an outcrop of rock, flattened into deep natural trenches, on the hill's southern face. There we waited coolly for the bomb, but it was only a reconnaissance machine, Pfalzi, which studied us, and returned to Deraa with its news.

GOVT TO ASSIST CANCER RESEARCH

Tissue to Carry on Work Available After Minister's Visit

Toronto, Aug. 22—(CP)—Impressed with the cancer discovery announced recently by Dr. Hendry C. Connell from his laboratory, Queen's University, Kingston, but not yet ready to approve it as a cure, the Ontario Government has moved to assure Dr. Connell of a supply of cancerous tissue for research work.

"The Minister of Health through one of his deputies is soliciting the co-operation of the staffs of various public hospitals in supplying cancerous tissues to Dr. Connell," Dr. R. T. McGhie, Deputy Minister of Health, said today.

"He hasn't got to the point yet where the government can put the stamp of approval on it as a cure, Dr. McGhie added, "but he's going about it in the right way."

In mid-July Dr. Connell announced the discovery of a new series of biological products through use of which he believes cancer could be lead to subjugation of cancer. He has named the products "amoebe one of which he says in the test "arrests the development of carcinoma cancer and may control it."

It was not a positive cancer cure the 59-year-old specialist and research worker announced but he said conclusive laboratory findings and remarkable clinical effects in actual treatment forced him to make public his progress in order that fresh luppies of cancerous tissues might be obtained.

Dr. McGhie visited Dr. Connell last week and since then an official of the Health Department has been in Kingston seeking co-operation of hospital authorities in assuring Dr. Connell of cancerous tissue.

"It takes months of cancer work to know the final results" said Dr. McGhie, "but we thought it worth giving him help for further study."

THREE INDICTED IN KING'S MURDER

Believed They Took Part in Assassination Plot

Aix-en-Provence, France, August 22 (AP)—Three actors in a drama that precipitated a European war are stood formally indicted today for the slaying of King Alexander of Yugoslavia.

The three, Ivan Rajich, Mio Kralj and Zvonimir Pospechi were handed over to the Criminal Court yesterday, more than ten months after the crime. They will be tried on double charges of complicity in the assassination and association with known criminals.

The three Croat revolutionists, accused of aiding Bulgarians to slay the Yugoslavian King, have been locked in military confinement. They have maintained they were far from Marseille, October 9 when the monarch was murdered in that place. However, the police say they confessed participation in the assassination plot.

Kralj, 36, and youngest of the three, is described by Bulgarian police quoted by police as saying, "I would kill King myself if I had a chance" has complained of being "terrorized" in prison. Night and day he, like the others, is surveyed by a keeper through the "Judas hole" in the cell door. They are constantly watching his every movement, watching him eat and sleep, is hypnotizing him, say he and a physician who examined him suffered he was "slightly deranged."

Pospechil, 31, says he doesn't at all mind the eye at the "Judas hole." When he enjoyed "solitary" late in October he could look at it. "The Three Musketeers." A German translation was given him and the jailer says he has read it through three times and is starting on his fourth adventure with "Dumas' heroes.

Rajlich, 32, "just eats and sleeps, says the turnkey.

At the time the late Mr. Phillips had made his home with his brother, Mr. Harry Phillips at Phillipston. (Brighton paper pleas copy)

JAMES ADDISON SILLS

(Ormstown, Quebec)

James Addison Sills, a former resident of Marlbor Township, died at his home at Ormstown, Quebec, on Sunday, August 18th, as the result of injuries sustained, when he fell from a ladder in the cheese factory a week prior to his death.

The late Mr. Sills, who was in his 70th year, was born in the concession of Thurlow, his parents being the late Mr. and Mrs. Walter Sills. He was educated in the public school and later graduated from the Ontario Business College, as a young man in this district he was well liked and those who knew him here will regret to learn of his death. Early in life he became a Presbyterian and was always consciently connected with the cheese factory business and took an interest in the affairs of the community where he lived and was always willing to do what he could towards its betterment in a business, social or religious way. He was vice president of the Farmers' Bell Telephone Company at Ormstown, where he had resided for the past 43 years. His death is a distinct loss to the community in which he was prominent and held in the highest esteem. He was a man of fine character and took an active interest in the affairs of the Presbyterian Church at Ormstown, occupying the position of Secretary Treasurer.

Surviving him are his widow, who prior to her, marriage was Miss Nellie Morrison of Ormstown, Quebec; two daughters, Miss Anna and Miss Ruth at home; one brother, Mr. Allan Sills of Thurlow; two sisters Mrs. Allan Twining of Toronto and Mrs. Fred Sills of Dickson. III.

The funeral took place on Monday from his late residence and was very largely attended.

MRS. SUSAN A. NAYLER (Madoc)

After a brief illness, Mrs. Susan Amy Nayler, of Madoc Village, widow of Samuel Nayler, passed away at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Wilson Aymer, New Toronto, on Wednesday evening. Early in the day visiting in Belleville she had been taken to New Toronto because so to wait her daughter and at that time she was apparently in her usual good state of health. Death passed has brought sorrow to all the members of her family and relatives, by whom she was much beloved, and to a large friend.

The late Mrs. Nayler, who was in her 83rd year, was born in Belleville, her parents being the late Mr. and Mrs. George Barlow. Her early life was passed in Belleville and after residing in Madoc for a number of years in Belleville, later returning to Madoc where she had made her home for the past thirty-three years. In Madoc she was well known and most highly esteemed by many friends for the fine qualities of character she possessed. In religion she was a member of the Church of England and always took an active interest in the work of the parish church at Madoc, being a member of the Women's Auxiliary.

Mrs. Edgar Irwin of Deseronto; sisters, Mrs. Hattie Carr of Belleville, and Mrs. Nellie Davis, of Kingston; nineteen grandchildren and eight great grandchildren.

The funeral will take place at Madoc on Saturday afternoon at 2.30 o'clock.

Left to mourn her passing are six sons, George J. Nayler and Arthur Nayler of Belleville; Fred C. Nayler, Percy Nayler and Edwin T. Nayler of Madoc; John B. Nayler of Toronto; one daughter, Mrs. Barlow of St. Catherine; three daughters, Mrs. Walter Ketcher and Mrs. Wilson Aymer, New Toronto; Mrs. William Aymer, New Liskeard; two brothers, John Barlow of Twendinags; Isaac Barlow of Toronto; one sister, Mrs. Barlow and George Barlow of Belleville; two

BODY IS FOUND DRAPED OVER TUB

Police Search Well-Groomed Man Seen Leaving House

Long Beach, Calif., Aug. 22—(AP)—The death of blond Mrs. Gladys Clara Fair whose body was found draped over the rim of her apartment bath tub, paused on a search today for a tall, well groomed man. The body of the attractive 34-year-old victim, naval board stenographer, was found in her apartment yesterday.

Her slayer apparently fired a bullet into the back of her head as he sat at her side on the arm of an overstuffed chair. The body, clad in a simple house frock, had been dragged from the living room to the bathtub.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Wray, occupants of an adjoining apartment, told investigators they saw an unknown well dressed man walking down the hallway near Mrs. Fair's apartment Monday night. They said he seemed startled at their appearance and fled down a stair way.

'CAPONE' MONKEY LEADS 175 OUT

Chattering Horde of Simians Scare 100 Railway Laborers

Massapequa, N. Y., Aug. 22—(AP)—Led by the redoubtable "Capone" 175 small rhesus monkeys escaped from Frank Buck's Jungle camp on Sunrise Highway near here.

One of Buck's employees had laid a plank from retaining wall to the moat which surrounds the artificial cliffs in which the animals live.

While the employee was busy, "Capone," bully of the colony and instigator of all acts of trouble, dashed across the plank. A gibbering band of his subjects followed.

After suffering minor scratches and bites employees succeeded in blocking the escape after 175 monkeys had crossed the plank. Two of the animals were captured.

The chattering horde scampered across the Long Island railroad track. An army of 100 railroad laborers dropped their tools and fled. The noise was terrific.

Nassau county police were asked to bring 'em back alive since Buck, rather good at this sort of thing, is in Singapore.

Board Room Gossip

As supplied to Bigger and Crawford by Financial Service

War clouds in Europe are assuming definite form and some sections of the stock market are beginning to reflect the possibility of strife on a major scale. The price of copper has moved up in the United States on heavy buying. Steel, nickel, lead and zinc are also covered in very necessary to warring nations. While every sane-thinking person abhors the thought of another war, one should nevertheless face realities. All preparations point to early to a war between Italy and Ethiopia which may have world-wide repercussion.

It is reported that Hiram Walker has been bought recently on gassy, that sales are ahead of last year and earnings likewise. The forthcoming annual statements of the leading Canadian distillery companies are certain to reveal excellent earnings and greatly improved financial position. The industry is now out of speculative class and can be considered as a steady earner.

The Stock Market Outlook

Stock market quotations represent it is said, the composite opinion of the future trend of business. At the moment the market appears to be averaging gradually more actively in many phases of industry during the next few months. Whether the advance in stock prices will carry much further without interruption is open to question. However, for longer term still seem to be distinctly favorable. On a long view point of the market to overreach itself temporarily but the trend of the basic upward trend should not be overlooked. Subject to this word of caution, the case for appreciation in value of sound Canadian equities is, in our opinion, by no means exhausted. (Orig. Ballantyne and Co.)

TORONTO STOCKS—Check up Thursday, Aug. 22—Heavy selling disrupted the price level for the gold shares on the Toronto Mining Market today, the high price issues displaying more weakness than the cheaper stocks. Much of the selling was reported to be coming from New York, certainly up to more than a point were recorded in the group. Trade in the list was on a large scale with some of the prices showing pronounced gains and also small losses. Silvers turned fairly strong after an early dip.

Active selling of the gold shares and declining prices featured the mining market in the early trading. Lake Shore dropped to 47¾, off 1¼. Dome to 9¾, down ¼. McIntyre to 94½, down ½ and Hollinger, Wright-Hargreaves and Pioneer were all off ½ to ¾. Coniagas, both McIntyres and Lake Shore sold down a few points for the year, secondary golds followed down. God's Lake, Moneta, Preston East Dome, McKenzie dropping 5 to 10 cents each.

Some of the base metal stocks held up, particularly Noranda and Falconbridge. Most of the rest of the cheaper issues were off narrowly. Thursday's trade in the senior golds sharply down from that of the two previous sessions. Silver stocks slipped but recovered in the early afternoon.

TORONTO MINES

Toronto, Aug. 22—Trading jogged along at a very slow pace on the Toronto industrial share market today and prices were barely able to hold as scattered offerings appeared. Oils and liquors were up thru' the early part of the session but these gains were lost and declines of any were able to close on the upside, the other showing minor losses.

Liquors also closed narrowly off, moving with the general trend.

Political developments in Europe dampened the trading spirit and the Toronto Stock Exchange felt the general tendency to move cautiously. Recent group leaders, the oils, golds and liquors, showed very few price changes by early afternoon. Noranda was off ¼ for Consolidated Smelters. Recessions very seldom exceeded the fractional gain.

A gain of ¼ to 30 and of a point in Supertest common was the only important changes in the oil group. International Nickel held nearly to its 1940 gains. Seagrams had a gain of ¼ and Brazilian was off ¼.

The utilities were slightly soft and other foods were already.

WALL ST. FINANCIAL

New York, Aug. 22— Steels continued to hold the attention of the stock market today, a number leading issues into new high territory for the year along with a few farm implement specialties.

Among Canadian stocks McIntyre added a point, Hollinger, International Nickel and Canadian Pacific rails fractions, while Brazilian, the curb Lake Shore was down a point but Hiram Walker ruled steady. Consolidated Smelters, Noranda and Falconbridge were unchanged.

Share gainers up fractions to 2 points were Allied Chemical, Canada Dry, Du Pont, Inland Steel, Loudon Packing, National Dairy, National Lead and International Harvester. Among those showing small losses were U. S. Smelting, Cerro de Pasco, American Telephone, Auburn, Remington Rand, Coca-Cola, Continental Can, National Distillers, Deere, Caterpillar Tractor and Allied Chemical "B". The majority of the motor, oil, rail and rail issues held to a slim groove.

NEW YORK CLOSE

New York, Aug. 22—(AP)—An active stock market today found the steels again in high favor. Many of the issues were about a point or more above the heavy industry divisions. Some of the mining and farm equipment issues up to more than the majority of the rails, utilities and specialties were narrow.

Issues at new 1938 tops, with gains of fractions to 4 points, included U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, National Steel, Republic Steel, International Nickel, Allis-Chalmers and Case and International Harvester. Among others up to 3 points were American Telephone, Radio Corp. Radio Preferred "B", Coca-Cola, Crucible Steel, U. S. Smelting, Cerro de Pasco, Deere, and Caterpillar Tractor.

United Fruit dropped a point and Douglas Aircraft and United Aircraft were about unchanged. Motors and rails were also fairly firm. Transfers approximated 1,700,000 shares.

Fields Price

New Ontario locations were quoted yesterday by the Ontario House Producers' Association as follows:

Potatoes, delivered at cars, per bag to the retail trade, Prince Edward, old potatoes were 60 to 65 cents.

Honey Prices

Wholesale prices for honey supplied by the Ontario House Producers' Association yesterday were: Comb honey, per case, $5.50; golden grade all sizes, $3.36; light amber, all sizes, $4.25; dark buckwheat grade, all sizes, $4.

ECONOMIC ACTION FROM G. BRITAIN FACES AGGRESSOR

as by 142, 10 Downing Street.

The Premier's statement formed in happy phrase as he and his son, Malcolm, flew from Montreal to Toronto for their home.

Although the official temperature was 87 degrees, Premier Mackenzie King Donald said: "We are very calm here in Canada."

The Ministers, all of whom were present, fully endorsed the plans which the British had laid down in the course of the League of Nations session to action next month.

Ministers Debated

Mainly it was understood, they debated the question of sanctions the punishment of nations which violate treaty or their international code behavior.

The cabinet finally adjourned at 4.00 p.m.

Lord Hailsham, Lord Chancellor, and Sir Samuel Hoare, Secretary for Dominions, were the first to leave the office the latter saying: "We have things to do."

ITALY ALLOWS PLEADING NOTE

Asperity of Press References To Britain Are Softened

(By A. J. Sturzo)

(Associated Press Foreign Staff)

Rome, Aug. 22.—(AP)—The Italian government today for the first time allowed a pleading note to creep into the officially inspired press, engaged in a Polemic against Great Britain.

The plea was summed up by Virginio Gayda, political writer for the Giornale D'Italia, under the headline "No Conflict But Collaboration".

The most caustic of recent critics regarding Britains "obstructionism" to Mussolini's designs in Ethiopia, Gayda wrote today:

"It is above all things certain no general hostility toward England and all its vast empire exists in Italy."

Pointing out the great distance between centres of British opinion regarding Mussolini's aims in Ethiopia, Gayda pleaded for understanding of Italy's designs. Those designs, he wrote, are a logical outgrowth of effective civilization in a territory confined by three British possessions and an accompaniment of the recent royal economic friendship for the mutual benefit of all."

Gayda added, however, "it is Italy's hope to prove by itself with out in any way taking from those who have already taken." His heard this statement upon the recognized Italian desire to provide itself with colonies similar to Britain's provided for itself in the past. His editorial was the signal for the press at large to refrain from criticism of Britain.

Militarized to the last cabinet member young enough to be uniformed and out, Italy marched to the rhythm of its troops' departure to East Africa.

The nation awaited today news concerning the decision of the British Cabinet.

The press was editorially silent on the United States Senate's neutrality resolution.

Sailings of troop ships to East Africa will be multiplied during the coming week, Experts said the military port of Naples was ready to send out between 10,000 and 12,000 men weekly.

Tourists Witness Woodland Tragedy As Wolves Eat Alive a Young Fawn

North Bay, Aug. 22—(CP)— Nature in the raw can be relentlessly cruel, a party of United States tourists were convinced as they reached the grim woodland tragedy unfolded before their eyes in the early gray dawn of a Northern Ontario morning.

Returning from a fishing trip on the Martin River, a few miles off the Ferguson Highway near here, they saw a she-wolf and two cubs eat alive a young fawn.

Startled by frailty, the whinings and the snarl of fighting beasts in the bush, they edged closer and witnessed the two she-wolves pouncing on the helpless fawn as the she-wolf slinked nearby.

Once the fawn got to her feet but was tumbled by the she-wolf and the cubs fastened to their tedious attack. Making one last, desperate effort the fawn lashed out with a hoof and caught a cub between the eyes. They streaked away and the she-wolf left the shades of her claws, ended the life of the fawn.

Each year an untold number of deer are slaughtered by wolves but authorities said it was unique for such an event to take place in summer, when the wolves are usually shy and cowardly.

Mr. Tom Thompson spent Sunday a Cobourg.

Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Brown of Belleville called at Mr. Elijah Brickman's on Sunday.

TREK TO POLLS ON IN ALBERTA TODAY

Nomination Day Passed Without One Acclamation Registered

Edmonton, Aug. 22 (CP)—The first "harvest election" in Alberta's history today was expected to bring out the greatest number of voters ever recorded. An intensive campaign carried on throughout the rural six urban ridings—from the far northern constituencies to the southern boundary—created greater interest than ever before.

The trek to the polls started at 9 a.m. with a promise of fair weather. Polls in the rural ridings close at 6 p.m., D.S.T., (9 p.m. E.D.T.) and in the cities at 7 p.m. (10 p.m., E.D.T.)

No Acclamations

With no acclamations on nomination-day, every one of the 340 candidates contesting the 63 seats for the eighth legislature has at least three or more opponents. In Calgary and Edmonton a total of 97 candidates are running for 12 seats—six in each constituency.

Premier Reid, head of the United Farmers of Alberta government since 1934, has his complete Cabinet slate with five incumbents. Irvine Parlby, who retired "in the field," W. R. Howson, Liberal head, and G. G. McPherson, Social Credit Conservative chieftain, are candidates.

The Alberta Social Credit League with its evangelist-economist founder, William Aberhart, at its head, has created a new threat for the U.F.A., in power since 1921.

Ten Petal Platform

William Aberhart, "56-year-old Calgary High School teacher and founder of a religious institute here advances a ten-petal platform as the basic plank in the promise of a $25 monthly dividend to every citizen in the Province. The Social Credit platform calls for assistance for both urban and rural dwellers, establishment of a "just price" to eliminate "all profiteering" and to remove "the demoralizing effect of unemployment."

People, who reach the age of 50 would be removed from productive employment, thought the payment of a monthly dividend or pension.

The Farmer Government of Premier Reid offers plans for relief from the debt-burden by the reduction of interest rates, substantial increases in Old Age Pensions and aid for agriculturists, including the possibility of Crop Insurance.

Reform is the keynote of the platform of the Conservative and Liberal platforms. Both parties sponsor a "just" system with monetary reform singled out as a major plank by the Liberals.

Russia Foresees End of Austria

Moscow, Aug. 22.—(AP)— Belief that war in Ethiopia would lead to complications involving other powers than Italy was expressed last night in the official press.

No doubt was left by the tone of the inspired articles that the Soviet Union would consider an Italo-Ethiopian war one of "conquest, and would heed accordingly.

The angle which created the keenest interest here, was that of a possible weakening of Mussolini's position, in Europe, through a drain of troops and money for an African campaign.

There have been repeated charges in Soviet papers, that the Nazi of Germany are preparing to gobble up Austria, accompanied by the opinion that a weakening of Italy in Europe would hasten the operation.

$250,000 SHORT FOR 1935 RELIEF

York Township May Be Unable to Finance Relief

Toronto, Aug. 22—Unless the province comes across with a substantial contribution, York Township will be unable to finance its relief affairs after September 1.

The township fathers went into a financial huddle yesterday and the first blow to their plans was the refusal of the Canadian Bank of Commerce to give a loan. Then came the statement from the Comptroller of Finance, C. M. Wrenshall, that it would be impossible for the municipality to use the additional sum needed.

Over and above the $7.50 per capita per month to be paid by the Government, it was pointed out that the township would have to dig up $200,000 for the remaining four months of the year. All the township has left is $50,000 for relief. The township's share for a 12-month period, would be $780,500 and with a deduction of $200,000 which the township has been annually appropriating, this would leave $580,000 for the province or the township to find.

Bay Gives Life to Save Father

Wellington, Ont., Aug. 22—(CP)—Elmer Smith, 22-year-old farmer, gave his life to save his father.

The youth, Ernest or Hillier, leaped from his work to halt a runaway team of horses dragging his father, Wesley Smith, across the field. Elmer became entangled in the harness and was fatally trampled before the team came to a stop.

LAVAL WORRIED OVER BRITAIN

Fears Action Opposing Italy May Make Italy Leave League

(By Richard G. Massock)

(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Paris, Aug. 22.—(AP)— Worries of Premier Pierre Laval over the possible wrecking of the League of Nations were increased today as the view was growing here that the opposing action by the British Government would make Italy doubly determined to conquer the Ethiopian Empire.

Following the frank admission of Baron Aloisi, Italy's spokesman at the Tri-Power Conference in Paris that Italy was strongly considering quitting the League, the French hoped the British Cabinet's deliberations would result in a "friendly decision".

Laval hoped a conciliatory sentiment would permit diplomatic activity to continue with Il Duce in a receptive mood. Although Mussolini has refused to brook interference with his campaign in East Africa, Laval has been negotiating with him with a view to averting war, if he cannot prevent it entirely.

French officials expressed belief it would be impossible for Great Britain to close the Suez Canal to Italian reinforcements in enforcement of sanctions without running the danger of Il Duce considering it a hostile act.

"AL" DENOUNCES RELIGIOUS POLICY

New York, Aug. 22—(AP)—Delegates to the 53rd annual Supreme Convention of the Knights of Columbus went into final session after hearing former Governor Alfred E. Smith denounce the religious policies of Mexico, Germany and the Soviet Republic.

"Almighty God is all-wise, all-just and all-merciful and I don't see why he does not strike dead the men there who are filling the minds of the children with their propaganda and poisoning their faith."

"In Germany," he said, "Hell, a Jew isn't a man, although his people sent the Redeemer into the world. A Catholic is not a man either, although in his veins flows the blood of the King of Kings. A man there is one, who has the blood of Barbarians in him.

In Russia there is no great difference between an animal and a man."

Thanksgiving Date Stands For Thursday

OTTAWA, Aug. 22.— Opposition to any further change in the date of Thanksgiving day for this year was expressed today by J. H. Chan secretary of state, Churches favored Thursday instead of Monday for the holiday.

The secretary of state has received letters deciding the date. Originally it was fixed for Monday, October 14, but when this was selected as election day, Thanksgiving was moved to October 28, a Thursday.

"For over 40 years," Mr. Chanas said in a statement, "Thanksgiving day was always fixed for a Thursday in October. The day as the King's proclamation always states is fixed as a day of general thanksgiving to Almighty God for the bounties with which Canada has been favored during the year.

He rose early and went to the window and stood looking down upon thousands of his mounted warriors, drilling with medieval lances, long swords on the green grounds of the palace, rain was falling, drenching the soldiers.

"We are struggling with our backs to the wall," he said, "We are doomed against all our wishes to fight a mighty power, which possesses enough ammunition and instruments of death to overwhelm a much stronger nation.

EMPEROR SELASSIE PRAYS FOR PEACE

Declares Ethiopia Will Not Be First to Draw Blood

By JAMES A. MILLS

By The Associated Press

Copyright, 1935

Addis Ababa, Aug. 22—The soft voice of Emperor Haile Selassie, gentle-eyed figure seated in the Council-chamber room of the Imperial Palace, today was lifted in prayer to prevent his 7,000-year-old kingdom of Ethiopia from being drenched in blood.

"God, give me the patience and courage to wait and seek every unity all efforts for peace are exhausted," he said in a private interview. "We shall not be the first to draw blood."

"I still have faith in England," he continued, "I am still hopeful the League of Nations will work out a solution. But if it was executed our gun an order for blood must come and we are ready to preserve the kingdom our fathers gave us.

"We would be untrue to our great past, which goes beyond biblical times and we would stain our proud record of victories if we failed in our duty."

"If Italy attempts to conquer us" he said earnestly, "we shall repeat our victory of Adua. We shall be strong because we must."

"I cannot understand England preventing ammunition from reaching us. We were handicapped enough without this further hindrance. Are we to fight with spears and leather shields against machine gun bullets?"

Under the preamble of the treaty of 1920 says clearly Ethiopia shall be allowed to obtain all the arms necessary to defend ourselves from external aggression. How can England break such a clear treaty?"

Restlessly the Emperor paced the parquet floor suddenly whirling to cry:

"Where can we turn for help when the wolf of Italy is already at our throats?

"We know we have the highest moral right on our side. With the moral support and encouragement of great friendly countries we know we would triumph. But it is sad to speak even of triumph. I pray triumph will come only in peace which hath a greater glory than war."

SINISTER SHADOW

by JOHN GOODWIN

"So I took the thing home, and she said it up. An' there it is."

"Wait a moment. You fished this up at nine this morning."

Shaw, and looked at the clock. The little man's face turned sullen.

"Honest to goodness, Mister," he pleaded, "I never meant to harp it. Just carried it around with me, lookin' at it now and then ... it's uncommon pretty. An' might be worth a bit. After a bit it soured on every time I took it out. Somethin' about that stone gave the cold shivers.

"Tain't more than an hour ago I thought I'd show it to my missus, who'd just come back from Northchester. I asked her what my'd best do. She went up in the air when she saw it.

"You old fool," said she, "That'll be Squire Coote's; it's all over the town that she's been murdered, an' the police are lookin' for the man that's been in Cooke dealt in d'y'monds; he'd a stone belongin to the family that's worth Lord knows what. Take that-thing out-o'-my sight—take it along to the sergeant at King's Elm before it burns you!"

"How right the ladies always are!" said Howe. "See, you've had a close call but there's nothing to be scared about now. We'll look after you; meanwhile I've a word of warning to give you. Tell your wife to hold her tongue. Do you think she can do that?"

"Better'n I can."

"For the present hold it tighter than a shoplifter's fist, you. This is a hanging case. You tell your story pretty well. But just keep it strictly to yourself till you have word from me; you'll do yourself some good, and steer clear of all trouble. Get that?"

"Yes sergeant!"

"You'll be wanted later. One or two questions, Yen, and you can go. Get your memory busy; what time was it when you saw that man by the dew-pond?"

Ben carried on which, and was at first uncertain as to time. Howe fired him. He had left him at half past nine and was by the pond for about an hour later. All that happened there did not take more than three or four minutes. He went straight home — fifteen minutes' walk—arriving shortly before the storm broke.

"I'd make it about ten minutes after I got in when the rain came down in buckets; thunder an' lightnin' fair terrifying," said Ben.

Howe nodded. Coulter had been at the pond around ten-thirty-five, as near as judgment could fix it. The tempest had broken three or four minutes before eleven.

"That'll do, Ben. I'll see your wife in the morning".

Ben stood up, immensely relieved. As he moved to the door he glanced wistfully at the great glittering gem on the table. Brian stopped him, and thrust a couple of rustling notes into the little man's laundry list in his fist. Ben's fingers closed around them. He hesitated, saluted. Brian nodded respectfully. Then he shuffled out and was gone.

"What did you give that man, sir?" said Howe.

"A couple of pounds. He's earned that—and a bit more. Poor Ben! He's entitled to a little rake-off. Not that the diamond is worth much more than I gave him. Take a look at it, Howe."

Howe picked up the Coote stone from the table. It lay glittering on the palm of his huge hand; to the eye it was perfection. He was no expert on gems . . . He moved to a picture hanging on the wall and drew the stone sharply across the corner of the glass. The stone simply squeezed smoothly over the pane, making no more scratch than if it had been a decimal-stopper. Howe nodded.

"Paste!" he said. "And it fits in exactly, sir, with everything you've told me. A mighty clever fake. Where's the real stone? I suppose no one but the dead man could tell us that. And I don't much care. But I suppose you do."

"Me! Forget it, Howe. Though the real stone is worth thirty thousand, I value that fake higher than I do the Coote Diamond. It's a damning proof—which poor orchard was lacking—that Barber was not only on the spot last night, but knew why he was there and what he did."

"Do you think so, Mr. Chalmers!"

CHAPTER XXIV

"What do you make of Ben's story? I'd like you to tell me your view of it. Just as you please of course," Howe said.

Sonia sat up in her chair, sirri and stirred. Her eyes were on Britain's face.

"No objection in the world, sergeant," said Brian. "It's a dashed queer story, and I'll give you the answer, as I see it. To me, it's simple enough.

"Barber got the fake diamond last night from Ben. He ,er's body, that's obvious. How came it in her pocket?

Bannister might.n't have had the money handy to buy Barber off; and if he had it would be like drawing teeth to get it out of him.

"The Coote Diamond didn't belong to Bannister. It's a family heirloom. Strictly he'd no right to have it at King's Elm at all; it should have been banked and under care of the Trustee, but it wasn't. He couldn'.sell it; he held it for life like the rest of the property. At his death it would belong to his heir. But if he were ever called to account for the Coote Diamond, Bannister was just the man to fake some story about a robbery and get away with it. He thought he could fool Barber with the faked stone."

"Do you really think that's so?" said Howe.

"There's the evidence on the table! Now what, exactly, Bannister's plan of action was, I don't pretend to tell you. Barber was pretty wise in gems; A dummy stone like that wouldn't fool him for long—he'd be dished sooner or later—he tried to realise on it or . . . get it cut up. I'm an expert—it wouldn't fool me even in the dark.

"It sounds a risky thing to do, to pass a copy of a well-known jewel like the Coote Diamond into Barber's hands—deliver it up in a black-mailer. But Bannister was as deep as the devil. I'm mighty sure he wasn't that blunderin or brave for time. He was laying a trap for the cheap crook, which Barber promptly never have escaped.

"I believe that Barber, though he was ready to take any risks to get the goods, was more afraid of Bannister than ever Bannister was of him.

He may have smelt the trap. "What happening when these two men got together —Barber and Bannister—I don't know and I'm not going to guess. That's for you to fill in. Bannister is dead.

"I pass on to Sam Barber, making his getaway. Uphill along the old mine path . . . and the lime Coulter saw him. You'll remember, he was laughing. Which scared out little shepherd, if you remember. He didn't like that laugh. He suggested the man might be drunk. Well, perhaps he was; or maybe his sense of humor had got working.

"He comes up the path; and he sees the wake of the dew-pond starting—the only water there is about here. He hails to wash his hands. Barber's hands would be apt to need washing after he'd handled Bannister's body. Wouldn't they?"

"They would, said Howe briefly.

"Walks quickly and hurriedly, and dries his hands. Then he fumbles in his pockets; evidently there's something he isn't quite easy about. The Coote Diamond is in his head now. Tough hand, a bit hornier than mine. And he swears. He doesn't like the feel of that stone.

"Ben sees the spark of a torch; he thinks the fellow is getting a look at his watch wants to know the time. Instead—Barber tries one the thirty-thousand-pound stone on his watch-glass. Thirty thousand gone sky-high. Ben's police—that we say—of murder. He's got nothing, after all! Sam's language nearly dried up the pond. His night's work wasted. He ten thousand mile hurry'er a frost. The dead man's chest-of him. He stands the dummy on the pond. It's not only useless, but if it were found on him, it would hang him.

"Off goes Sam into the night and the storm . . . where I don't propose to follow him even in theory; it's your job, it's up it the thirty-five thousand members of the police force. And that's that."

Britain sat back in his chair. Sonia had listened intently. She gave no sign. Her face inscrutable, it was impossible to tell what she thought. Howe looked at Brian with an expression that might have been astonishment, or amusement.

"Am I right, Howe?"

"Not a bad shot, in its way, sir." "Can you improve on it?"

"Yes, I think so. You'll remember that Ben, who gave us a very full account of what he thought he saw an' heard, mentioned that there was a rustling sound when the chap by the pond started to fumble in his pockets. Presently grabbed the

OPEN GATES ON C. N. E. FRIDAY

57th Annual Exhibition at Toronto Bigger Than Ever

Toronto, Aug. 22 (COP) — The Fifth Canadian National Exhibition, more varied and colorful than ever, receives its official benediction tomorrow at 2.36 p.m. when Lieutenant-Governor Bruce delivers his address.

Long before that however, lines of adults and youngsters will have formed at the numerous entrances and the great exhibition park, virtually deserted for 50 weeks of the year, will be throbbing with music and shouting and activity.

Midway and grandstand and hobby are refreshment concessions will surge into life. In the many large buildings, arts, science, industry, manufactures, livestock, agriculture, flowers, varied aspects of the life of Canada and other nations will be on display. Along the waterfront throngs will watch the long-distance swims and boat races each day for the two week period will see further competition in sports, art and crafts.

Tonight, the eve of the opening, exhibits of the government building will be thrown open for private view. An electrical impulse will flash across the Atlantic ocean from the library of H. Thomas, secretary for the Dominions, at London. The impulse will switch on a light, which will inform waiting thousands that the big building is open.

THIRD SIDNEY

Third Sidney, August 22.—The shower that came on Wednesday morning was much appreciated by the farmers, as this section of the country has been exceptionally dry for several weeks.

Stunt Flying Scares Horses

Stratford, Aug. 22.—William Cardwell, Downie farmer near here, can stand horse flies, mosquitoes and other pests, but when aeroplanes bother him for the second time in a month, he draws the line.

While working yesterday, Cardwell claims an aeroplane, pilot did stunts above him in his machine, at one time flying only two or three feet from his head. Horses Cardwell was driving became frightened, and the farmer was thrown to the ground, but escaped injury.

The horses stopped their dash around a tree, unscathed, and with the harness and wagon, Now Cardwell is trying to learn the pilot's name, and wonders whether he could take court action.

Bette Davis and George Brent featured in "Front Page Woman," on the two-feature bill now at the Belle.

NOT EVEN BRITISH THREATS CAN STOP IL DUCE

Even the prospect that Britain will be drawn into armed conflict isn't curbing Italy's warlike gestures against Ethiopia, and here is more recent photo of him to arrive from Italy. —Il Duce is seen Balbo (arrow), who was "exiled" to Africa after trans-Atlantic flying triumph, is here significantly Duce's "right hand man."

CAT ADOPTS FAMILY OF PUPPIES WHEN MOTHER DIED

Things looked pretty gloomy for these wee Scottie pups when their mother died shortly after their arrival in this tough old world of knocks, bangs and bill collectors.

Along came Jenny and, after the manner of nearly a mother's day when such emergencies arise, she commandeered the whole family situation. "Here you, stand aside, woman's place is in the home and that this is where I shine beside mouse-catching." The picture shown here is proof of the pudding, with her adopted family of three Skye terriers near Winnipeg.

Current Attractions at Local Theatres

What Local Theatre Managers Have to Say About Current Offerings

AT THE BELLE

"Going Highbrow"

Previews Misty Langley "Front Woman" Pat Moving Drama.

"Going Highbrow" Warner Bros. comedy, based on the riotous play by Ralph Spence is at the Belle tonight and Friday, matinee and night.

The picture is said to be filled with hilarious situations, snappy dialogue, new and unique screen laughs as well as a delightful romance.

The story involves the rise of a poor mid-west farmer who, suddenly gains riches, and his wife, who goes highbrow and tries to break into society.

The wife engages a high powered press agent who agrees to put them across through the sponsorship of an impoverished artistic family who is in for it.

Guy Kibbee and Zasu Pitts play the stellar roles of the farmer and his neighbor, which are the leading comedy parts.

Edward Everett Horton appears as the blundering press agent and Ann Sothern, Helen Ross, Alexander and Pete Martel have the romantic roles.

Special music and lyrics were written for the picture by Louis Alter and Sidney Mitchell.

Belle Davis-George Brent

"Front Page Woman", Warner Bros. fast-moving comedy-drama, and one of the most realistic and exciting of ally newspaper screen drama with Belle Davis and George Brent in the stellar roles, is the second feature attraction on the same program.

It is entirely different from any other newspaper play. Belle Davis plays the role of the newspaper woman and George Brent is the reporter who is in love with her.

Roscoe Karns plays a comedy role as Brent's photographer while Winifred Shaw has the part of a Broadway stroller who finally confesses to slaying a wealthy playboy after Gordon Westcott, who was with her at the time, has been convicted of the crime.

Others in the large and talented cast include Walter Walker, J. Carroll Naish, Dorothy Dare, June Martel, J. Farrell MacDonald, Addison Richards and Mike Morita.

"Front Page Woman" is one newspaper film that newspaperman can see without getting angry. It is fast, clean and thrilling entertainment, with a good love story and lots of humor. It should not be missed.

Performances start daily at 2.30, 7.15, the last complete show starting at 8.30. "Going Highbrow" commences at 2.40, 7.25 and 9.26. "Front Page Woman" commences at 1.45 and 8.30 p.m.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Baby Face Harrington"

Uproarious Comedy Hit and Dick Powell Sings Two Songs.

If you like to laugh—and who doesn't?—run, don't walk, to the Capitol Theatre this week-end where "Baby Face Harrington", the funniest film of the year is sharing honors with Victor McLaglen's interpretation of the famous outlaw in "Bordertown."

"Baby Face Harrington" is not only funny, but most original. It has no parallel for comparison, because its star, Charles Butterworth, is unique among comedians.

Although the picture principally concerns the exploits of the unassuming Butterworth, Una Merkel shares honors as his wife. They make the most comical team.

Briefly, the humor of "Baby Face Harrington" lies in its situations. A man with family ties is involved with one of the toughest gang's bombing the country and is suspected of being the chief of the gang. While the police search and hunt for his arrest, he is perilously the guest of the gang in their retreat. Butterworth's innocent mind is calculated to push you right out of your chair.

Besides Butterworth and Una Merkel as fun makers, the cast includes Nat Pendleton, gangster chief, Eugene Pallette as a small town preacher, Donald Meek, Harry Stephens and Ruth Selwyn also aid in unravelling this humorous story.

For the added feature attraction the Capitol presents the well-remembered historical figure, Dick Turpin, as portrayed by the virile Victor McLaglen.

As we all know, from our school books, "Dick Turpin" was a bold adventurer, who feared nothing, not even the moment he had to face the music.

Dick Turpin's life so romantically set down in Harrison Ainsworth's book, "Rookwood" has been translated to the screen in a most entertaining manner.

Victor McLaglen, is right at home in the role of the famous highwayman, who displays extraordinary feats of strength in his combats and disdaining the use of pistols, likes to hurl his foes through windows and duck them in ponds. One minute he is holding up a stage coach and relieving the occupants of their jewelery and the next he is saving those very occupants from injury by stopping the runaway team of horses. He takes from the rich to give to the poor—incidentally a gallant gentleman, and a romantic lover.

One of the high spots of the film is supposed to be his famous ride to York to save the girl he loves from a forced marriage. This is the ride that made Dick Turpin famous in history.

Besides these two features, there is the weekly showing of the latest current events as caught by the Fox Movietone cameras man in all parts of the world. The engagement is for three days starting Thursday.

FISHERFOLK, FARMERS LOSE HOMES IN FIRES

Nothing But Cloudbursts Will Bring Relief in Some Sections

(By The Canadian Press)

Hundreds of fisherfolk and farmers were homeless in Maritime Canada today as forest fires, which had ravaged five small settlements, created a red trail toward more helpless communities.

Forest rangers declared nothing less than cloudbursts would bring relief in some sections of New Brunswick and Nova Scotia.

Flames were still raging along a narrow Cape Breton peninsula after having razed the tiny fishing village of Waddell Cove and 10 homes. Anglican Church, schoolhouse and numerous fishing shacks in the nearby settlement of South Head.

Refugees from blackened peninsula by boat more than 100 homeless fisherfolk were given shelter at Port Morien and other towns along the coast. They had lost all their possessions.

Fires were reported in nearly every county of New Scotia, and one in Hants County was endangering upper Rawdon, Enfield, Elmsdale and Shubenacadie.

Farmers near upper Cagetown and Centreville, two large New Brunswick villages, were deserting their homes as flames approached. A new settlement near Teacoffe in Gloucester County, nine dwellings at Hodgins and the railway station at Belle Dune were destroyed by fires.

Canadian Motorist Fails British Test

Huntingdon, England, Aug. 22.—A Canadian fell afoul of the stringent motor-driving test regulations in the first case of its kind tried in England.

Frederick Charles Townsend, whose home address was not given, and who failed to pass a driving test on his recent arrival here, made application for a fresh test within a month. It was dismissed.

Townsend said he had held a driving license in Canada for 14 years, had never had an accident although he had driven as many miles he couldn't estimate them. He drove his last car for 34,000 miles, he said.

He complained the test given him here was not according to regulations, and he could not understand the questions put to him by the woman examiner.

A garage proprietor who accompanied Townsend on the test said that under similar conditions 99 per cent. of those tested would have failed. Townsend was a competent driver, he added.

Beatie Holmes, the examiner, said she had tested about 200 applicants and 40 had failed. She was of the opinion Townsend had not passed the test "as a whole."

NEUTRALITY ACT IS MANDATORY

Discretion of President Taken Away By Clauses

Washington, Aug. 22—(AP)—Behind the scenes in the senior struggle was in progress today on the question of neutrality legislation and how best to keep the United States out of what one Senator called "the hell-born business of war."

Attacking the problem as Europe remained concerned over the Italian-Ethiopian crisis, the Senate passed a bill that would be an important alteration in long-standing policy. Among other things it would require the President without discretion on his part to put an embargo on exports of implements of war in any foreign belligerent.

Senatorial advocates of the plan insisted this was the way to help keep the United States out of foreign conflicts; that the embargo would thereafter apply to all nations who go to war and it should be mandatory on the executive branch.

On the other hand, some house members and some officials were known to be opposing this mandatory feature. They argued the provision is an invasion of the powers granted the President of the constitution to conduct the nation's foreign affairs.

Brockville Reports Tourist Trade Good

Brockville, Aug. 22. — Brockville retail business houses report that many midsummer trade chiefly attributable to the tourist business. One department store reports the last July and August business since 1928, with larger sales by tourists than in any other year, especially in linens and woollens.

At the close of business on Tuesday, the delivery service was requested to make three trips to the wharf front with large orders of these commodities for delivery to cottages from the United States coming here by motor boats. Blankets are one of the articles in great favor with tourists, each of whom is permitted to take home goods to the value of $100 duty free.) Furs are also in considerable demand.

Deer Harpooned, Warden Charges

Provincetown, Mass, Aug. 22.—If the crew of the Gloucester fishermen Hannah had been engaged in catching mackerel a lot of ill might have been averted.

First the seiner ran aground in a heavy fog and was towed to port by Coast Guards. Then Captain Philip Mosier was haled into court and fined $100 for illegal possession of deer meat.

Two bucks were swimming in the harbor, and one of them was brought aboard the boat by another fishing boat and released. A complaint was made that one of the bucks, N. Lamond the second "buck and harpooned the deer.

The crew ate a goodly portion of it before a game warden got aboard.

Dictatorship in U.S. Forecast as Possible

Antigonish, N.S., Aug. 22.—Failing the evolution of a new economic system, Dr. H. M. Cassidy, secretary of the Otito Farm Bureau Federation, said America faces dictatorship "of some kind".

Speaking at the 25th annual Rural and Industrial Conference of St. Francis Xavier University's Extension Department, he declared "we work out something voluntarily" or "we will have it forced."

In co-effort, he declared there is a fundamental likeness of co-operators, farmers and adult students, by the solution to pressing social problems. Co-operation in the United States and Canada, "Literacy, democracy and religion are the sounder, safest method" to solve the problems of the sister nations.

"We are on the eve," he said, "of the greatest co-operation movement that has ever taken place on the North American continent."

AGRICULTURAL BOARD DISBANDS

First Step Taken in New Economy Drive By Hepburn

Toronto, Aug. 22 (CP)—With the first step taken in the government's economy drive through disbanding of the Agricultural Development Board, the Ontario cabinet prepared today to go into special session to formulate the new relief policy and discuss means of reducing expenditure in the welfare department.

"There will be a bigger drive than ever," Premier Hepburn said as he announced the break up of the Development board. Unable to indicate where the premier would fall next, the Premier, however, said health, Northern development and welfare were the biggest spending departments.

In connection with Northern development he said no work would be done on arterial roads in Northern Ontario and the only construction to take place would be on the Trans-Canada highway on which commitments had been made.

Resignation will be asked of H. E. Drew and H. W. Paige, two members of the Board, as inspectors and numerous other officials. Liquidation of the $40,000,000 invested in farm loans will take place as quickly as possible providing the money can be collected, James Fraser, departmental official, will be in charge of the work.

The Premier quoted statistics to show there were 16,500 farm loans made by the Board and more than 250 farms were on the government's hands. Mr. Hepburn declared it was the government more than 33 1-3 per cent in effect on debts due in interest or the capital.

Affidavits of Agriculture Duncan Marshall was absent when the action took place. From Red Deer, Alta., however, he said the weight of the farm loans had been more than the government could bear and he traced the situation back to June when investment dealers failed to tender on the province's $20,000,000 bond issue.

DANUBIANS STUDY ETHIOPIAN CRISIS

LONDON, Aug. 22.—The opinion prevailing in informed circles here today that the attitude toward the Italo-Ethiopian crisis on the part of the Danubian nations of the highest importance, because of their known interest in maintaining the authority of the League of Nations and in strengthening European peace.

There was told official silence in Rumania, Jugoslavia and Czechoslovakia, but informed observers said they are so intimately connected with the possible eventual repercussions of an African conflict to remain aloof.

An Associated Press survey of sentiment in the Capitals of the three countries disclosed that officials are deprived of the news of hostilities involved.

In Bucharest, it was explained semi-officially that Rumania considered herself, Czechoslovakia and Jugoslavia in the same boat with Rumania responsible for peace, but not inclined to break with Italy. The newspapers were more outspoken, They expressed alarm concerning possible European repercussions.

Quints Must Have More Time To Rest

Callander, Aug. 22—The five little Dionne girls are not yet sufficiently grown up to do without sleep and rest in their afternoon naps, their physician, Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe, declared today. Any demand that public appearances must be reduced from four daily to two followings.

Henceforth, says the grey-haired country doctor, the babies will appear only at 11 o'clock in the morning and at 4 o'clock in the afternoon. Their 8 and 1 o'clock showings have been cancelled.

Hebor Want Long Vacation

New York, Aug. 22—Ralph Dalton, head of the Hebor Republic Co'ge, mounted a pushcart in Union Square today and sounded off on his current campaign for Mayor. Fifty loungers heard him demand a "four-hour day, five-day week, six-months-a-year vacation" for hebors.

There wasn't much enthusiasm and some members of the audience jeered openly when Dalton started a collection that netted 49 cents.

LEONORA WOODYARD

The rain swept suddenly down upon 57th avenue and drove the diners indoors. All but Constance who left her young man for a go in the men's locker and flocked around the nearest corner. Like a betrayed chicken running for cover, she thought a little hysterically, and hailed a passing cab.

"And that's that," murmured Constance settling herself as comfortable as possible. Constance had she had written a rather clever ending to an evening of adventure. Meaning that if a girl has been so indiscreet as to pick up a man the better part of valor lies in flight.

Once back in her hotel room, surveying her rain-drenched self in the mirror, all fear vanished and all sense of shame as well. She was glad that she had put dust in her eye and had to have it removed by the best looking man in New York.

It had all happened because she had spent a two weeks' vacation in New York alone and this had been her last night. And dining all by yourself in one of those innumerable sidewalk cafes between Madison and Washington squares wasn't so pleasant if you weren't bored that very shortly you must return to Mr. Berring and his typewriter back in Midvale.

The best looking young man she had ever seen was dining just two tables away quite alone.

A bit of fluff was lodged in her eye. It felt more like the Empire State building. Although it came out at the first dab of Constance's handkerchief. But Constance disregarding all her aunt's teachings, had continued to wipe her eye and had even moaned a little for good measure. It had worked! The tall blond young man had left his seat to offer assistance. He had said: "You see, I've had a great deal of experience; my mother was always getting things in her eye. So if you'll permit me—"

Constance had submitted bravely to having her ridiculously long lashes rolled back on a match and to having the corner of a very large, very clean linen handkerchief inserted in her perfectly clear eye.

"There!" the young man had announced at last and gravely showered her a flock of dust on his handkerchief.

So the blond young man moved over and they lingered over coffee for hours. They exchanged names and other unimportant information which on Constance's part, at least, was strictly misleading. She had preferred to be a New Yorker down for her shopping. His name was Bill Maynard. He was the sort you called Bill at once. He had lived in New York all his life.

Bill was saying: "You're a real person, Constance. I mean—real."

Constance had wanted to say that she wasn't real, at least she wasn't what he thought her. She wanted to tell him that she was just a stenographer from the Middle West enjoying a vacation in New York.

"I'd like you to meet my mother. She's a darling. Taught me to scrub behind my ears; that hard work never hurt anyone; and not to tell lies."

"So many people do," murmered poor Constance, "tell lies, I mean."

"You couldn't," Bill had said confidently.

How could she tell him then?

A few days later she was walking down the streets of her home town, jobless.

She knew she ought to be registering at an unemployment agency but nothing seemed to matter now. She had lost her job and Bill, who looked at a store set back from the sidewalk and thought. "What a grand place for a sidewalk cafe."

Then Bill slowly to herself: "Look here, Constance, this won't do, you know. You've got to be mechanical." And took out her compact to repair the damages from not being nonchalant.

After that she felt better. She could even face the wind which was blowing off Main street and then it happened again! All the dirt from Main street was in her eye and no amount of rubbing did any good.

She turned blindly toward the nearest door. She'd have to sit down and find her handkerchief; she'd have to find some one to help her. Then it wasn't all up with Bill now.

Someone inside was taking her elbow, leading her to a seat. A professional voice answered. "It's rather dusty, isn't it? Now if you'll just hold still a moment—"

And then gentle, efficient fingers were rolling back her ridiculously long lashes.

"There, do you want to see what did the dirty?"

Constance opened her eyes. She saw a glass case filled with eye glasses about which was a sign "We Are Glad to Remove Dust from Your Eyes Free of Charge." She looked up and there was Bill!

"Bill!"

"Constance!"

But how, when where. It simply couldn't be true.

"You darling! did you think I'd let you get away on Sunday night? that nonsense you told me. you had said you were stopping at the Tremmore. And when I found that you were from Midvale, well, Midvale was a good place to built for a job as say, so—

"You found a job and I lost one."

"You only need one job in a family," said Bill confidently.

"I hadn't," and Constance smiled "thought of that".

HARVESTING ADVANCES

Toronto, Aug. 20 (CP)—Aided by warm, dry weather, harvesting progresses in most sections of the Province during the last week. It was shown in the weekly crop report issued today by the Ontario Department of Agriculture.

A long look in the crystal of fashion leaves us that gold is again to be an important belt. An early example of this is of black woolen with big rings and copper buttons for fastening. There is a high frame collar of black seal, and the short cape has a very wide seal border.

Plumes are waving because many designers are featuring them. One of the newest dinner hats is a large tulle model with a curly colored ostrich plume on each side, pressed between the tulle layers.

WEATHER
Fine today and Saturday; quite cool tonight; moderate northeast to south winds; Monday. Probably fair and somewhat warmer.

Spokane, Wash., Aug. 23 (CP)—Mrs. Kay Harvey, 30, had a pain and swallowed a couple of tablets. Then she looked at the bottle and rushed to the nearest hospital. The pain medicine belonged to the family dog.

Mental attendants assured her the tablets were not harmful.

San Antonio, Tex., Aug. 23 (CP)—There'll be a heroine for the play-by-play broadcast of the "old and fuzzy" baseball game here Monday. Hugo Fuzzy will be played at each bat. The rules read: "If he hits in the air, he's a fouzzle. Three for a triple and six you can hold after a score."

Also: "No bloomers. Bloomers refailed."

Only persons past 40 years of age may play.

Chicago, Aug. 23 (CP)—Seventy-nine cats, had stolen more than $30 million in a roller skating contest which ended at midnight. Now he's cracking up on beach chairs.

He fell and was taken to St. Luke's hospital. Later reported he suffered a fractured shank.

Winnipeg, Aug. 23 (CP)— A woman was killed and five others injured in a three-car collision on Wednesday night, according to information received at Winnipeg police headquarters today. The woman killed was Mrs. Hazel Snyder, 30, of Winnipeg.

Dead: Mrs. H. A. Snyder, 30, Winnipeg. Injured: Mrs. Ansell, Mr. and Mrs. R. MacIlroy, A. Darnell and Mrs. Jos. Kelly, all of Winnipeg.

London, Aug. 23 (CP) Nine years after his death the memory of Rudolph Valentino, movie actor, is very alive in England.

Ottawa, Ia., Aug. 23 (CP) — Hittie Helen Loudon Albertson's best summer thought was that she also died today one of her baby sister, Jessie Loudon.

Mrs. Albertson, Monday parent, was born 70 years ago today.

Flames flared up, Mrs. Albertson threw the blazing kerosene can through the window, it struck the baby.

Helen, 12, playing nearby, dragged the baby away but her own dress caught fire. The baby was unhurt.

Doctors never gave her worst chance in the world.

All week she asked, "how is Jessie?"

Today she died.

Mrs. Manville, former show girl and Manville's fourth wife, dropped her separation suit yesterday, which was filed by her party. Each arrived with a different crowd, but they rode away together.

COMMENTS ON ALBERTA VOTING

Edmonton, Aug. 23 (CP)—D. M. Duggan, Conservative leader, in marking on "the Revolutionary trend" in the Alberta provincial election, said his party would be belief in the efficacy of the Aberhart Social Credit proposals.

Said Mr. Duggan: "Policies have been announced, which will compel a complete change in our governmental system. The party I represent has no belief in the ultimate efficacy of the measures indicated by William Aberhart and his associates. I believe our attitude is one the public issues will be vindicated at no distant time."

Edmonton, Aug. 23 (CP)—Hon. Duncan Marshall, Liberal minister of Agriculture, commenting on the Alberta Social Credit League victory in the Alberta election said: "The same people who elected the U.F.A. Government in 1921 have turned it out now. As to putting of Social Credit into effect that is up to William Aberhart. I believe now he is elected, he will sit down and carry on a Government."

Social Credit League Scores Sweeping Victory In Alberta Elections

William Aberhart, Founder of League Will be Leader

U. F. A. HEAD DEFEATED

Majority of Cabinet Ministers Voted Out by Electors

Calgary, Aug. 22—(CP)—Riding an avalanche of votes even greater than the sweep of the United Farmers of Alberta into power in 1921, the Alberta Social Credit League today achieved a clear majority in the Alberta provincial election and threatened to sweep the field almost completely.

Early today the Social Credit candidates elected totalled 32 and W. S. Howson, Liberal leader, was the only other candidate to be elected. Social Credit nominees were leading in 36 other seats, Liberal in two, U.F.A. in one and Conservative in one.

When the U.F.A. broke the Liberal reign in 1921, they elected 35 members and the Liberals were reduced to 13 seats. As counting progressed today, the Social Credit League threatened to oust all U. F. A. members from their constituencies.

Counting will be resumed at noon today with indications additional election will be made known shortly. The long proportional representation count was progressing in Edmonton and Calgary.

CALGARY, Aug. 22.—(CP)—Alberta will have a Social Credit Government headed by William Aberhart, 57-year-old founder of the Alberta Social Credit League, and with the victory which appeared for a new economic deal with "dividends" for all adults.

In the initial test of the power, the first time the electors of a Canadian province have ever been offered a Social Credit administration, the League candidates made a sweep of the rural ridings in yesterday's Provincial election. They were also among the leaders as the proportional representation count proceeded today in the cities Calgary and Edmonton.

Premier Reid, head of the U.F.A. Government since 1934 when he succeeded Hon. J. E. Brownlee went down to defeat in his riding of Vermilion in the Legislature since 1921, but the U.F.A. still retained the Liberal regime which had held power from the formation of the province in 1905. He conceded his defeat early today.

Cabinet Members Defeated

It was certain the majority of the Reid Cabinet members would be defeated. Four were known to be out: Hoadley, Minister of Trade and Industry; Hugh W. Allen Minister of Education; Baker, Minister of Mines and Works and F. S. Grisdale, Minister of Agriculture. Hugh W. Allen Minister of Municipal Affairs, and Hon. J. R. Love, Provincial Treasurer were to be added when compilation for the night halted.

Hon. J. F. Lymburn, Attorney-General, only U.F.A. member to be elected in addition to Premier Reid, was among the leaders in Edmonton City.

Thousands of Albertans are promised benefits under a Social Credit League victory.

The major benefit will be the payment of $25 a month dividend to all bona fide citizens. How many Albertans come under this classification in the province's population of 750,000 could not be estimated immediately. A Social Credit government will as one of its first duties name qualifications for voters' citizenship. Length of residence in the province and school attendance will be the major qualification.

No Hugo Taxation

To pay an initial dividend of $25 monthly, it has been estimated it would take $180,000,000. This is to be raised by a levy in a form yet to be determined by Mr. Aberhart. He has denied his policy is one of "hugo taxation."

Other benefits under Social Credit call for establishment of a just price for producer and consumer and for the state establishable securities for the purchase of goods and service.

Ready to lead his party as Premier, Mr. Aberhart will have his office in the Legislature. It is planned to make a seat for him at an early date. Mr. Aberhart had the final decision in the selection of Social Credit candidates. Constituency groups usually named them but Mr. Aberhart picked the nominee.

Mr. Aberhart's victory has been compiled in a forecast—the largest vote in the history of Alberta will be recorded. All day polls were jammed and in the cities electors at many centres had to wait more than an hour to mark their ballots.

Two Voting Systems Used

Two systems of voting were used in the election. The urban ridings—the six-member constituencies of Calgary and Edmonton—proportional representation was the system in use. In the rural districts the single transferable ballot used in the country constituencies is quota was fixed by dividing a candidate to be elected had to have a number of votes equal to the quotient. In both systems of voting, the "low man" on the first count polled is eliminated.' Proportional representation also called for the winner's surplus vote to be distributed as the count proceeded.

LATEST STANDING

Calgary, Aug. 22 (CP)—The steady drive to a strong majority continued for the Alberta Social Credit League forces today, and at 11.15 a.m. (8.15 p.m. B.D.T.) 30 members had been elected to the legislature compared with one Conservative and one Liberal. Social Credit nominees were leading in most of the other seats.

J. E. Brownlee, former Premier of the United Farmers of Alberta government, went down to defeat in Ponoka as the first woman, Mrs. W. W. Rogers, Social Credit nominee, entered election to the legislature.

The standing was:
Social Credit elected 30.
Liberal elected 1.
Conservatives elected 1.
Social Credit leading 34.
Liberal leading 1.
U.F.A. leading 1.
Total 82.

Leader Declares Economic Plan Greatest Ever

Calgary, Aug. 22 (CP)—"I feel our opponents failed because they were defending the old order of things economic movement that had ever been launched in the province," Aberhart, leader of the Alberta Social Credit League, when he spoke to his followers in the Calgary Provincial Bible Institute early today.

"The whole fight against Trends and Progress' fights a losing battle," added Mr. Aberhart who will assume office membership of the legislature now that his Social Credit League majority have been elected to the Legislature. Mr. Aberhart was not a candidate but by-elections will be held to find a seat for him.

He described the election as a "revolution, not by bullets but by ballots" and appealed to all those who had supported other parties to make the organization unanimous.

"Come on now, fellows, join us," he said.

"You can find no better place for security than in Alberta. We have no intention of confiscation or repudiation by any way, shape or form," he declared.

Monkey Traps of All Sorts Sought as Reward Offered for Leading Monk

Massapequa, N.Y., Aug. 22—(AP)—Spurred by the offer of a $50 reward for "Scarface Al Capone," Long Island citizens were stampeding the cocoanut and rice markets today for simian traps.

About 101 of the 150 monkeys, that escaped from Frank Buck's Zoo were still at large or unaccounted for and the manager of the Zoo, T. J. Cornelius, declared the capture of the leader "Scarface" in the belief his return would cause the remainder to come back voluntarily.

Many volunteers were receiving $2.50 for each live monkey returned, were dropping their butterfly nets, crab cages, potato sacks and other paraphernalia in favor of the cocoanut trap.

A monkey will put its hand through a hole in a cocoanut to get rice. With its fist clenched to hold the rice, the monkey cannot withdraw its hand and it is too greedy ever to drop the rice and unclench its fist.

FALLING TIMBER KILLS WORKER AT CORDOVA MINE

Conrad Fridriksen, 37, of Marmora is Victim

INQUEST ORDERED

Timber Falls 80 Feet, Hitting Worker on Leg

Marmora, Aug. 23 (Special)—Conrad Fridriksen, 37, was fatally injured at Cordova Mines, nine miles north of Marmora, shortly after ten o'clock today, when a large timber fell down a 80 foot shaft, striking the man on the leg and inflicting such a wound, that he died from loss of blood and shock before it was possible to bring him to the surface. Dr. Holdcroft of Havelock, Coroner for the district, went to the scene and ordered an inquest.

The deceased man was working at the bottom of the shaft, removing timber from the old workings when the accident occurred. It is believed the workmen were handing down the timber from the top of the shaft and the particularly heavy piece slipped and he was unable to get out of the way, the timber striking the unfortunate victim has been a resident in this district for many years and was formerly employed by the Campbell Construction Company, when that firm was building Number 7 Highway. The Cordova Mines is a subsidiary of the Base Metals Mining and Smelting Company.

DANIEL STROUD WAS IN 77TH YEAR

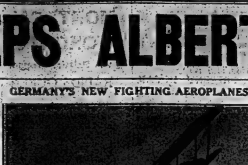
Prominent Tea And Coffee Merchant of Montreal Active in Church

Montreal, Aug. 22—The death occurred Wednesday of Daniel Stroud, former alderman of the City of Montreal and for 60 years a well-known tea and coffee merchant in this city. Mr. Stroud died in the Western Division of the Montreal General Hospital after an illness of six weeks. He was in his 77th year.

Mr. Stroud was a native of Montreal; his father, the late William Stroud, built up and himself been prominent in the tea and coffee business for many years, having opened a tea and coffee business a number of years ago in Montreal.

One of the oldest members of the First Baptist Church—or Olivet Baptist, as it was called in the earlier years of his membership—Mr. Daniel Stroud took a great interest in church work and throughout his lifetime was an energetic supporter of various religious activities. He was a deacon at First Baptist for many years before his demise and was also a life member of the M. A. A. A. and a member of St. George's Club.

Surviving are his widow, formerly Miss Rosamond Greene, two sons, Clarence W., of Montreal, and Reginald H., of California; two daughters, Mrs. F. R. Fenton and Miss Ruby Stroud; one grandaughter, Mrs. Richard Palmer, and an infant great-grandson; two brothers, Fred and Clarence, and two sisters, Mrs. H. A. Hodgson and Mrs. W. H. Chapman, all of Montreal.



The funeral will be held Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock in the First Baptist Church, with interment at Mount Royal Cemetery.

Farmers Make Hay In Night Hours

Stouffville, Ont., Aug. 22—(CP)—Make hay while the sun shines and thrash when it doesn't seems to be the motto of John P. Carr, farmer living just Unionville, 20 miles north of Toronto.

Unable to obtain the use of a thrashing machine in the daytime this week, Carr did all his thrashing at night by use of electric lights for his barn. He had 16 men at work all night, threshing 900 bushels of barley and oats.

Alberta Premier Teacher Offers Basic Dividends

"Just Price" Will be Fixed by Commission Which Will Set a price It Believes "Just" and "Fair."

Calgary, Aug. 23—(CP)—The avalanche of votes that swept William Aberhart and his Social Credit League to victory in the Alberta election, put into power for the first time in the British Empire a government with the primary aim of legislation to work out social credit theories.

Social credit, originated by Major C. H. Douglas, English economist and adopted with changes by the Alberta leader, is a financial, not a three major principles—basic or national dividends, a just price and national money.

The economic cause of both organizations led by Major Douglas and Mr. Aberhart is adoption of these principles but their methods of realizing and working these plans are different.

In an address during the campaign the Calgary Evangelist said if his party league would bring into the British Social Credit leader to Alberta to superintend inauguration and administration of social credit legislation in the province.

When Major Douglas came to Edmonton some months ago as economic adviser to the Alberta government, he said Mr. Aberhart was performing good work in making people social credit conscious but he did not favor the latter's plans for a just price and this is still under contract to the Alberta government to advise how social credit would work in the province.

The Canadian Douglas Social Credit Association has provincial bodies in British Columbia, Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba.

Control Vital

Control of monetary matters, held by the Dominion government, is vital to the majority of social credit objectives, the Douglas body believes.

The Aberhart organization pro-less social and political reform as well as monetary reform, while the Douglas Association works only for "a monetary mechanism designed to make possible the distribution of the total product of industry working at full production."

The Aberhart platform provides for pay monthly "basic dividends" of $25 at least, to provide more land to every adult in Alberta. Allowance will be made for children.

The Douglas scheme will be paid in non-negotiable certificates issued by a proposed credit office.

The "basic dividend" will be paid, Mr. Aberhart says, with money obtained from a tax or levy on "unearned increment." The classification "levy" is preferred and it is denied it will be a "tax."

Douglas social credit would give a national dividend to be paid to every man, woman and child in the country, distributed to them as citizens but not any fixed sum. The Douglas Association would issue "debt-free" money from "the national credit account" which is the monetization of the national credit. Canada's "at a rate exactly equaled to Canada's annual gain in total wealth."

"Just price" in the Aberhart plan will be fixed by a commission which will fix prices it believes "just" and "fair."

Major Douglas "just price" is the issuance in the form of a discount on the price of every purchase of consumers' goods. The money as a rate equal to the annual increase in the rate of production of consumers' goods. There is no regulation of price, but price discount.

A steady flow of credit to the monetary aim of the Alberta League, by which every citizen will have a share of the province's or country's national wealth. The impulse "debt free' money is the national money plan of Douglas.

Defence Plans Approved To Hasten Reinforcement Of Empire's Vital Points

Italy Stirred by Prospect of Britain Invoking Sanctions

SELASSIE'S OFFER

Rumors of Fleet Movement Discussed at Rome

LONDON, Aug 23—(AP)—Informal queries said today the committee for imperial defence had approved plans for speeding up the redistribution and reinforcement of military forces at vital points along the Empire communications.

The committee met at 10 Downing Street, with Acting Prime Minister Baldwin presiding.

Plans for strengthening the defences of British Territory adjacent to Malaya and for reinforcement of all strategic points along the Mediterranean, Suez Canal and African areas have been under way quietly for about two months, it was learned, and the decision to speed up the program was regarded as precautionary.

Comparative calm today followed the decision of the British Government on policy in the Mediterranean crisis when it became apparent only if all other efforts fail will the League of Nations be asked to consider sanctions against an aggressor.

Haig Regrets Britain

Rome, Aug. 23.—(AP—The prospect Great Britan may invoke sanctions at Geneva, September 11 to 25 prince Maccolla Fast Aldobrandini, Italian ambassador to London, declared today.

Countless Italians echoed the declaration of the authoritative Giornale D'Italia "sanctions mean war."

Informed circles, however, expressed confidence Haig had sufficient friends among members of the League of Nations to block any move to bring into play the ultimate powers of the covenant.

The possibility was not, ignored that Great Britain might, in the absence of support at Geneva, act independently to protect the Suez canal in Africa should she be convinced it would be jeopardized by Italy's ocupation of Ethiopia.

In this connection, Italians noted Sir Edward Leonard Ettington, Commander-in-Chief of the Royal Air Force, "commander's" session of the British Cabinet.

POLICE CHECK AMAZING STORY

Admitted Slayer Tells of Killing 25 Other Victims

Auburn, Calif., Aug. 23.—(AP)—A score officers sought today to check the amazing story of a confessing slayer that the bodies of 25 victims lay buried in shallow hills near here.

Sheriff Emer H. Gum organized a party to search for two graves described by Earl (Bud) Kimball, alias Cramer who confessed he killed James G. Kennett, Sr., retired Chicago contractor, and a 17-year-old youth believed to be T. Manning, Calhoun, Calif., O.C.C. worker.

The slayings, Kimball said, took place during the two years the 25-year-old transient prospector has been in this vicinity.

The first grave party sent pursported locations of the bodies of two men identified as J. J. (Hadley) Hamilton, prospector and Reading or Grilling, a mine camp caretaker, both missing.

Of three more victims for whose deaths he claimed responsibility, Kimball would give only meager details and he flatly refused to discuss the 20 other victims alleged to be puttl the "bodies" of Johnson and Reading or Grilling had been found.

Quickly agreed "some of the men named by Kimball as his victims have been missing but he pointed to the obvious impossibility to makeany immediate check of the weird story".

WAR-PEACE MURAL Starts Board War

Los Angeles, Aug. 23—Battle lines drew lighter in a dispute raging around a mural depicting war and peace.

On one side stood Leo Katz, noted artist, who created the painting for a Los Angeles trade school. Standing beside him, defending his rights against destruction of the work and praising it as a notable contribution to art, were:

The American Arts Foundation, and such individual luminaries as Clarabelle Colbert, motion-picture actress; Paul Sloane, actress' spouse Lesley, film producer; Mme. ScheherDeAra, art collector and critic, and Merrill Gage Rueben, prominent sculptor.

On the other side of the controversy was the Board of Education of Los Angeles and for reinforcement of all strategic points along the Mediterranean, Suez Canal and African areas have been under way quietly for about two months, it was learned, and the decision to speed up the program was regarded as precautionary.

Comparative calm today followed the decision of the British Government on policy in the Mediterranean crisis when it became apparent only if all other efforts fail will the League of Nations be asked to consider sanctions against an aggressor.

DETAILS FOR OPENING ALL COMPLETED

Complete and final arrangements for the official opening of the Belleville Fair on Tuesday, August 27, were made last evening by members of the Belleville Fair Board at their last regular meeting before the annual event is scheduled to commence.

Everything is ready as far as we are concerned, and now it rests with the general public of Belleville and district to attend Walker Amusements. President of the Fair Board today: "It has meant a lot of hard work and every member has given a lot of his time unstintingly. We think, however, that the results will more than justify the effort that has been displayed by us."

OFFICERS SENT TO EASTERN TRECKERS

Four Provincial Constables, Officers Morden Campbell, Patterson and Barrett of District No. 8, headquarters at Belleville, have been dispatched to Ottawa for special escort duty in connection with the return trek of the on-to-Ottawa marchers, Inspector Frank Gardner announced this morning. The special duties these officers will have to perform was not mentioned in the dispatch however. On the march eastward a detachment of O.P.P. preceded the marchers and during their presence being known to the trekkers as the "Red-jackets." It is believed that a special vanguard of O.P.P. will again precede or follow the return marchers on the left Ottawa homeward bound yesterday.

DREDGE MOVED TO ANOTHER PORT

While plumes of smoke, the first since last October when the equipment was berthed for the winter, were issuing from the funnel of the steam dredge of the Randolph-MacDonald Company at the government dock this morning as the dredge, the tug and scows commenced preparations to move out of the city, sailor fashion. The equipment will proceed from here to Simcoe where it will be engaged in dredging work.

CITY ASSESSOR TO ATTEND CONVENTION

Representing the City of Belleville and as executive of the Association Mr. T. H. Wallbridge, city assessor and tax collector will leave at the beginning of next week for Ottawa where he will attend the three day convention of the Ontario Municipal Association. Mayor Mahlon Hagerty, county treasurer will also attend the meeting as delegates from the County of Hastings.

Twenty-odd resolutions, all of which will be of direct benefit to this city as well as other municipalities in this county, will be presented to the convention. A meeting of city assessors will also be held in connection with the main meeting.

MATERIAL FOR FILL IS ALL WEIGHED

Six trucks commenced the work of a 20 hour day at the city government dock addition this morning. The material, coal cinders, which is being used for the fill at the rear of the dock, to create new solid ground on the waterfront for the following erection of a transient warehouse and dock space, is being brought mainly from the old ash dump situated on the north end of the city acquired by the Bateman Contracting Company of this city, successful bidders on the job. Each load of material is carefully weighed by trucks, which pass over a heavy scale by county officials. Not for a government man is engaged in checking material in.

GRASS FIRES STILL CONTINUE

Dried grass on the commons at the corner of Mary Street and West Dundas which ignited in some manner early last evening resulted in an alarm to the local fire department. No damage was caused.

PICTON BAND TO BE MADOC GUESTS

COUNTY'S WOLVES ROAM TALL TIMBERS

Wolves have deserted Hastings County for the timber reserves of the far north where better summer hunting is being found, it is believed by county officials. Not for a four or five month period has Mr. James Haggerty, county treasurer, been called upon to forward a cheque to Toronto for the customary bounty, it was stated today.

ROCHESTER MAYOR WELCOMES PICTON

An official civic welcome was given by Mayor Stanton of Rochester to 1,250 Pictonian and Prince Edward County residents arrived here of Rochester yesterday on an excursion arranged for the county's civic holiday. The Toronto Star had chartered Ontario Car Ferry No. 3 for the trip across the lake. Seven hours were spent in Rochester by the happy trippers.

33 INMATES AT PRESENT IN JAIL

County gaol population still maintains a high level these summer days. At the present time a total of 33 male and one female prisoner are incarcerated. Recent additions to the jail population have been made up of transients, jailed for riding freights, it was reported.

EXCAVATION WORK STARTED TODAY

Excavation work for the $81,000.00 addition to the local Dominion Experimental Farm property on West Dundas Street was commenced today by workmen under the direction of Mr. Meagher of the Ottawa firm of Rose-Meagher Limited. ## POLICE BLOTTER

Activities in and around the local police station proved rather averse during the week-end, but one night transients in all being afforded a warm night's lodging last night, were liberated early today and instructed to "move along."

Shortly after 2 a.m. today a large Stile Transport crashed into the concrete abutment on one of the half miles west of the city limits. The pole was broken off, but no particular damage was done to the truck, which remained on the shoulder. The accident was subsequently reported to the authorities and the matter of restitution for the pole amicably settled.

POLICE COURT

His Worship, Magistrate J. Ambrose Shea, of Kingston, presided over the local police court proceedings this morning in addition to Magistrate R. J. Butler, K.C. A number of cases were disposed of, many of which saw fines paid, that enriched the city's coffers to approximately $75.00. Cases disposed included, however, Thos. Massingham, charged with the theft of infringements of the Liquor and Highway Traffic laws, four cases under the latter of which he pleaded guilty to, netting the bulk of the fines imposed.

A charge of perjury, laid following a non-support charge, was dismissed against Walter Ward of Sidney, His Worship holding, that the perjury charge was groundless.

George Dudds, local trucker, pleaded guilty to the operation of overloaded vehicle, while intoxicated. The conventional seven days in jail was imposed, but he was allowed to have the two days he has already spent in the cells counted on his term. His request was denied. A subsequent charge of assaulting his wife was laid against Dudds, but evidence being offered by Crown Attorney R. F. Butler, K.C., at the request of Mrs. Dodds.

Cameron E. Weldon, 16-year-old Belleville youth, pleaded guilty to the theft of a bicycle and was sentenced to serve one month on his farm. Weldon took a bicycle, the property of Rod. Aman, of this city, which was found in the Moira Mansfield for the paltry sum of five dollars, by Mr. Fred Ketcheson, who had the young man like you should lead a life of crime was the remark of His Worship, "and you are heading for something worse," commented His Worship before passing sentence.

Three charges of false statements were laid against Joseph H. Clarke of Kingston, the Crown Attorney presiding. Clarke pleaded guilty to the charges which were laid in relationship to his income tax returns and Clarke allowed his liberty following a thorough cross-examination to ascertain from the complainants the source of the trouble.

A case laid under the servants' and employers' act culminated a lengthy docket.

THURLOW LIBERALS HEAR CANDIDATE

Large Audience Listens to Issues in Campaign Discussed

Liberals of Polls four and five of Thurlow Township held a most successful and enthusiastic meeting on the grounds of Prince of Wales school.

Mr. Arthur Vermilyea, chairman of the committee was ably assisted by many workers both from the Township of Thurlow and City of Belleville.

The School Grounds had seating accommodation for about five hundred and by every part was taken. Several hundred had to stand while others occupied cars drawn up around the grounds. There were close to one thousand electors present to hear Hon. Nelson Parliament Mr. Charles Rommens and Mr. D. MacLaurin discuss the political questions of the day.

Mr. Parliament Heard

Mr. Parliament made it clear that the people of the Dominion of Canada had had a great deal through the five years of Bennett rule. The Conservative administration blocked the channels of trade, increased the national debt of Canada almost one billion dollars, increased taxation, increased the cost of government, and made it exceedingly difficult for the common people of Canada to make a living. The rich grew richer and the poor got poorer. The money gradually got back to the hands of the wealthy and stayed there, a fruition Mr. Mackenzie Chas, Canagon, the Liberal candidate for the South of South Hastings, made an eloquent and forceful address dealing with the Liberal party's approval of the large audience. Applause frequently broke out during his attacks on the Conservative administration. Mr. Cameron clearly showed that the Conservative party party rallied that they could not face the issues fairly with one leader, and therefore they had decided to appeal to the country with two leaders. Mr. Bennett to head up the money interests and Mr. Manion to lead those interested in reform. In the final analysis however, a vote for either of these leaders was a vote for the Conservative party. Great enthusiasm prevailed when Mr. Rommens spoke and he was loudly applauded throughout and at the conclusion of his address.

Law a Explained

P. C. MacLaurin explained the reason Conservative and Good Government Law passed by the Conservative Government. By the Law, Mr. MacLaurin explained the people are kept in the dark as to the financial agreement of their rights. He also explained the National Products Marketing Act, the Bank Charter Relief legislation and the Central Mortgage Bank Act, which were entirely nothing for the people of the Dominion, but did much to give Mr. Bennett absolute power and independence of parliament and the people. The great question to decide is has the Conservative Government helped the common people. The large audience agreed with the speaker that they had not and helped the common people and that they were getting it more and more difficult to make a living.

W. R. Sharpe, ably performed the duties of chairman of the evening.

Mr. Harold Barrett delighted the large audience with two vocal solos. He was accompanied by Mrs. Barrett at the piano.

The ladies served dainty refreshments at the close of the addresses and a most enthusiastic meeting was closed with the National Anthem.

CONSERVATIVES MEET AT MELROSE

Organization Work in That Part of Riding Effected

Conservatives who gathered from throughout Tyendinaga Township combined at Melrose town hall last evening in an entirely successful organization meeting at which the leading issues of the day were thoroughly discussed and outlined by leading speakers of the party.

Personally known to the major-ity of those present, Mr. James E. Hill, M.P.P. for East Hastings, was received with acclaim by the Tyendinaga electorate in a comprehensive review of the present Dominion government. Mr. Hill clearly outlined the need for continued support by the electors of the Hon. Mr. Bennett and urged those present to choose carefully at the coming election the man whom they will send to represent them as leader of the country during the coming years. Again he urged continued unity of purpose and pointed to the need of hard and continuous work on the part of every supporter during the coming campaign.

Other speakers included Dr. Welsh, Lansford McCullough, Mr. Hanson and the conservative organizer for South Hastings, Mr. Reid.

At the executive meeting which followed the regular meeting and which was addressed by Mr. Reid, every poll was represented by representative chairmen of the district.

This evening Tbomsburg will be the scene of the eleventh organization meeting.

PROTESTS HEARD BY EXECUTIVE

South End A. C. Meets And Clears Decks For Final Races

All protests of the contestants in the weekly Belleville Yachting and Athletic Club's punt sailing races were heard at the Association's monthly meeting held in the club's rooms last evening, while challenges for special races were also received.

The result of the rulings of the committee in charge of the sailing races.

The protest by the "Tex" against the "Foozle" in the Class three weeks ago declared no race.

The protest of the Nellie II, allegedly to be fouled by the sporting buoy-weeks ago found the "Tools" immunities.

The Ron Wallace protest against the Romeo in the "Y" class of sailing boats was not allowed, while the protest entered by the Anna G against the Joka of Wednesday last was allowed.

In the challenge races to be competed off Victoria Park over the week-end the Ukapop, owned and sailed by R. Hinchey will meet the Presto, owned and sailed by his son Jack in a class two race.

The Joka and the Anna G will meet in a class three race off Payne Cnp, while the Spray and the Go Go will meet in a challenge race for the Smith Cup.

During the evening arrangements were completed for the games at Victoria Park on Labor Day and it also discussed the Belleville Yachting and Athletic Club holding their annual aquatic and athletic meet on that day. The large field program ever attempted by the club is being arranged for that gala occasion.

Letters to the Editor

Garbage Disposal And Parking
Belleville, Ont.,
August 22, 1935

The Editor Ontario Intelligencer:

If you can spare the space, and if, in your good judgment, it would be worth while, I would like to discuss, through the medium of your well-edited paper, two problems that appear to me as rather vital to the well-being of the citizens of Belleville.

First—Garbage:

Having removed here from Whitby last summer, were pleased to find an efficient and systematic garbage collection. It was not long, however, before we found that this problem while being solved so far as our domestic establishment was concerned, needed seriously in many other ways. In the first place, it was rather a shock to learn that Belleville, advertising itself as a "beautiful city", so charmingly situated on the delightful Bay of Quinte, was dumping its garbage and other refuse on its own front doorstep, and that on the east waters of both Moira River and Belleville harbor were condemned for swimming purposes and unless we took the children some distance from home, they could not join the Y.M.O.A. (which we have done) it would not be safely possible for them to enjoy the best of summer recreation.

Later I had occasion to drive to the "Dump" with some tree trimmings, which had collected, could not take, and I found it literally impossible to get to the water's edge in my car that I had to drive out on the bridge to get rid of them before going home. The classes carrying power of this horde of insects can hardly be estimated. There is no doubt that thousands of these flies find their way into the homes of Belleville every year, possibly to offset this danger, the dump is occasionally set on fire, and those who find themselves on the leeward side of the dreadful smoke that results, must wonder if the fire or the lesser of the two evils. Its effect on real estate values, and especially on West Hill, must be considerable.

To sum up, the whole mess is unaesthetic, gramatury, unsightly and unsanitary, and a disgrace to a city as Belleville.

Second—Downtown parking space:

We are all familiar with the inconvenience of shopping downtown, on the day of Belleville's fair, and there can be no doubt that much business is lost to the merchants come to Belleville is going elsewhere as a result.

This problem is common to all large towns, but few places have a better opportunity of solving it than Belleville. In rear of the stores and between the Lower Bridge and the Post Bridge, there is sufficient space to park hundreds of cars. Surely it is not beyond the scope for this purpose, box most of it in with fence, a block of proper entrance and exits, and traffic on Front Street would be easily impeded by cars finding their way in and out of the one-way drives. If this at present waste area, once properly fenced into a well-organized park and car, with properly guarded approaches and exits, I am sure it would pay big dividends in increased business to the merchants and this city cannot grow much beyond its present size without this parking problem being solved.

Incidentally the solution of these two problems would be a great social solution to our ever-present relief problem.

I have tried to be brief, and certainly do not want to be critical, but thought perhaps a fresh perspective of a comparative stranger in your midst might be helpful.

John McClelland.

"LIE DETECTOR" HELP TO POLICE

'Reading' Cause Criminals to Confess Against Their Will 5,000 Cases Show

"The 'lie detector,' which puts an instrument panel on a criminals wrist and then tells his innermost 'feelings' shares the limelight in almost every recent major detective tale.

It encouraged Gerald Thompson, Illinois mechanic, to confess he attacked and murdered Mildred Hallmark, resulting in a sentence of death. It brought a murder confession from Mike Redmond after, the body of Marie Cooper, 18, had been fished from a Chicago sewer, says The Associated Press.

It verified the story of Mrs. Blanche Dunkel, 61, that she hired her son-in-law, Erwin Lang, strangled in Chicago's weird "swamp murder" case. It brought a confession from Edgar R. Landreth, 30, in a Berkley, Calif., murder when Landreth was suspect No. 118.

These detories point an increasing use of the lie detector, under the auspices particularly of Northwestern University School of Scientific Crime Detection. They go to show that 75 per cent of all tests made in which the laboratory experimenters had confidence follow the lie detector's verdict, when the verdict is:

"Subject indicates deception in responses to pertinent questions."

The third instrument who operates Professor Leonard Keeler's polygraphs—as makes the name lie detector—are spreading a new school of detective work throughout the Middle West and introducing a painless procedure vastly different from the fifty and seventy hours of grilling which used to "break" guilty suspects.

Called Keeler Polygraph

Formally the" Keeler polygraph, used now in about 5,000 criminal cases and 10,000 experimental cases, is a psamno-cardio-sphygmographo-venograph. Keeler, its 31-year-old creator, explains it is a series of ordinary instruments, used commonly in medical diagnosis, turned to diagnosing the "symptoms of deception, guilt or innocence.

It writes a permanent record of changes in blood pressure, respiration and the pulse-beat, which are briefly defined as the electrical current flowing through the body and altered by activity of the sweat pores.

The suspect's guilt—his fear of detection — is harnessed to undo him. His involuntary bodily processes—not the blunder of criminal can control his blood pressure—lastify against him and most strongly when he is wary and on guard.

Ten or fifteen minutes, rather than hours in the time, brief is essential. The suspect is seated in a comfortable chair, with a small black box, looking vaguely like a portable phonograph, beside him. A rubber tube is wrapped around one arm,' in the familiar blood-pressure test, and a second around the chest, recording respiration.

The questions, after a period of silence, to record the patient's "norm," are asked in the flat professional tone of a doctor hypnotizing. "Have you had the measles?"

Suspect Talks Involuntarily

The suspect who "won't talk" talks despite himself, for the instruments record involuntarily in that way. He is allowed to talk only to the extent of saying "yes" or "no."

Wisconsin police had only a spotty case against Cecil Lonieski, Madison hoodlum, and he consented to have lie detector records used in court. The case, as police said as typical, was quiet, leisurely and brief.

After a few irrelevant queries, including "Have you ever been arrested?" he was asked:

"Did you have anything to do with the robbery at Baraboo."

"Did Tony Grignano shoot the Sheriff?"

"Did you?

"Then Tony give the gun?"

"Did you?"

The zigzag chart of Lonieski's intense workings wrote him into prison for six years, Grignano going along. The police took the lie detector charts to establish what role each played in the hold-up. Lonieski's involuntary admission, that he did the shooting was all they needed to have blamed on another suspect.

Keeler is the lie detector's chief debunker, calling it "no more infallible than any diagnosis" and unwilling to go the charts beyond recognized evidence until there are plenty of licensed, trained examiners.

But others put more stock in it, particularly Keeler. They use it frequently, with salitic results.

Often all employees, from president to janitor, are tested to fix the guilt for an unsolved mystery. When this is done, the university examiners find, from 10 to 25 per cent of the employees register what is the embarrassing question. "Have you ever taken money from the bank?"

Some fifty Chicago banks now have tested employees and others test all applicants. Strangely enough, they don't fire certainly according to the examiners, finding they make good employees after confessing. The knowledge they can't fool the poly graph inspires honesty.

GREASE OF WOOL YIELDS HORMONE

New Sex Hormone May be Able to Correct Abnormalities

San Francisco, Aug. 23—From grease of sheeps' wool the chemist has provided the man of medicine with an artificial male sex hormone with which he may be able to correct sex abnormalities and other physical malcharacteristics, Dr. L. Ruzicka, Switzerland, reported to the American Chemical Society yesterday.

Dr. Ruzicka said 300 drams of the first synthetic hormones ever produced were obtained from Chlorosterol, a by-product of the grease of sheeps' wool. It has been named "Androsterone," and preparations are under way to produce it in wholesale quantities in Germany and Switzerland.

To the layman a hormone is a "chemical messenger" which travels chiefly in the blood stream and delivers the brain's orders.

The production of 30 milligrams of panothelic acid—a powerful regulator of growth—was announced Prof. Roger J. Williams of Oregon State College, in a report at the society's opening session concerning the production of the acid.

Although an amount of the acid weighing less than half a drop of water has been obtained, Professor Williams disclosed that much has been learned about the factor governing the growth of all living cells—plant, animal and bacteria. Minute amounts of the acid, he said, have a remarkable effect in stimulating the growth of various types of plants and single-celled animals.

Yields aflame with brilliant dahlias may be the source of a sizable portion of United States future commercial sugar supply, the society was informed today.

A method of producing for market sugar twice as sweet as that now commonly used has been developed by Dr. Wray Rieger and Prof. Leroy W. Wesenberg and research associates at the University of Southern California.

Commercial production already has become a practical possibility, the scientists say, as the result of the working out of a means of manufacturing on hand quantities with that of best sugar.

Professor Wesenberg pointed out that due to the difference in growing seasons, dahlia sugar could be manufactured in case of sugar cane or gar plants during ordinarily idle seasons.

He said economic possibilities of dahlia sugar are enhanced by its dietary properties. Those on reducing diets, the university experimenters declared, would find it in sweetness with less calories. There is the further dahlia sugar factor in the belief of most diabetic patients who cannot utilize common sugar that they can retain sugar or fruits such as dahlias.

Another factor in diet was reported by Prof. C. A. Mvehjem of the University of Wisconsin who said infants should be fed a little copper daily, in addition to iron to insure good health.

SALEM W. M. S. HOLDS MONTHLY MEETING

Salem—Aug. 23—On Wednesday, Aug. 14 the ladies of Salem W.M.S. met at the church for their regular monthly meeting with the President Mrs. T. Leslie in the chair. Meeting opened with the call to worship and singing "For the Beauty of the Earth." Mr. O. Hagerman read the 18th chapter Exodus. The roll call was answered by nine members. Scripture lesson was to be answered by a verse containing the word "Friend." Mrs. Leslie asked her to lo-facing a friend, the theme of the meeting to be friendship. "Soldiers of Christ Arise" was then sung and Mrs. R. McLaren took charge. It was decided to have an open meeting Sunday evening, Aug. 25th. Interesting readings were given by Messrs. Cole and McLaren, Mrs. Bernice Robinson and Norma Leslie.

"God be With You Till We Meet Again" was sung and prayer by Mrs. Leslie closed the meeting.

Mrs. George Leslie also Mrs. Hilton Badgley attended the convention held at Mrs. Grant Mc-Laren's, Melrose on Wednesday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Morris Farrell of Sudbury took dinner on Tuesday with the former's mother, Mr. J. Farrell and family.

Master Raymond Robinson spent Wednesday with his cousin Newton Denville.

Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Hagerman visited on Sunday last with the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. Fuller.

Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Lazier, Mac and Irene spent the week end at Peterboro.

Mr. and Mrs. John Ross and Mildred, were Sunday dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. Dorland Ross.

Miss Bernice Robinson entertained Mr. and Mrs. Bert Kaichpaw of Deseronville and Miss Hazel Hall of Lotta to dinner and supper on Sunday.

Master Donald McNinch, Stirling, has returned home after spending a few days with his cousin Donald Leslie.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence McKeone, Roslin, had dinner on Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Dan Hagerman.

Rev. and Mrs. Harold Bradshaw and children Joyce and Henry also Mr. Felix Starkey of Deep River, Conn. were supper guests on Monday night of Mr. and Mrs. George Sills.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Robinson and Raymond called on Mr. and Mrs. Hosmer Denville, Melrose on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Russell Reid and family of Roslin, were dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Hagerman on Sunday.

Lasso, Ice Cream, Lion Crate Three Tacticians, Two Hours Required to Move Problem Bear

New York, Aug. 23—Keepers at the Central Park zoo breathed a sigh of relief yesterday when the iron gate of one of the bear dens clanged shut with Mishka on the inside. They were relieved first because they had successfully completed a dreaded moving job and moreover, were sure they were properly sure that Mishka was now in a cage for keeps.

Thomas Francis Hoey, formerly the shepherd of Central Park and now the keeper of the bears, said he did not see how "the little rascal could escape over that fence now," but his voice lacked conviction. He was thinking of the two unhandled outings of the diminutive Indian sun bear.

Mishka, coal black except for a white nose and bib, is harder to handle, keepers aver, than Jim, the polar bear, or even Abbey, the lion. Claire Luce, the actress, gave her to the city six years ago when she was 3 years old. She is three feet long and weighs about eighty-five pounds.

Two years ago she escaped from the old zoo by tearing a hole through the heavy wire netting of the dogs' yard and scaring the wits out of several hundred relief laborer, last May she climbed over the fifteen-foot fence of her new "escape-proof" cage.

A stout shifting box used for moving lions and tigers, James O'-Rourke, acting headkeeper, decided it might as well be now or never. Per a while it appeared as if it would be never, for it took the better part of two hours to get Mishka into the box.

Mr. O'Rourke tried to lure her in with an ice cream cone. Then Captain Harry Clemente, district director of zoos, entered her cage armed with a pitchfork and attempted to back her into the box. All he had to show for his trouble, however, were some deep gashes in his boots.

Finally O'Rourke and Dr. Harry Nimphius, zoo veterinarian, threw a noosed rope on the cage floor. Then out of bread. Off her guard for once, she started for her morsel. The two men yanked the rope and passed it to Hoey, who pulled the bear by the forepaws into the box.

Mishka clawed at the galvanized flooring of the box and in a few minutes she had ripped up a large piece. It then became a race with time to get him to the new zoo's closure before she could claw her way out. The keepers won, but O'Rourke estimated that if the bear had remained in the box half an hour longer she would have broken it to bits.

Meanwhile Mishka advanced into her new pen the first object that met her eyes was the cat that has made the trip from the old to the other bears. A moment later the cat shot through the bars of the cage and into the same portal of the lion house.

Mishka next turned her attention to Kale Smith, a Malayan sun bear about twice her size who is to be her cage mate. Kale was eating a lollipop and then on her hind paws when Mishka approached. The little fellow made the next move, and it took Kale by surprise in the pit of the stomach. Giving vent to a startled grunt, Kale dropped the lollipop. Mishka grabbed it and ran.

PUBLIC KNOWLEDGE OF INDUSTRY

A chart on lack of knowledge is rather an odd thing but in these days of statistics nothing is to wonder at. It was expressed at the most unusual things. John Darr, public relations counsel of New York, shows that professional and sporting events are the only field of knowledge in which the public is fully alert. Credit for this must be due to the newspapers and to the clubs. The result is a great sport following.

Public knowledge on baking is given as 31.5 per cent of what is possible to know. Ignorance in other areas of knowledge increases at a rapid rate according to the chart, which shows: Brewing 55.5 per cent knowledge, or 46.5 per cent ignorance; glass 52.4 per cent knowledge; radio 27.6 per cent knowledge; railroads and freight service, 24.6 per cent knowledge; rubber, 23.2 per cent knowledge; industrial alcohol, 5.5; per cent knowledge; air conditioning 12.1 per cent knowledge; cement 11 per cent; life insurance 8.8-per cent; gasoline 7.4 per cent; aluminum alloys 7.1 per cent; steel alloys 5.4 per cent.

Who are to blame for this lack of knowledge and this part of the public regarding the romance of industry? Papers which stress crime and sex, and no doubt the industry itself largely. Naturally sport does come to the front, because it has such human reactions, but why the percentage of knowledge of say life insurance business in which nearly everyone is interested financially as the holder of a policy or through the influence of this protection in the financial and commercial world should not be higher is strange.

If the tabulation is correct as regards railways and freight service the situation is something which calls for remedy.

As Mr. Darr observes it is time to put the job of journalism today is to dramatize the amazing facts of technology and to popularize its social implications.

A knowledge is the key to the success of this is paid in the press where scientific articles are given front page prominence, far exceeding that the regular run of news or crime stories.

The area of ignorance is the area on with the demagogue plays.

If John Public can represents the percentage of knowledge and ignorance of the people of the United States and Canada, and he says it is correct, it is time that industry lift its ears and do something like what sport is doing making the public know everything there is to know about it. Or is business too modest and dignified does it allow this lack of public knowledge to interfere with its proper development?

MAN'S DEFT TO CREATURES

Anyone who gives a thought to the service which the mute creatures of the man is the source for cure of human diseases must feel indebted to the dog, the rabbit, the mouse, the monkey, which lose their lives that science may find a home fit to mankind. Mice are infected with disease to provide opportunity for research and investigation, dogs and monkeys lose their lives and rabbits also pay the price.

That the animal should suffer the least pain goes without saying for it is up its customary life if not its entire existence.

There have been stories in the press of late showing how dogs have been "put to death" and survived. This week came a story from Russia of a discovery which may mean great help to mankind in operations. It was the story of the artificial heart dog to incomplete death, that is death in which destruction of the bodily tissue has not begun and of its reviving after ten minutes of this "death" by the injection of the blood from another dog. That is a great discovery but how much pain if any does the reviving dog suffer? That must be left to scientists to say.

Let it be hoped that the poor brutes were in a state in which they were freed from pain.

Man's debt to the lower creation also appears in the horses, the cattle, the sheep and the fowl, the quarry of the hunt, in pheasants, wild ducks and geese, and other fowl, and in deer, moose, and such large game—a debt so great that mankind can never pay this debt, except by making the sufferings of the groaning creation as little as possible and abolishing it entirely if possible.

Man should not be too proud as he surveys the steps by which he keeps in health. How much of civilization is borne by the bodies of what man calls "the lower creation!"

THE EVENING STAR

The sunset hour was calm and still,
We watched the flaming sky,
Till far beyond the western hill
The crimson glow did die.
Then cloudlets formed, smoke-grey and blue,
Across the horizon vast,
While twilight shadows darker grew
And darkness followed fast.

And then from out the tangled cloud
The evening star shone bright,
And sent its ray, with hope endowed,
Through the calm summer night;
So when the shadows o'er us loom
In life's deep sorrow's night,
May hope's bright star-shine pierce the gloom
With its effulgence bright.

THE TREKKERS WHO MARCHED SO GAILY OUT OF BELLEVILLE, Ottawa bound, singing "Hold the Fort for I am Coming", have been heard at Ottawa and Belleville alike wondering whether they'll have to walk back home or whether the City of Ottawa will be so glad to get rid of them that transportation will be supplied. It was a great adventure while it lasted but to be stranded several hundred miles from home in a hostile country and to have to walk back from the homes where labor is at a premium and even the dogs hate the smell of tramps who will not work is not so good.

ALCOHOL AND GASOLENE WILL NOT MIX any more now than when the horseless buggy first appeared. Science on the one hands to the terror of all animal life. Motorists who can take a few drinks and drive as good as ever, so they think, had their illusions shattered by the decisions of a committee of medical men in England, representing the British Medical Association, which investigated motor accidents in connection with the intoxicating liquor. The conclusion arrived at was that the smallest amount of liquor consumed by the driver was dangerous. So, when the old hands of the British Medical Association, in a country noted for centuries for carrying liquor well, decided that the smallest amount of liquor in a motor car driver is dangerous, it is time to sit up and take notice. Perhaps time will come when the law will make drinking while driving a capital punishment.

ABE LYMAN, orchestra leader, and ace radio entertainer, has been threatened with all kind of nasty things if he does not turn over $10,000 to some unknown who thinks Abe has too much money. Abe says that, inasmuch as he drove a taxi in Chicago and looped all the cops in there were there, he would like to meet the guy who thinks he is good enough to take ten grand away from him without a struggle for it. That's the worst of having money, there's always somebody who thinks he needs it worse than you do, but is not willing to work very hard forit.

HAVE YOU HEARD THESE OTERO'S PEARLS

A glamorous figure of the last century was La Belle Otero, whose jewels and lovers were the cause of much wonder and envy. When she appeared in Berlin a great deal of publicity was made out of her pearls which were deposited in the vaults of a bank during the daytime. At the same theatre was another dancer.

Pearls, however, were at the top of the bill. One night while Otero was on the stage a string of pearls broke. The performance was stopped while the jewels were collected and counted. Later this other artist made her appearance and began her turn, when suddenly she stopped, picked up, or pretended to pick up, what were supposed to be one of Otero's pearls, bit it in two, and tossed the pieces to the audience.

The fight that followed is still fresh in the mind of some of the Berliners of the show world.

REVOLT IN THE DESERT

by T. E. LAWRENCE

Had news it must have been, for three two-seaters, and four scouts and an old yellow-bellied Bristrone came up in echelon formation, and circled over us, dropping bombs or diving on us with machine-guns. The Hunt put his Hotchkiss gunners in the rock cranies, and settled back at them. Feast ranked up his four mountain guns, and let fly some optimistic shrapnel. This disturbed the enemy, who circled off, and came back much higher. Then all became monotonous.

We scattered out the troops and camels, while the Arabs also scattered themselves. To open into the thinned target was our only hope of safety, as the plain had not overhead cover for a rabbit; and our machine-guns had no more than what thousands of men we had, to stand on the hill-top looking at these two rolling square miles, literally spread with men and animals, and bursting out irregularly with light silent dust-clouds where bombs dropped (seemingly quite apart from their thunder) or with sprays of bullets. Meanwhile our gun-groups lashed down.

Things looked unbounded hot, but the Egyptians went on working as methodically as they had eaten, sniping with rifle and machine-gun. Feats and one of his officers lit a little series in the dry, dead stalks of gunccotton in a tulip-charge were not enough to make a showy explosion, and the aeroplanes seemed not to see what was going on: so kept their old line, and their particularity with bombs; and as the demolition proceeded, the parts nearest grazing of the danger area into the quiet landscape to the north. We began to see enemies in the degradation of the telegraph. In virgin parts its poles stood trim, fitted in their holes, but behind Peaks they leaned and tottered, some of the wire.

Nuri Said, Joyce and myself met in council, and pondered the use as the Karmic section of the Palestine line to top off our cultivation of the Damascus-Medina Railway. In view of the reflected opposition, there we must take nearly all our men, which seemed hardly wise under such constant aerial observation. We could not blow bombs might hurt us badly on the camels, under the open plain; and, for another, Feats's demolition party would be at the mercy of Turks if the Turks pushed up the courage to rally. For the moment they were quiet, but time might make them brave.

While we hesitated, things were marvellously solved. Junior, the pilot of the R. E. 12 machine, now alone at Azrak, had heard from the Arabs that Murphy of the enemy machines about Deraa, and in his own mind decided to take the United Fighter's place, and to carry out the air programme. So when things were at their thickest with us he suddenly sailed into the arena.

We watched with mixed feelings for his hopelessly old-fashioned machine made him cold meat for any one of the enemy scouts or two-seaters, but at first he astonished them, as he rallied in with his two guns. They scattered for a careful look at this unexpected opponent. He flew westward across the line, and they went after him in their twos and threes, the weakness of aircraft for a hostile machine-gunner important the ground targets.

We were left, in parties, since Nuri caught at the lull to collect three hundred and fifty regulars, and the Feisal and Nasir, and hurried them over the saddle behind Tell Arar, on the first stage of their march on Deraa. The aeroplanes gave us a half-hour's law while they refilled, and returned in the lessened numbers by the mound, now like a scattered group of ants, along every slope and hollow across the stubble westward. Immediately Feisal and I split our appearance from the air, also the groups of his tall with camels and thirteen great saddle-high about it in great fields.

We were not disappointed after the soldiers, and half an hour later I was standing with Nuri Said's men, we might get to Meserib before the others, when again we heard the aeroplanes. Nuri Said's face was astonishment. Junior reappeared, followed by the enemy machines, three sides by enemy machines, spitting bullets. He was twisting and turning, and shooting back. The Turkish very numbers hindered them, and for the time affair could have only one ending.

In the faint hope that he might get away, Nuri Said ordered down the railway where was a strip of ground, but no machine-gun. Every one helped to clear it at speed, while Junior was being driven in to earth in a nose-dive sage to say his petrol was finished. We covered inevitably for five minutes, and then put off a landing signal. He dived at it, but as he did so the wind flawed and he fell across at a sharp angle. The clearing was not long enough for him. He took ground beautifully, but the wind pulled across once more. He under-carriage went, and the plane turned over in the rough.

We rushed up to rescue, but Junior was out, with no more hurt than a cut on the chin. He took off his Lewis gun, and the Arabs and the drums of their ammunition for them. We threw everything into Young's Ford, fed, as one of the Turkish two-seaters dived viciously and dropped a bomb by the road.

Junior five minutes later was asking for another job. Joyce gave him a Ford for himself, and he ran boldly over the Mesmiyeh Railway and blew a gap in the rails there, before the Turks saw him. They found such was the case, and opened on him with their guns, but he rallied away again in his Ford, unhurt for the third time.

My bodyguard waited in two long lines on the hillside. Joyce was leaving at Tell Arar as covering force, with a detachment of Nuri Said's men, the Rualla, the Ghurkas and the cars; while we slipped across to break the Palestine Railway. My party would look like Bedouins, so I determined to ride openly into Mesereib by the quickest course, for we were very late. Unfortunately they drew enemy attention. An aeroplane crawled over us, dropping bombs. The first fell right among the fourth into our midst. Two of my men went down. Their camels, in bleeding masses, struggled on the ground. The men had not a scratch, and scrambled up behind the other members of the party soldiers left alive.

We opened out and rode proudly, knowing the ground by heart, checking only to tell the young soldiers about it. Presently we saw the first aitot from every village to help us. They were very willing, but our guns had rested so long on the brown leanness of desert men that these gay villages lack with their flushed faces, clustering hair, and plump pale arms and legs seemed like girls. They had filled up their gowns above the knee for fast work and the more active ones bridled in through the fields, chaffing back my veterans.

When we reached Mesereib, Durzi Ibn Dughmi met us, with news that Nuri Said's soldiers were in the outskirts back. We watered our camels and drank deeply ourselves, for it was very hot and the fight was not ended. Then from behind the old fort we looked out on the plain, and saw movement in the French railway station.

None of the white-legged fellows told us that the Turks held it in force. However, the approaches were too tempting. Abdulla led our charge; for my days of adventure were over, with my dysentery, an excuse that my skin must kept for my justifying occasional bathing. I wanted to enter Damascus. This task was too easy. Abdulla found grain, and we spent the night with body of weapons, horses, ornaments. These excited my hangers-on. New adherents came running across the grass, like flies to honey. Talal arrived at his constant gallop. We passed the stream and walked together up the far bank knee-deep in weeds till we saw the Turkish station three hundred yards in front. We might capture it just before attacking the great bridge below Tell el Shehab. Talal advanced cautiously. Turks showed themselves to right and left. "It's all right," said he, "I know the Salahmasher" and when we were two hundred yards away, twenty Turks in the fighting valley at us. We dropped unhurt into the weeds (nearly all of them thistles), found each man a target, and fired steadily.

My men heard him, or the shots, and came streaming up from the river but we returned them, fearing a misdirection on the station buildings. Nuri Said was due. He arrived with Nasir, and we continued the business. Nuri pointed out that delay at Mesereib might lose us the bridge, a greater objective. I agreed, but thought this bird in hand might suffice, since Feisal's main line demolition would stand for a week, and the week's end would be a new situation.

So Feisal unfolded his willing men and pushed in a few pounds of point blank high explosive. Under their cover, with our twenty machine-guns making a roof over Nuri Said's men, we rushed forward, gloved and spurred, the Arabs against the border of the forty soldiers left alive.

Upon this most rich station hundreds of Haurani peasants hurled themselves in frenzy upon Turks. Men, women and children fought with knives over every scrap. Doors and windows, door-frames and window-frames, even steps of the stairs were carried off. One hopeful blew in the safe and found postage stamps and nothing else. I smashed open the long range of wagons in the siding, to find all Turkish Army Headquarters stored and ready for the demolition. The Turks' hopeless lack of initiative made their army a "directed" one, and that top directed was in the telegraphs we went for transmission of them into a headquarters mob. After the telegraph we blew in the points and planted bulips, not very many of them enough to armour. While we worked a light engine came down from the line and a few shots and a bang and dust clouds of our tulips perturbed it. It withdrew discreetly. Later we replaced the tulips.

Among the captured rolling-stock on platform trucks were two Rolls-Royce armoured with delicacies for some German canteen. The Arabs, distrusting tins and bottles, had destroyed nearly everything, but we got some soup and meat, and later Nuri Said gave us bottled asparagus. He had found an Arab printing open the case and had opened "pot-bonne" to him to hover when the contents came to light. The peasant spat and dropped it, and Nuri quickly stuffed all he could into his saddle-bags.

The lorries had large petrol tanks. Beyond them were some trucks of firewood. We set the whole afire at sunset, when the plundering was finished, and the troops and tribesmen had ridden back to their ash grass by the outlet from the lake.

Wild ducks were offered for sale on the market today at 40 per pair.

In the list of successful candidates in the first class professional examinations held at Toronto recently, we find the name of Mr. Harry Bawley of the Belleville High School.

Mr. C. B. Young of Messrs. Clute and Williams office; Mr. Wright of the office of Mr. Geo. H. McLaughlin, Mr. Cunningham of Messrs. Flint and Sherry's office, and Mr. Rogers of Messrs. Bleecker and Northrup's office will leave for Toronto tomorrow to attend their first examinations in law.

A match race for $10.00 a side is to be run on the driving park in the near future between Mr. John Seall's chestnut gelding "Hero" and Mr. Jas. Herring's chestnut mare, "Nell." Both are mile heats, best two in three.

Maple Leaf Touring Party Will be Welcomed to City

Country, District and Annual Fair At Belleville Will be Visited

Members of the city council, the Belleville Chamber of Commerce and citizens in general are preparing this week to welcome the day and visit of the Maple Leaf Tour Party from London, England, now engaged in an extensive tour of the Province of Ontario and expected to arrive in Belleville on the afternoon of Wednesday, August 28.

The visit to this city will be the second one by the party and will contain many who were included on the last trip one year ago. A civic welcome in every Ontario and Quebec municipality visited has been extended the prominent and influential visitors, a considerable body of whom are chief buyers and representatives of the leading wholesale houses in the Isles.

Met at C. N. Depot

Arriving from the city of Peterboro, the visitors are expected to enter Belleville at the north station on the C.N.R. train on Wednesday afternoon. They will be met on the station by Mayor Geo. Otto and members of the city council, who will extend the official welcome, and from then on will be the guests of the city council and the local Chamber of Commerce. From the station they will be taken to the Hotel Quinte where during the evening will be spent in much-needed rest.

At nine o'clock on Thursday morning several cars, many of which will be loaned by private citizens will transport the visitors on a sight-seeing trip through the immediate district during which the cheese factories and other commercial factories will be visited in order that members of the party may gain first hand knowledge of Canadian manufacture and production. In the afternoon the Belleville Fair may be visited. Tentative plans call for a banquet in the Armories at Hotel Quinte. The party is expected to leave this city in the afternoon of Thursday when similar arrangements have been made for their departure.

Welcome to Visitors Coming

A request for assistance in the matter of entertaining the visitors is being made by Mayor Otto, that will also be needed and registration of those offered may be made at the office of the city clerk, City Hall.

Included among those in the party will be, Mr. R. W. Holden, director of R. Holden, Ltd., wholesale provision merchants and manufacturers of Dairycoe, and Mr. Holden as ex-president of the Darwen Grocers' Association.

Mr. Charles Innes, of Hunsworth, Birmingham, past vice president of the Bakers' Association and chairman of the Bakers' Federation Publication Committee who is primarily interested in the making of bread and flour in this country.

180-LB TEACHER CANNOT REDUCE

Riding, Hiking and Tennis Failing, Finally, Will Push Appeal

New York, Aug. 23—Miss Rose Freistater, the 180-pound school teacher to whom a Boston, Mass. dietist said recently that she was overweight, has put her appeal in the hand of an attorney, to become a "normal" weight, it was learned today. Mr. Harry H. Rs Arthur M. Mabel and he expects to win for his client either on a reconsideration by the board of examiners or on direct appeal to Dr. Frank P. Graves, State Commissioner of Education.

Miss Freistater, giving "no appearance of excessive stoutness," according to Mr. Mabel, talked matters over with him at his office in Mondays. She explained that she had been trying to reduce by horseback riding, hiking and tennis at Ithaca, N.Y., where she was enrolled in a field course in the Cornell Summer School. But her weight was still 180 pounds.

"She is sturdy, solidly built girl and it would be dangerous to her health to try to reduce," Mr. Mabel commented.

He intends to prove that the examiners can set no arbitrary weight for a prospective teacher and to show that they based the ruling on Miss Freistater on charts of life probability such as are used by insurance companies. Those charts, he said, do not give a fair basis for instead, quoting Miss Freistater as saying that family was "rugged individualists" and that she was careful in her choice of food and shunned the night club life.

He showed a letter from George C. Mann, director of the laboratory department of James Monroe High School, highly praising Miss Freistater's work there for the last three years as a substitute teacher. The commissioner, however, has approved by Dr. Harry E. Hein, the medical examiner.

"It is with a distinct sense of satisfaction that I am able to report favorably on your petition for work by which she may be assigned to the position," Dr. Hein said. "His views on the subject are that all who are overfat are overfed as well as the horses she is certain she deserves to be sent out to pull the Old Davidson Avenue, the Bronx.

WEEKLY BUDGET FROM ROSSMORE

Rossmore, Aug. 23—Miss Maude Ash and family spent the past week with Mrs R. Post.

LATE JOHN N. PLUMPTON
(Contributed)

Many friends in this district were very sorry to hear of the death of John Nelson Plumpton, late of Tabelford, on Sunday, August 18th, 1935.

Mr. Plumpton, who was in his 71st year, was for many years manager of the Campbellford Branch of the British American Oil Co., and old-timers will remember that he drove the Frankford to Belleville stage over forty years ago.

He was a staunch follower of the Liberal party, giving freely of his time and energy. Among those present at his funeral were the Hon. Nelson Parliament, and Mr. H. McCarr, M.P.P., for Northumberland.

Left to mourn are his widow, Mrs. Ruth Montgomery Plumpton; four daughter, Mrs. Lilian Craig, Brighton, Mrs. Fred Haig, Campbellford, Mrs. Fred Stettnkraus, Peterboro, Mrs. Earle Craighead, Campbellford; one son, Mr. Ralph N. Plumpton, Belleville, Mr. Gerald Plumpton, Belleville; two sisters, Mrs. Ella Palmateer, Morganston, Mrs. Harry Carr, Morganston; and one brother, Mr. Dave Plumpton, Codrington.

The funeral service was held on Tuesday, August 20th, 1935, at Codrington United Church and was conducted by Rev. Mr. Boyer, Harold R. Neal, of Campbellford. Interment was made in the family plot at McPhail's cemetery, Wooler.

The bearers were: B. D. Morden, P. A. Morgan, W. H. Gilmore, D. A. Carew, O. H. Jones, H. N. Carr.

PUNTS

Again the Duke Smith earned Jobs crashed record time on the Bay of Quinte courses during Wednesday's regatta, when she set up a time of 1.33.15 for the course. A stiff breeze enabled all boats to make good time in their respective races, the competing in Class with the John were the Anne C. and the After You.

In Class Allegro won with a time of 1.34.32, defeating the Prestige.

In the 16-foot class one accident marred the race when the Scottish became disabled at the course. In this race the C. Serpent defeated the Spray with a time of 1.10.30.

Those competing in C Class with the Nellie Dean and the Trix defeated both with a time of 31.20. The Nellie Dean again showed a marked improvement in Class defeating the Romeo and the Wimpy in the time of 1.11.20.

Flight class boats followed closely with the Eagle defeating the Wanda in a time of 1.12.00.

In J Class the Aloha defeated the Marina with a time of 1.38.15.

All races were keenly contested and admired by a fairly large crowd.

Described as "the grand old man of Greek politics", he took office after Ex-King George II fled the country in December, 1922. During the first half of 1926 the republic was established and the new constitution was passed. He held office until 1926 when he retired.

BARKERS TO CRY AT FAIR MIDWAY

Touted City of Illusion Will Rise on Fair Grounds

"Yi-yi-yi-yi! Hey Hey Hey! Only"

Will the banner proclaim to the world to see the living marvels of the age!"

"Step right up, folks, and see the wonders of the midway tent in which may be seen those curious animal and human freaks of a world apart.

Above his head flap the flamboyant banners, garish and intriguing in their paint of gold and red and dazzling blue. A small charmer's flute shrills waiftly; lamentations bugle and the vicious music from a nearby tent rattles the tympanums of a sight seeing parade-goed crowd.

"Hey-hay" Only a dime to see the world's rarest wonders."

Crowds push and squirm and shove. Pop corn pops, hot dogs and hamburgers sizzle and fry; peanut shells whistle and their tiny shrill is lost in the brassy blare of never ceasing carousel and the raucous shouting of the medicine man who thumps his product with brassy fist in front of his admiring circle.

The latter has come to town. To be more precise, he will come to town some time on Monday, August 26, when the Belleville Exhibition and will go under cover at the Fair Grounds for the four days of the Great Belleville Fair during August 27, 28, 29 and 30.

A tented city of illusions, games, novelties and rides — a community of fun and frolic, a Saturday world of toil and worry. A canvas covered Coney Island where sights, strange noises, frivolity and fun. It will be a Midway, Belleville Belleville Fair officials, Belleville Amusement Company, one of the largest midway companies in Canada. It will contain all the latest merry-go-rounds, ferris wheels, novelties and games. For four merry days and four merrier nights, Belleville citizens and those from within a wide area in this district will be able to forget their troubles in the entertaining right in their own backyard. The Midway will be a place where perfect fun is being able to get this City Company to come here" declared Col. Fred Ponton, Mr. Pinkston and W. Fairbairn, in unison, members of the executive committee. "The company is well known and is acting for the Fair. What's a fair without a midway, a good one!

Head is Bumped Fleeing from Fire

False Bay Beach, N.B., Aug. 23—(CP) First human toll of Maritime Canada's disastrous forest fires was reported yesterday when 84-year-old William Boutilier died of injuries he suffered when flames swept over the village of Wadden's Cove two days ago.

The near-centenarian died at the home of George Wadden here when he fell down a flight of stairs in a desperate dash through the doomed village in a blazing automobile. His head had struck against the top of the speeding car as it bounced over a bridge on the way to the beach, where boats were waiting to carry away the village's people.

MOTHER OF THREE HELD AS BURGLAR

Accused of Obtaining Keys To Woman Friend's Home

New York, Aug. 29—An involved plan whereby a prominent uptown architect took a woman friend of $1,800 in jewelry and other valuables was disclosed when Mrs. Antonia Ranola, 37-year-old mother of three children, of 2323 Davidson Avenue, the Bronx, was charged with burglary.

Magistrate Thomas A. Aurelio, in Bronx Magistrate's Court, held both Mrs. Ranola and Louis Placente, 38, of 320 East 169th Street, the Bronx, who was charged with receiving stolen goods, in $1,000 bail each for a hearing.

Last Friday, according to detectives, Mrs. Ranola was visited in her home by Mrs. Amelia Werner, a friend, who flew a few blocks away at 2,479 University Avenue.

During their conversation Mrs. Werner remarked that her husband was home on a vacation from his work as a basement house inspector and also mentioned that she was going shopping a few minutes later. Mrs. Ranola mentioned that she needed cream and Mrs. Werner volunteered to go to the store and get it for her. As Mrs. Werner went out on this errand she left her purse, and Mrs. Ranola removed her keys from it, according to detectives. Then Mrs. Ranola telegraphed to Mr. Werner to report back to work, so that the apartment would be unoccupied, the detectives said.

Mr. Werner discovered that the telegram was a hoax, but, thinking nothing of it, went to a ball game. Meanwhile, Mrs. Ranola entered the Werner apartment, chopped a small steel safe in newspapers and started carting off its contents to the police. On her way she met Mrs. Werner, who helped her carry the "heavy package."

A neighborhood taxi driver, however, noticed an unusual cab in front of Mrs. Ranola's house, and notified down the street. With this lead the detectives found the driver who remembered having the young woman as a passenger from the University Avenue address to that on Davidson Avenue.

With Mrs. Ranola and Placente, who is accused of having helped her to open the safe and of taking part of the loot, made full confessions, according to the detectives. Both pleaded not guilty, however.

STYLES REVIVE SCULPTURED LINE

Fashion Experts Say The Trend is To Rich Colors

New York, Aug. 29.—Fully 100 stylists and buyers were among 518 first-class passengers who arrived from France on the Normandie. It was the general opinion among the fashionable experts that the Fall and Winter styles for evening wear for women would take on the effect of Roman and Grecian drapings or what is called sculptured lines, and that the colors would be rich reds, blues, purples, browns and green of the Italian renaissance.

David Nemerov, exclusive viis president of Lanvin, who returned on the Normandie from Paris where he had surveyed the styling of the 1930 collections for Fall and Winter, said:

"The collections are divided into two definite categories for duy in Paris has gone dramatic, done with sobriness and stripped of exuberance of the Twenties, undoubtedly the uncertain political temper of the Continent has forced the couturiers to adopt patriotism as their keynote of the season, therefore, while the utter simplicity of line and fabric has been maintained, it has been trimmed militaristic.

"In evening the mode, on the other hand, is glamorous, leans to royalty, all the splendor and pomp extends in through regal elegance, rich fabrics.

"The afternoon dress is simple, neither extreme nor eccentric skirts definitely but not drastically shorter, the waist line a little lower, high necks cut away and sleeves straightened by a militaristic touch."

He said the fabrics for afternoon were light-weight wool with silks playing a poor second; for evening, a legend of colorful fabrics with the velvets dominating. Persian is by far the outstanding fur of the day, Mr. Nemerov said. Madame Lilly Dache, millinery stylist, said that the vogue would be for the Fall and Winter would be multi-colored, the hats decorated with pompoms and feathers.

BAY OF QUINTE W. I.

The monthly meeting of the Bay of Quinte W. I. was held at the home of Mrs. James Sandercock on Wednesday, August 14th, 1930, and was opened by the Opening Ode and followed by the Lord's Prayer. The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved. The roll call was read and answered by a recipe and then the business was closed.

Mrs. Green gave a paper on Canadian Authors. Miss Margaret Green gave a reading and Miss Betty Paterson gave a recitation. The meeting closed with the National Anthem.

A dainty lunch was served and a social half hour was spent.

JACK MINER HAS TROUBLE WITH HAWKS

Kingsville, Ont., Aug. 28 (CP) — Seventy-year-old Jack Miner had his troubles added to yesterday when it was found there was a heavy migration of marsh hawks passing through the province, many invading his bird sanctuary here.

The hawks are chasing the crow bird Rie at the sanctuary and Mr. Miner personally guards his charges from daylight to late in the evening. Each hawk kills about one bird, it is said by Canadian Museum, Toronto, where the stomachs will be analyzed and contents noted. The skin specimen is used for scientific purposes.

Advice to the Lovelorn
By Beatrice Fairfax

By Beatrice Fairfax
Famous Authority On Problems of Love and Marriage
Love-Hungry Victimized
By Matrimonial Bureau
(Copyright, 1930, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

It's not an uncommon thing for letters to come to this column requesting the name of a reliable matrimonial bureau, and the answer is always the same—that there isn't any such animal. Instead, a word of warning goes along, begging people who are thinking of matrimony to make friends through other friends, churches, social clubs and such sources.

Several hideous murders, both in this country and France, have been perpetrated by wretches who availed themselves of trusting people they met through matrimonial agencies.

The latest of these cruel deceptions cropped up recently in the Nation's capital, where Mrs. Minnie D. Allen, 57 years of age, stated that after two months correspondence through a matrimonial bureau she married Marvin C. Allan.

Mr. Allan, in the most unctuous of letters, dialed he was a wealthy California lumberman, but that he had been robbed of all his ready cash on his way to Washington to meet the lady whose letters had so charmed him. His impatience to see her was such he didn't even wait to send to his California bankers for a check, but rushed right along to Washington.

So Mrs. Allan loaned him her savings, $500, and they were married May 15 in Baltimore on her money. When she returned to the Washington home on Meridian Street, Northwest, one morning after having been to a chain store, Mr. Allan and her $300 had vanished. She has not seen him since.

There is no use becoming eloquent over the baseness of a man or woman who will exploit the loneliness of a fellow creature for a few pitiful dollars. And the trustful one, who puts his or her faith in the lucky 7 nothing worse happens than the loss of money, because the victims of those who prey on unsuspecting men and women through matrimonial bureaus are often permitted to marry, under the assumption that "dead men tell no tales".

Two or three years ago the country was most horrified over the most brutal murder of a widow and her two children, which occurred in West Virginia. Becoming acquainted through a matrimonial bureau, the man lured a highly respectable woman and her two children to his home, persuaded her to make over to him her life insurance and a considerable sum of money, then murdered all three of them burying their bodies in the garage. For this crime he was executed.

But the matrimonial bureau racket goes merrily on. On the same day that Mrs Allan lost her $300 savings and her alleged husband, Marvin C. Lumberman, Mrs. Nina B. Nichols, 32 years old, also of Washington, D. C., said she learned that her husband, Thomas J. Nichols, had been released from the penitentiary only two weeks before she married him.

Soon after she returned to her apartment on Massachusetts Avenue, Northwest, Nichols broke in the door, she said. Arrested, he was sentenced to jail, where he will presumably remain for a solitary honeymoon for the next six months.

It's a picture of amusement to law-ridden citizens of these United States that these bureaus are not subject to the least molestation or eviction is not exercised over them.

Cosmetics Add To Happiness Of Women

By HELEN FOLLETT

Splendidly the beauty parade goes on. So, clash the cymbals, and trumpets blow! Thank heaven much sweeter life is now to the average woman than it was in the good old days when beauty was a sin and a s? the age of thirty a femme got a little hidden and clinked up on the shelf.

Cosmetics are a blessing because they keep the skin clean and smooth Manicuring was a happy thought! There was when a nail cleaner and a buffer comprised the outfit for the toilette of the finger ebenite pretty.

Imagine getting though life without soap? Marie Antoinette used en de cologne for face wash, and when she took a bath the whole nation heard it. You should see the funny little tub she used. They've still got it over there.

Kindness helped. Knowledge about food values have improved complexions and digestive systems, even face lifts—have become possible. We have cause for rejoicing.

Falling off the diet wagon is about the best thing fat girls do. They work off enough energy suffer the pangs of hunger, find themselves slender, and then go back to their chocolate eclairs and cake on weekly again.

It is far better to reduce slowly and train the appetite to enjoy nonfattening foods. The plump chubby should have a regular time for outdoor exercise, make it a rule to get up early and to live a life of healthy activity. No bonbons, no cereals flooded with cream, no potatoes or butter. These are the demon cushion builders.

"I LIKE PUFFED RICE FOR SUPPER TOO!"

"WE'RE THE 'PUFFED PALS'—CHILDREN LIKE US BETTER THAN CANDY"

HERE'S an easy way to get children to take an extra piece of puff a day! Serve them Quaker Puffed Wheat or Quaker Puffed Rice for supper as well as breakfast. The double crispness of these natural health grains (puffed 8 times normal size) make them such wonderful milk carriers that children can use a whole glass of milk at them—and relish every spoonful. They're so easy to digest—they're the ideal bedtime snack.

CURTAIN DRAWN UPON WILL ROGERS

Scenes of Heartfelt Homage as Cowboy-Actor-Hero Buried

Los Angeles, Aug. 29.—(AP)—The somber last curtain was drawn to for Will Rogers today.

His stocky, rough-hewn body was sealed away in a crypt at Forest Lawn Memorial-park after services at after a brief ceremony at the Wee Kirk o' the Heather.

It will rest there for a while, until Mrs. Rogers takes it back to Oklahoma to be interred beside the remains of his father and mother in the Chelsea Cemetery.

While the rites were being said the life of the whole community stopped.

Homage to Home-Spun Wit

Business paused. Public offices were closed. More than two score Hollywood film studios were silent. And countless thousands of people participated in one way or another in the homage to the home-spun philosopher-wit.

Starting at 11 o'clock in the morning some 50,000 folk filled past his body. Then in the afternoon, at three at Forest Lawn. An even greater number failed to gain entrance.

But there wasn't enough time.

While a few invited guests went to the private services at the Wee Kirk O' The Heather, 10,000 gathered at the Hollywood Bowl and an unnumbered host assembled in the movie studios and the Community Presbyterian Church in Beverly Hills.

Quotes Flowers

Funeral pieces represented a city or state; many were sent by organizations, from groups of aviators, the Baseball Writers' Association of America, the Grand British Veterans, the Government of Soviet Russia, the Chinese Water Trailers, and "The Men from the Stables". Far less than half could be placed inside the chapel. The entire lawn outside, stretching down the whole side of the hill, was blanketed with them.

More topical of Rogers were the songs sung in his memory.

Songs Sung in Memory

At the private services John Boles, film actor, sang the cowboy-philosopher's favorite "Old Faithful", at the radio studio, James Melton, radio star sang "Home on the Range"; at another, Marion Harris sang "Somewhere over world-wide success. Penetrates the Blue" and "Last Roundup"; and at still another, Nino Martini, celebrated opera singer "Annie Laurie".

The Rev. J. Whitcomb Brougher, former pastor of Crescent Temple Baptist Church, Boston, and Temple Baptist, Los Angeles, delivered the eulogy as he led the service at the Wee Kirk O' the Heather, declaring Rogers as he had known him.

"He has been the one figure in the life of our nation who has drawn to himself the admiration and love of all classes of people," Dr. Brougher said.

The clergyman read Will Rogers own introduction to a book, written by his cowboy-actor friend, Rupert Hughes, was presiding over a public service.

He said "to become a dictator in this country, a man would have to kill Will Rogers or anyone like him. That's why I call him a peacetime soldier."

Belle Davis featured with George Sweat in "Front Page Woman" at the Belle tonight only.

Wood Bowl, another intimate friend of Rogers, the author, Rupert Hughes, was presiding over a public service.

He said "to become a dictator in this country, a man would have to kill Will Rogers or anyone like him. That's why I call him a peacetime soldier."
